Consequences only now being felt

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It began in 1946 with the notion that things were finally looking up, a national euphoria released by the end of depression and war. By 1961, as though some intangible limit had been reached, it was over.

It was a wave of child-bearing, and it produced a generation so large that it was called the Postwar Baby Boom.

Slowly and inexorably this generation rearranged the country: first the maternity wards weren't big enough, then new elementary schools had to be built, later more high schools and colleges. Through sheer numbers the postwar children set new standards, rediscovering bicycles and baggy pants, marching on Washington and retreating to Vermont, flooding colleges and then flogging them as irrelevant.

This crowd of people, today 16 to 31, shows up in double digit unemployment rates for teenagers, the housing crunch, the crime rate, debate over a later retirement age, doctors of philosophy driving taxicabs.

"In the past five years we have come to recognize much more fully the scope of this baby boom," says Peter Morrison, a population analyst with the Rand Corp. "Demographers are discovering that its effects run far deeper than we recognized.

The baby boom was an interruption of the gradual graying of America. Sixty million babies were born in the 15 boom years from 1946 to 1961. In the preceding 15 years, only 40 million had been born, and in the 15 years after 1961 just under 54 million.

Attitudes of this generation toward itself and the world were molded by unique events. It was the first generation to grow up with the television, the transistor and the polio vaccine, the first to sit in the family room and watch men walk on the moon.

Just as important is the way it developed great expectations, nourished by education and prosperity, then saw them trammeled in its constant elbowing for position. There were too many people expecting too much.

"By reason of their experience, this generation is much more sophisticated, cynical, much more willing to challenge traditions, more willing to accept changes," says Philip Houser, director of the Population Research Center at the University of Chicago. "We may be in for some basic changes that this generation will insist upon."

The postwar generation already is carrying into its middle-aged years new ideas about family life, the value of work, education, leisure time, food and neighborhoods.

'Not too old to have a baby'

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some products of the post World War II baby boom may be contributing to a baby boomlet.

They are women in their early 30s who are deciding to start families. Their child-bearing years are dwindling, their professions are secure, their marriages seem stable and their financial future appears adequate if not rosy.

Postponement helped to contribute to the so-called baby bust — the dramatic drop in the U.S. birth rate in recent years. But there are statistical signs that the birth rate may be on a

Access to water from north at stake in vote

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Approximately 15,000 voters, from Pomona and Claremont to Rowland Heights and Glendora, are expected to go to the polls Tuesday to decide whether this area should have access to more Northern California water.

To distribute the water to its users, the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District says it needs $26 million to build treatment plants, reservoir and pipelines, and another $15 million or more in 10 years to complete the job.

Northern California water is of much higher quality than the supply from the Colorado River and the water drawn from local wells, according to Stan Kawa, general manager of the PVMWD.

"The northern water is already available from the Metropolitan Water District," Kawa explained. "But without the distribution system we can't take it to many of the people in the valley, particularly along the foothills."

Although Northern California water has not been brought here since lastspring because of the current water shortage closer to its source, it has been used in a blend with the Colorado water to supply the Diamond Bar-Walnut-Rowland Heights area.

However, Kawa explained, the southern distribution system is now old and inadequate and needs to be replaced with a much larger system.

The water official said the areawide system is also necessary because of an expected cutback from the Colorado River in the 1980s.

Moreover, La Verne and Claremont are not equipped to receive any northern water, he explained, because they don't have the necessary hookups.

What the district wants to do is build two new distribution systems, one for the north side of the valley and the other for the south, as well as a large reservoir and treatment

Weather

Partly cloudy today and Monday with 20 percent chance of rain this morning decreasing to 10 percent tonight. Not much temperature change. High today in the upper 60s. Low tonight in the mid 50s. High on Monday near 70. Monday sunrise 6:16, sunset 4:53.

Half-inch rain makes autos skiddish

Slightly more than a half inch of rain fell in various parts of the valley Saturday as the season's first storm spawned by a Pacific Northwest cold front, passed through.

Snow showers hit Mt. Baldy and Big Bear above the 8,500 foot level but not enough snow fell to cover brush, spokesmen said.

Scores of minor traffic accidents on surface streets and freeways kept law enforcement agencies busy well after dark after rain began falling shortly after noon. No serious injuries were reported in any traffic mishaps. Worst of the crashes involved an auto which skidded off Carbon Canyon Road south of Chino sending the car into a canyon. No one was injured.

Highway Patrolmen said a semi trailer truck jackknifed on eastbound Pomona Freeway at Peck road during the afternoon blocking three of the four lanes more than an hour.

Spokesmen for Southern California Edison Co. said at least three utility poles caught fire in Alta Loma and the Ontario area as circuits shorted but no outages were reported.

Weather Service spokesmen said the Southland storm was the tail end of a front which dumped much more rain in Oregon, Washington and Northern California. Today it was expected to touch off showers in Southeastern California, Arizona and Mexico .

Forecasters said skies today should be partially cloudy through tomorrow with a high both days of about 70 and an overnight low in the low 50s.

Valley cities reporting rainfall measurements included Claremont with .33 of an inch, La Verne .46, Montclair .19, Mt. Baldy .48, Padua Hills .51 and San Dimas .55.

U.S. offers Park deal for names

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is offering to dismiss the federal indictment against Tongsun Park in exchange for the names of members of Congress who received money from him in the Korean influence-buying scandal.

In a report sent to Congress, the administration confirmed Saturday that the Justice Department would seek dismissal of Park's 36-count indictment in return for his help in the Korean probe.

President Carter said in the report that last Monday the South Korean government sent to the United States "an important new proposal" on the interrogation of Park.

Guy Lombardo dies

HOUSTON (AP) — Famed bandleader Guy Lombardo, whose "Auld Lang Syne" became a New Year's Eve mainstay for nearly a half century, died late Saturday night in Methodist Hospital. He was 75.

Lombardo died off a breathing problem related to the pulmonary artery trouble for which he had been admitted to the hospital on Oct. 27, a hospital spokesman said. The pulmonary artery links the heart to the lungs.

Lombardo had undergone undergoing heart surgery in late September.

GUY LOMBARDO

Lombardo's wife, Lillie Bell, was with him when he died about 9:45 p.m. CST.

Funeral arrangements are pending in Long Island, N.Y.

Lombardo had been listed in critical condition earlier Saturday, although a spokesman said "he seems to be improving a little."

Named Guy Albert Lombardo Jr. at birth, Lombardo started his musical career in 1914, 12 years after he was born in London, Ontario. He formed a band to play at small dances; he was a violinist, but was never to gain fame for playing an instrument.

Lombardo's New Year's Eve performances became a tradition for many Americans on Dec. 31, 1929, when his Royal Canadians first played the tune for a radio audience.

Lombardo was 27, and the band had been formed five years before.

Lombardo and his two brothers, Carmen and Lebert, formed the band in their native Canada and shifted to Cleveland and then Chicago. The youngest brother, Victor, joined the 9-piece band in 1930, and a sister, Rose Marie, sang with the Canadians until her marriage.

For the most part, Lombardo concentrated on avoiding new things. A number of times the bandleader decided to modernize, and each time the band lost some of its following.

So instead of changing with the times, Lombardo watched as sounds from jazz to rock and roll caught the popular imagination. He was dismissed as an anachronism, but the Lombardo sound was still selling records at the time of his death.

Mother, pilot die in wreck

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Heading toward the sky glow of Las Vegas' brightly lighted streets and entertainment palaces, an 8-year-old girl led her dazed older brother to safety over eight miles of rugged desert from an airplane crash that killed their mother and the pilot.

The girl, Rochelle Krumpeck of San Jose, Calif., then told searchers how to find the wreckage of the single-engine Piper Cherokee, which crashed into a hillside about 20 miles from here.

The two killed, who were sitting in the front seats of the craft, were identified as Ruth Krumpeck, 35, and Ron Griffin, 31, both of San Jose. The children had been in the back of the four-seater plane.

"I heard this beeping noise about three times and then I blinked and all of a sudden the next thing I know I look around and Ron was on Randy's lap with his head all bleeding," the youngster told authorities Saturday after the ordeal. "And my mom was on the seat with her face all bleeding. I climbed out the window and I told him (Randy) to climb out the window too."

Rochelle told authorities she helped her 18-year-old brother, Randy, from the wreckage Friday evening and urged him on to Las Vegas because she was concerned about her mother and Griffin.

"We started to walk and then after we walked about halfway, we went to sleep," the youngster said. "Then I said, 'Randy, come on, we've got to go to Las Vegas because Mommy and Ron can die if we don't go there and tell them that they're hurt."

Rochelle then guided her brother, who suffered a slight concussion and lost his glasses in the crash, during the 2½-hour walk across the desert to the nearest road, police reported.

The youngster said she was able to find her way out of the desert because the aura of the bright Las Vegas lights was visible in the skies.

A passing motorist took them to a Las Vegas truckstop and called police. The plane wreckage and the two bodies were found early Saturday.

29th Pilgrim Festival:

10,000 expected at annual affair

About 10,000 guests are expected to crowd the grounds of Pilgrim Place in Claremont when the 29th annual Pilgrim Festival takes place Friday and Saturday.

According to Nell Simmons, personnel coordinator, it takes about 800 volunteers to stage the festival. The 300 residents, many of whom work all year on preparations, are assisted by 500 persons from outside of the retirement community.

Claremont ministers assist members of the McCabe Rest Home Auxiliary at the luncheon to be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. both days.

Claremont Kiwanians are in charge of greeting bus groups arriving from out of town while members of other clubs, churches and community groups are pitching in to help in many ways.

An original, historical pageant, "Pilgrim Triumphant," will be presented at 2 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. The pageant has a cast of 40. All are Pilgrim Place residents except for youngsters from Claremont schools.

The pageant and festival are open to the public free of charge.

All proceeds from sales during the festival will benefit the Pilgrim Place health services. In an effort to improve health care and extend community outreach, the retirement center has embarked on a $2.5 million fund drive for a new Health Services building with 49 beds in three wings.

Carter uses first veto on breeder reactor bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter used his first veto Saturday, rejecting a bill that would have authorized $80 million for a breeder reactor that would produce weapons-grade nuclear material.

Carter said the reactor project, located on the Clinch River in Tennessee, would imperil his effort to stop the spread of nuclear weapons and technology.

The president indicated he would consider impounding funds for the project if his veto is overridden "to ensure that no further unnecessary expenditures on this facility are made."

Carter said the government-industry venture at Oak Ridge, Tenn., designed to demonstrate the feasibility of breeder reactors, would be "technically obsolete and economically unsound."

The bill cleared Congress on Oct. 20, winning 366-52 approval in the House and passage by voice vote in the Senate. It would take 67 votes in the Senate to overturn the veto and 290 in the House.

"There are now on the drawing boards better technologies," said Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's assistant for domestic affairs and policy.

Eizenstat said Carter was confident the House and Senate would sustain the veto.

The measure authorized funding for fiscal 1978, which began Oct. 1, for the Energy Department's nuclear and non-nuclear energy research, development and demonstration projects. New legislation for projects other than the Clinch River project, would have to be passed if the veto is sustained.

Breeder reactors produce more nuclear fuel, plutonium, than they consume. The fuel can be converted for use in atomic bombs and Carter has stated that his efforts to end the project were part of his program to halt the spread of weapons-grade nuclear material.

Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., who sponsored an unsuccessful House amendment to cancel the project, said Carter's veto was "sound on economic, political, scientific, environmental and national security grounds."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho., chairman of the energy research and development subcommittee, said he believed the president's veto was wrong.

"By refusing to build a breeder reactor while other nations proceed to do so, we ... retreat from reality," he said. "Other nations have aready crossed the threshold of the plutonium age."

Carter had to veto the bill Saturday or it would have become law automatically.

Cooper's abilities cited for new post

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The appointment last Tuesday of Ken Cooper as assistant superintendent of business services for the Pomona Unified School District has created considerable unrest and speculation throughout the district.

Cooper, a native Pomonan who resides in Claremont, leaves his post as director of pupil personnel to take over the $36,050-a-year job in the business department where he will command some 350 employees.

Following last Tuesday's board meeting, considerable ire was raised between trustees when two of them, Eugene Whitlock and Frances Livingston, left the meeting after the 3-1-1 vote approving Cooper's appointment.

Whitlock had voted no. Mrs. Livingston had abstained.

While considerable questions exist about Cooper's skill and experience in dealing with business matters, there has been unilateral praise for his ability as an administrator from trustees, fellow administrators and even the Associated Pomona Teachers (APT).

As the months have passed since the retirement of former business superintendent Lynn Rountree, the appointment of his successor has more and more become a political football. Some trustees have claimed that one board member applied for the job himself. Others said that some trustees, nursing political ambitions, wished to see the job filled as quickly as possible.

In recommending Cooper to the board Tuesday night, District Supt. Charles Carpenter admitted that Cooper did not have certain "desirable" credentials but after the meeting said Cooper's "proven administrative skills will certainly overcome any lack he might have in direct experiences in business services.

"The dispatch with which he changed from an outstanding principal to an outstanding director of pupil personnel only shows this."

Carpenter stressed the fact that Cooper has all the "required" qualifications for the job although he may lack some of the "desired" qualifications.

Those voting to support Cooper's appointment were trustees C. J. Mendoza, Don Donnelly and C. Allen Braswell.

Braswell earlier this year introduced a motion calling for all top-level administrative personnel to reside within the district.

2 hunters find body of slain man

Two rabbit hunters Saturday stumbled across a slaying victim in a vineyard just north of Ontario Motor Speedway.

San Bernardino County homicide detectives said the unidentified black man between 20 and 30-years-old, so far is unidentified.

Detectives said the man, dead four to six weeks, was found four rows inside the vineyard off Milliken Avenue near Fourth Avenue. He died of several gunshot wounds in the chest and abdomen, detectives said.

Officers said the man was wearing a distinctive wishbone gold necklace with a pearl affixed to the wishbone.

Circumstamces surrounding the slaying are similar to a case three weeks ago in which a Pomona man was found shot once in the head in a canyon near San Dimas Dam in Bonelli Park. Los Angeles County Sheriff's detectives are handling that case.

Woman found dead of gunshot

Mrs. Mable Metyer, 83, of 1983 W. Ninth St., was found dead at her home Saturday, victim of a gunshot wound in the head, Pomona police said.

Mrs. Metyer, who suffered asthma and heart trouble, recently complained of despondency, according to officers. Police recovered a .38-calbre pistol found next to the victim.

Car plunges 275 feet; driver hurt

West Covina motorist Larry Seeley, 42, suffered a broken leg Saturday when his 4-wheel drive auto plunged 275 feet down a canyon off a dirt road near San Gabriel Dam on Rincon Redbox Road.

San Dimas Sheriff's search and rescue crewmen worked several hours to free Seeley from wreckage and lift him to the road.

He was rushed to Verdugo Hills Hospital in Glendale for emergency treatment and later transferred to Queen of the Valley Hospital in West Covina where his condition was listed as good.

Deputies said Seeley was forced off the narrow dirt road in San Gabriel Mountains when another auto approached head on. He remained inside the tumbling auto as it plunged into the canyon.

plant in high North Claremont elevation that would permit distribution of the Northern California water through gravity flow. Plans also call for the acquisition of a large parcel of land in Tonner Canyon that would eventually be used as another reservoir and treatment plant.

The proposal is a streamlined version of a more elaborate $35 million system which the voters rejected two years ago.

It is supported not only by the district and most of its clients, but also a Citizens' Committee for Water headed by former Pomona City Administrator Fred Sharp. It is opposed by the Glendora and Claremont chapters of the League of Women Voters who insist that it is not needed. The women suggest that the district use the Weymouth treatment plant of the MWD in La Verne, instead, and build a mile-long pipe to the Fulton plant that now supplies water to both Claremont and La Verne.

They claim the Weymouth plant is running far below capacity and could well supply all the water the district needs for the foreseeable future.

The MWD which has been silent on the issue till now, today agreed that its Weymouth plant could supply all the water the valley needed, but agreed with Kawa that hookups would be necessary to serve Claremont and La Verne.

Thomas Patterson, the MWD's superintendent for this area, said the Weymouth plant was currently operating at half of its 400-million-gallon capacity because demand for water has slackened off since last summer. But even in the top summer months, he said, the plant could have handled more water.

The women contended that using Weymouth would cost less than building a new treatment plant. Kawa said the cost of pumping the water up 500 feet from that plant to Claremont and La Verne would, in time, be more costly than building the new plant at a higher elevation.

Patterson said the MWD didn't want to get involved in the controversy.

About 15,000 of the district's 124,000 registered voters are expected to go to the pollsTuesday to decide the issue. They will vote at 142 precincts scattered throughout the district which includes Claremont, Pomona, La Verne, San Dimas, Diamond Bar, Walnut, Rowland Heights, Covina, and Glendora.

A simple majority is needed, and the vote will be counted by the staff of Los Angeles County Registrar Leonard Panish at the PVMWD offices at 174 W. McKinley St. in Pomona.

The district office also will be the tabulation center for an election involving the annexation of the Piedmont Mesa area to Claremont, and for those in Walnut who will vote for two directors on the Walnut Valley Water District.

Those who need rides to the polls apparently will not have a difficult time getting them. The LWV offers car service to voters who telephone 624-9457 or 621-2094. The citizens' committee will have rides available for those who call 623-7671 or 622-0923.

Early this year, the birth rate was up six percent over the same period last year. And the National Center for Health Statistics has reported that the rate of first births to women 30-34 was up to 8.1 per thousand in 1975, from 7.3 per thousand in 1970.

The subject is explored in a new book, "You're Not Too Old to Have a Baby," (Farrar Straus Giroux), by Jane Price, a research associate in the East Asian Institute at Columbia University who waited until she was nearly 32 to have her first child. Much of the book is devoted to the medical aspects of late pregnancy.

"Medically, the risks of waiting to have children past the biological prime have been exaggerated," she writes. "With recent advances in genetics and obstetrics, most mothers over 30, 35, and 40 have an excellent chance of bearing a healthy child."

It is still true that older parents have a statistically greater chance of having a child with birth defects, especially a child with mongolism, known medically as Down's syndrome.

Ms. Price notes that the chances of having a mongoloid baby are one in 2,500 for a mother under 20, about one in 1,500 for a mother in her 20s, and for mothers 30 to 34 about one in 850. But for mothers 35 to 39 the chances climb to one in 280 and for the woman between 40 and 44 one in 100 and after 44 to one in 40.

The author, however, says that a medical procedure called amniocentesis can detect such defects shortly after conception so the woman can have an abortion.

One section of the new center will be for mentally confused persons and will be open to the community. This is the first such facility exclusively for persons past 65 in Southern California. The fund drive is half-way toward its goal. Pilgrim Place residents, all retired ministers, missionaries, YWCA and YMCA workers or teachers of religion, have donated over $600,000 to the fund from their limited incomes.

A motorized "Mayflower-on-wheels" will take guests on tours of the 32 landscaped acres of independent homes and gardens.

The pageant is held on an outdoor stage set amid crimson liquid amber and golden ginko trees.

Children will be entertained at a Pilgrim puppet show. Or they may participate in a "glue-in," using chips of wood to create anything their imagination can produce.

Among the many items available at the festival will be a 14-foot handcrafted Sportabout boat made by the late Lucius Barrows. Sealed bids for the nearly new boat will be received until 3 p.m. on Saturday.

The Rev. Rollo E. Dunman, who moved to Pilgrim Place a year ago and contributed English toffee to the 1976 festival, won the honor of being the candy chairman with his expertise.

Under his guidance, more than 500 pounds of homemade candy and 100 pounds of sugared grapefruit peel have been prepared.

Retired Col. Harry M. Grissard, a resident of Mt. San Antonio Gardens, is responsible for the more than 500 chrysanthemum trees now in full bloom for the festival sale.

Members of the festival executive committee include Doris Roth, general chairman, Marjorie D. Mathews, G. Ross Thomas, Harry D. Brown, Hazel F. Shank, Dunham, Gertrude Feely, Mrs. Simmons, Frances Elwell, E. Alexander Gray, Mrs. Sayre, Dorothea Lemon and Lydia Flucke.

Further information about the festival may be secured from the Administration Office, 624-5006.

ELA auto insurance rates down in experiment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An eleventh-month campaign by the United Neighborhoods Organization has paid off in reduced car insurance rates for residents of East Los Angeles.

Under an experimental agreement between the UNO and a Los Angeles insurance firm, the experimental rate reductions for the predominantly Mexican-American area will begin Jan. 1.

Josephs said Friday that his company will slice premiums from 5 to 9 percent, using a "zip code sensitive" rate structure enabling it to retain its current profit margin.

Josephs told a packed UNO meeting at East Los Angeles College that the system will permit premium reductions in areas such as East Los Angeles where actual losses have been lower. At the same time, he said rates will increase in areas of higher losses.

"Our studies have shown this area deserved a lower rate," Josephs said. "We felt it should be lower than Beverly Hills, Central Los Angeles and Hollywood where the losses are higher."

The finest jewelry was probably some ornamental clasp or pin. It may have been used to hold together the skins which clothed prehistoric cavemen, and decorated with a pretty stone for good luck.

Mankind has never ceased to enjoy the beauty of exquisite jewelry. See us for any jewelry need, or when a gift is contemplated.

Obituaries

Harold Brewer

Harold Albert Brewer of 2153 Vallejo Way, Upland, died Thursday in Riverside after suffering an apparent heart attack.

Mr. Brewer was born May 28, 1924 in Oilton, Okla. He lived in Pomona from 1942 to 1957 when he moved to Upland.

He was an operating engineer employed by a Riverside construction firm. He was a Navy veteran of World War II. He was a member of the Upland Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Mr. Brewer was a member of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 12.

Services will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the Upland Ward chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Private burial will be in Pomona Cemetery.

Friends may call at the Stone Funeral Home in Upland Monday from 5 to 9 p.m.

Peter Mosher

Peter W. Mosher of 2717 Arrow Highway, La Verne, died Oct. 30, at Pomona Valley Community Hospital after a two-month illness.

Mr. Mosher was born Sept. 1, 1897 in Grand Rapids, Mich. He came to La Verne in 1962 from Wausau, Wis.

Surviving are his widow, Beatrice E.; three sons, Donald J. of Milwaukee, Wis., and Robert L. and Gerald C., both of Pomona; two sisters, Geraldine Kahn and Olive W., both of Wausau, Wis.; 7 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

Private services were held.

Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona was in charge of arrangements.

Samuel Smith

Samuel E. Smith of 250 W. Artesia St., Pomona, died Thursday night in a local convalescent center.

Mr. Smith was born Oct. 24, 1891 in Dallas County, Mo. He came to California 20 years ago from Borger, Tex. He was a former resident of Woodlake and had lived in Pomona the past month.

Surviving are his widow, Mable L.; a stepson, Harold A. Davis of Pomona; two brothers, Archie of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Virgil of Ponca City, Okla.; and three sisters, Mamie Moser and Zetola Coats, both of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Zenola Hammans of Ponca City, Okla.

Shipment was made to Stroud, Okla., where services will be held and burial made in the Stroud Cemetery.

Odes Gish

Mr. Gish was born Feb. 27, 1889 in Jewell County, Kansas. He had been a resident of Seattle, Wash., for 50 years. He lived in La Verne the last 20 years. He had been a carpenter for many years until his retirement in 1967.

Mr. Gish was a member of the Fellowship Church of the Brethren in La Verne and was an elder and ordained minister in the church.

Surviving are his widow, Florence R.; a son, LeRoy C. of Redwood Valley; a brother, Frank J. of Altamont, Kan.; 5 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren.

Services will be held Monday at 10:30 a.m. in the Fellowship Church of the Brethren, La Verne. The Rev. Vernard Eller, pastor, will officiate.

Burial will be in La Verne Cemetery.

Friends may call at Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona today from 2 to 9 p.m.

James Matthews

He was born Sept. 23, 1901 in Iowa and had resided in Pomona from 1945 to 1955 before moving to Hesperia. He was a Mason, veteran of World War I and retired superintendent for Turner Construction Co.

Survivors include his widow, Sylvia; four daughters, Patricia Collins of St. Peters, Mo., Jacqueline Lawrence of Alta Loma, Theodora Harding of San Diego and Barbara Brown of Ontario; three sons, Michael of San Bernardino, Daniel of Delta Junction, Alaska, and Thomas of Australia; two sisters, Martha Heumes of Mesa, Ariz., and Helen O'Connell of South Bend, Ind.; 22 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Private family services were at Dudley Mortuary in Victorville.

Garnat Penrose

Mr. Penrose was born Nov. 11, 1889, in Australia.

He is survived by one son, James M. of Redlands; one daughter, Lois G. Wymore of Chino; one sister, Hazel; 14 grandchildren and 7 great-grandchildren.

Services will be Monday at 1 p.m. at Rainbow Chapel, Rose Hills Memorial Park, Whittier.

Tiny swimmer makes first

LOS ALAMITOS, Calif. (AP) — Nine-month-old Fred Garcia III has become the youngest person ever to pass the beginner's stage of the Red Cross swimming test in Gretta Andersen's swimming school here.

For his achievement, Fred received Miss Andersen's gold medal from the 1948 Olympics and a Red Cross certification card, which he promptly attempted to eat.

The son of Dr. and Mrs. Fred Garcia blew bubbles, bobbed his head and swam 30 feet. He floated on his back 30 seconds and bounced back up when pushed to the bottom in 5 feet of water. He did all this after only 15 swimming lessons.

The Red Cross test also required that he jump into the pool and swim, but since Fred couldn't walk yet, he just sat on the ledge and fell in.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives, friends & neighbors, for their kindness & sympathy shown us, during our sad bereavement in the loss of our dearly beloved father.

Laboulaye wins star assignment

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Taking up his new assignment as French ambassador to the United States will be a lot like going home for Francois Rene Antoine Lefebvre de Laboulaye.

The sleek, silver-haired diplomat was born in Washington 60 years ago. He returned in time to play wingback for the capital's Landon School football team and still later to send his daughter Claire to public school on Massachusetts Avenue.

"I was always on the sidelines," he recalls of his football career. "I was just too light."

Laboulaye is still slim but he has won the star slot on France's diplomatic roster, just as his diplomat father did before him.

The new ambassador arrives Nov. 5 in Washington — aboard the Concorde — and begins immediately preparing for President Carter's visit here at the end of the month.

Provisional clearance for Concorde landing rights at New York has eliminated a major irritant in Franco-American relations, getting Laboulaye's stay off to a friendly start. His major task as he sees it now is to keep French and American policies in tandem on foreign trade, Africa and human rights.

"There are differences of interests sometimes," he said. "We wouldn't be different nations otherwise. But the public shouldn't understand these differences as a loss of our traditional affinity. We should be able to talk about them as in a family."

Laboulaye and his wife, Antoinette, count a long list of friends in the Washington family, including Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Washington Post owner Katharine Graham.

"Having a sympathetic listener makes getting your message across easier, even if they don't like what you have to say," Laboulaye said in an interview at the Foreign Ministry, where he has been director of political affairs since 1975.

Laboulaye spent his first few years in Washington during World War I, while his father was posted in the French embassy. The elder Laboulaye returned as French ambassador from 1933 to 1937, when Francois was introduced to American-style football at Landon.

The new generation of Laboulaye diplomacy showed up in Washington from 1954 to 1957, when Francois was attached to the French embassy under former Ambassador and Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and Ambassador Herve Alphand.

During that stint, Laboulaye's son also attended Landon.

"That was the occasion for my worst humiliation," recalls the smoothly tailored ambassador. "I took my son to see the headmaster and he said, 'I remember your father well. He was a good student but a terrible football player.' There went a reputation I had cultivated carefully with my son over the years."

The Laboulaye children — two sons and two daughters — are grown and married now.

Between the early years and the new assignment have come posts in Beirut, Moscow and Ottawa and ambassadorships in Rio de Janeiro and Tokyo.

With examples like Alphand — a personal friend of the Kennedys and a social lion in Washington — Laboulaye has tough acts to follow. His immediate predecessor was Jacques Kosciusko Morizet, who is reported to have been tapped as a parliamentary candidate for next March's national elections.

"I want to continue in their line," Laboulaye said. "But you have to be yourself. You can't copy. That's an important thing in this job."

Phillips Ranch report slated

A progress report on building activities in the Phillips Ranch area will be explained to the Pomona City Council Monday at 8 p.m. by an official for Westmore Development Co.

Alvin Lesser, vice-president of the firm which bought the ranch area several years ago, will bring the council up to date on projects such as the building of two reservoirs and future tracts that will occupy the more than 1,000 acres in the area between the Pomona Freeway, the Corona Expressway and the Westmont Hills.

Since the meeting is a council study session, no action will be taken by council members.

Postwar baby boom gives birth to whole new world of problems—

In 1944 Cole Porter's "Don't Fence Me In" was released, and the millions of servicemen who returned the next year seemed to take it as a theme. They moved out into what had been farm fields — where their children would be bigger than the trees they wanted to climb — and built homes with money guaranteed by the GI bill.

The number of marriages jumped from 1.6 million in 1945 to 2.3 million in 1946. The number of births jumped from 2.9 million to 3.4 million.

"The baby boom is probably the first generation raised in middle class affluence, and they have taken it for granted," says Denis Johnston, a demographer in the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. "I was 35 when I first bought an automobile. That's unknown in this generation."

Today, the babies born in 1946 are 31 years old and have formed their own households. "I would argue that they had a shocking experience," Johnston says. The affluence was impossible to sustain."

"Neighborhoods tend to go through life cycles like people," says Dr. Rex Campbell, professor of sociology at the University of Missouri. "Populations tend to age just as houses do, and soon you have an aging neighborhood and finally a declining neighborhood."

Typical is Nassau County, adjoining New York City on Long Island, whose population tripled between 1940 and 1970. Now it is at a standstill. Of several hundred schools in the county, about 30 have been abandoned.

Across the nation, communities that debated higher school taxes in the 1950s to accommodate the baby boom are debating today which schools to close. That's because the baby boom was followed by a rather dramatic "baby bust," an unexpected occurence that magnified the impact of the baby boom.

Demographers supposed that another population surge would happen when the postwar children reached child-bearing age in the 1960s. But it didn't.

The rate at which women were bearing children at the peak of the boom in 1957 — which implied nearly 3.8 births for each woman over her lifetime — was a record for modern times. By 1973 the rate had dropped to 1.9 births per woman.

The nationwide enrollment in elementary and secondary schools rose from 48 million in 1964 to 51 million in 1973, then slipped back to 50 million in 1975. And the National Center for Education Statistics projects that it will drop to 46 million by 1985.

This means difficult decisions not only for school districts but for those of the postwar generation who chose teaching as a career. Nearly half of those who received degrees in 1975 qualifying them to teach and who looked for a job didn't find one, the center estimates.

The same expansion occurred at colleges and universities as the baby boom generation entered. Enrollment rose from 1.5 million in 1952 to 6.3 million in 1972. Not only were there 11.6 million more people of college age in 1972, but the proportion of them going to college had risen from 11 percent to 25 percent, the Census Bureau says.

Because more people were going to college, more people were entering society with high aspirations that often couldn't be satisfied.

"They grew up at a time when education was a royal road to success, they were told," says Dr. Jerald Bachman, a social psychologist at the University of Michigan. "But it simply wasn't possible to deliver on it. It's like telling everybody where the good fishing hole is."

Next year the last of the baby boom group will be at the typical college enrollment age. Each year after, paralleling the declining births in the 1960s, the number of potential college freshmen each year will drop sharply.

"Our colleges are already in trouble," says Fabien Linden, director of research for The Conference Board, a research organization "In fact, their troubles have not yet begun. It will be next year that the demographic trauma of the colleges will really begin to be felt.

"A lot of colleges are going to close. The same thing would happen if people quit drinking milk — a lot of cows would be out of work."

The traditional timetable of going to college, then going to work may be outmoded. It's possible that formal education in the future will continue over a person's lifetime. Colleges are already looking at continuing adult education as a way to blunt the impact of declining births.

"The fighting for grades today is unbelievable," says Dr. Carl Harter, a sociology professor at Tulane University. "You've never seen such competition. There's such a large group of young adults entering the labor force. Some of the troubles of entering young adulthood have been going on long enough that these younger members of the baby boom have been exposed to them."

A decade ago someone who wanted to teach in college picked half a dozen interesting schools and applied, Harter says. Last year, Tulane hired a sociology teacher who had sent out more than 160 applications. "It's an example of the kind of fear, real or imagined, that's around," he adds.

More than 5,000 teen-agers mobbed job centers in New York one day this past summer for a chance at 2,000 jobs. Similar scenes occurred in Chicago and Los Angeles. Behind them is the way the baby boom has flooded the labor force.

At any one time in 1975; 3.6 million people aged 16 to 24 were unable to find jobs, the National Commission for Manpower Policy found. Another 600,000 wanted to work but had become discouraged and quit looking.

"We have paid a substantial price for this condition," Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said this year. "The opportunity to participate in the nation's prosperity — or even to have a job — has been denied a significent segment of the population."

A big part of the expansion in the labor force after 1964, about three-fifths, was due to the tendency of women in the postwar generation to quit the traditional role of housewife and take a job. The proportion of women working outside the home is expected to grow in coming years.

Jane Tillis graduated from Livingston College in New Jersey in 1976 with a degree in women's studies and sociology. She looked for a job all summer, mailing about 200 resumes, sitting through about 50 interviews, without success. The best job a friend of hers with the same degree could find was in an envelope factory.

"It's made me reality-oriented, more practical, less idealistic," Miss Tillis says. She took some secretarial courses and got a job at a university.

As it moves into middle age, the baby boom generation will continue to feel the crowding it is experiencing today. Most people expect to advance in their careers. But the baby boom generation will be trying to squeeze into a fewer number of management jobs, at the same time finding fewer people under them to manage.

"There is a kind of natural ratio of workers to supervisors," says Paul Flaim, chief of special labor force studies at the

Bent coppers in 'Scotland Yard'

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard has a tarnished image.

It is now better known as the home of the bent copper — London slang for the corrupt cop.

One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of a corruption ring.

For the past eight years, since corruption at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a series of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for taking bribes from criminals, and 400 lower-ranking officers have been fired or have resigned.

The London Metropolitan Police, official name for the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversity.

That independence is now in the hands of David McNee, a 51-year-old nicknamed "The Hammer" for his strikes against the underworld. But McNee, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the Yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on . .. and are still serving today."

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives' taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted.

Among the senior officers jailed for up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography racketeer Jim Humphreys; Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 detectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers; Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption network. Moody once headed an investigation into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence.

An internal investigation bureau has been set up to root out crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians.

The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in ... the corruption trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?"

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active.

Baby boom spurs change—

Bureau of Labor Statistics. "When the baby boom reaches 40 years of age, fewer people will be coming up behind.

"You will have more potential chiefs than Indians, because the low birthrate in the '60s."

The oldest members of the postwar generation are today at the age, 25 to 30, when people typically look for their first house.

While the total population grew by 5.3 percent between 1970 and 1976, the 25 to 34 year age group — the first-home buying group — grew by more than 27 percent, the Census Bureau says.

"This year we expect 1.4 million new single-family housing starts," said Bob Sheheen, associate chief economist of the National Association of Homebuilders. "We attribute this to a great extent to the postwar population bulge."

Many young couples can only afford a house if both are working. The association found in a survey last year that 58.5 percent of the first-time buyers of new houses were working couples.

With couples having fewer children or none at all, houses may become smaller, and more couples may choose city life over suburbia.

The Gerber baby food people, whose mashed carrots were spooned into innumerable baby mouths in the 1950s, read the demographics right and decided to diversify as early as 1957. Today the company also sells life insurance in a plan geared to young families.

Baby boom couples are marrying at a later age, having their first child at a later age, planning smaller families, getting divorced more often.

The baby boom generation will have its own troubles with retirement. By 2011, when the first of them turn 65, they'll still be a crowd. The Census Bureau figures that the elderly population will rise from 23 million today to 55 million by the year 2030.

Today, most elderly parents who need constant care still live with their children. And if the postwar generation continues its small-family trend, where will those needing assistance turn?

Serious questions already have been raised about the Social Security system. In the year 2030, the Social Security Administration says, one retired person may draw benefits for every two workers paying for them through taxes.

If the baby boom generation is hobbled by its size, it is also helped: It will wield a large number of votes to influence the course of its retirement. Already the political clout of older citizens is rising, as indicated by the Congressional vote against mandatory retirement.

So far the country has usually reacted with surprise to each new problem created by the baby boom. Planning for such people bulges may well become the emphasis of population study in the future.

There are many reasons why

Our housing prices have skyrocketed

Food, clothing and shelter are three basic needs.

And like seemingly everything else these days, the cost of providing them has gone up faster than many peoples' paychecks.

Food prices have more than doubled in the last decade.

Gasoline, clothing, automobiles and most other consumer goods have likewise jumped in price.

But nowhere, perhaps, has inflation been anymore dramatic than in the area of housing.

Housing prices have skyrocketed in just a few short years.

For most families, providing shelter is the single biggest household expense.

And there are many reasons why.

According to a recent report by the National Association of Builders, land costs alone have gone up an incredible 500 percent in the last 20 years.

Other factors, such as increased labor and materials costs, higher interest rates and government fees have also climbed drastically.

Since 1970, the average price of a home in California has risen from $31,400 to over $61,000.

Greatly increased finance charges over and above the price of the home, rapidly increasing property taxes and other influences have put the price of buying any home, new or used, out of the reach of many families.

But rents, likewise, have climbed in almost the same fashion as mortgage payments.

For those who own their own homes, the problems of housing do not appear as severe as they do to the poor, the young and the elderly, who in some cases are paying as much as half of their total incomes for shelter.

Basically, however, the issues of housing boil down to "supply and demand."

There are simply not enough houses available to those who want them.

House sales and building have been booming in the valley for the last few years.

Ella Ruby, an executive for the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, anticipates that local real estate sales will reach an all-time high in both number of houses sold and total monetary sales this year.

During the first nine-months of 1977, Pomona Valley real estate brokers have sold more than $25 million worth of residential property in Pomona; $17 million in Claremont and $11 million in La Verne.

Although real estate sales have slackened in the last few weeks, brokers don't see signs of much weakening in the demand for housing by area residents.

Pomona Valley Board of Realtors' president Dean Murphy, says the increase in the cost of housing will have to stop somewhere, but he says frankly, "I'm not sure when it's going to happen."

Murphy, who has been in the real estate business since 1971, says today's housing cycle is very unusual. Brokers and housing experts are unsure what to make of the trends in both the new and used housing market.

"To me it doesn't make sense," he said.

Murphy explains that most homebuyers in the Pomona Valley are attracted to the area because homes are still

HOUSING BOOM The cost of housing has risen dramatically in recent years, but so far has not stymied development in much of the valley. Demand for housing in most area cities and communities is still strong amidst one of the largest building booms in valley history.

Searching for a home . . .

Most dream houses are too expensive

Tom and Teri Tondee are like many professional couples.

He works as an engineer's assistant; she, as an elementary school teacher.

They are both young, well educated and look forward to someday settling down and raising a family.

In many ways, the two are luckier than most. They both have good jobs and a combined income that would be considered comfortable by most standards.

Recently, the couple bought their first home, a two-bedroom, modestly priced Spanish-style house in La Verne.

Finding it was not an easy task.

Tom and Teri spent more than a year looking for that "special" house. They looked in Pomona, Chino, Claremont and almost everywhere else in the valley.

"We must have looked at more than 50 houses before we found this one," said Tom.

Most houses were too expensive.

When the Tondees first decided to buy, they set $50,000 as the top price they could afford.

After looking at the prices of new and older homes, however, they became discouraged and decided $50,000 was just not enough to buy the kind of house they had in mind.

"We had to go higher," said Tom. "There just wasn't anything in that price range."

Teri said they had seriously considered buying an older run-down house, but the prices for homes in need of repair were almost as high as prices being asked for new homes.

"We didn't find anything for under $40,000 that didn't need a lot of repairs," she said. "It was really frustrating."

The La Verne home cost them nearly $60,000. It is quite large and spacious (nearly 2,000 square feet) and is located in an older, established neighborhood. The house was built in 1932.

Teri said, "It has a lot of character."

After looking at several new homes throughout the valley, the couple decided a "tract" house just wasn't what they had in mind.

"Besides, they were all too expensive anyway," said Tom.

While families who have owned their own homes for many years are still paying relatively low mortgage payments, the Tondee's, like most young couples, have to struggle to get by, despite their double salary.

"Right now, I couldn't afford to quit work to raise a family," said Teri.

"It's hard for us to save any money," said Tom.

The two say that the high cost of putting a roof over their heads doesn't give them much money to enjoy minor luxuries such as going out to dinner, or to a movie or to buy things for their home.

But, both still feel they are luckier than most, in that they can at least afford the luxury of owning their own home. Many others in similar situations cannot.

"I don't know how other families can do it," said Teri. "It seems to me it would be awfully hard for a young couple just starting out."

The Tondee's say the purchase of their new home has forced them to live on a budget. Even household projects, which they do themselves, can cost a lot of money.

"Unexpected expenses like car repairs and other emergencies just seem to keep cropping up," Tom explained.

"It's really frustrating when both people have to work to afford a home," he said. "We try to keep costs down by doing things ourselves, but even materials are expensive these days."

"We're happy here, though," said Teri. "This is the kind of house we've always wanted. It fits our lifestyle. A new home just wouldn't fit us,"

"And besides," Tom joked, "most of them are just too expensive."

Mapping rapidly 'changing trends' in valley

Stories and photos by Bob Swetnam Jr.

As director of community development for the City of Chino, he has witnessed first-hand the residential development of one of the fastest growing communities in the U.S.

There were only 20,000 residents in Chino during the 1970 U.S. Census. Today the city's population is rapidly approaching the 40,000 mark.

In 1976, despite its relatively small population, Chino had more building activity than all but 11 cities throughout Southern California.

"We've seen a rapid increase in the rate of development in Chino and the rest of the West End during the last few years," Chiniaeff says.

The director attributes the local building boom to the fact that land — and thus housing — is considerably cheaper in the valley than land sold in Orange County or more urbanized areas of Los Angeles County.

"Land in Orange County generally sells for more than $100,000 an acre. In Chino it costs about $30,000 an acre.

"The homebuyer figures he can get more house for his money by buying in our area," he says. "He figures it's worth driving the extra 20 to 30 miles a day to work in Orange or Los Angeles counties where the houses are much more expensive."

Houses in the valley are generally $10,000 to $20,000 cheaper than those sold in the more urbanized centers, says Chiniaeff.

He says people's attitudes towards housing has been largely responsible for the high prices homebuyers are paying.

People want larger homes on larger lots than in the past, the director believes.

"Most of the people looking for new homes want something better than what they are used to," he says. "If they are young, they want a home as nice or nicer than their parents. If they are older and their families are grown, they want that house of their dreams."

Chiniaeff says there probably is some validity to claims by housing critics that strict governmental building regulations are partially responsible for the rapidly increasing price of homes.

But more importantly, he says, development standards led to better communities and reflect the wishes of residents as to the type of lifestyle they want in their city.

"We (city government) are only here to enforce the wishes of the community," he says.

But, Chiniaeff, an avid student of housing trends, believes attitudes on suburban life-styles are going to have to change in the future, because of the housing crisis.

"Many low- and middle-income families are being priced right out of the market on housing," he says. "We're going to have to see attitudes change. The idea of the 'dream house' mansion on the hill concept is just not going to work."

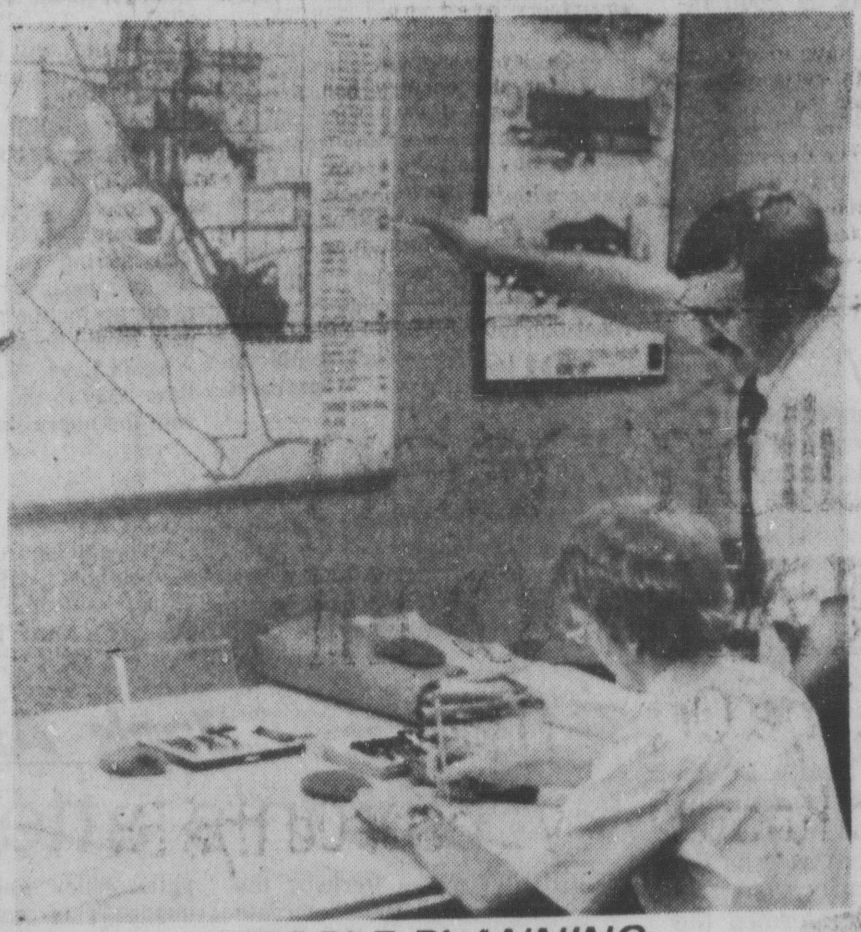
Chiniaeff envisions smaller homes and smaller lots to be the trend of the future. He also believes more innovative house construction and design methods are needed to bring down the cost of housing.

"Cities and other governmental agencies are going to have to start encouraging builders to experiment with new ways of constructing homes. They are also going to have to start considering housing assistance programs for the elderly and the poor. Too many people are already finding it difficult to afford decent housing," he says.

Chiniaeff and other housing experts believe innovative housing designs, modular construction, planned residential communities, higher densities and more open space are a neccessity to avert serious housing problems in the future.

The houses of tomorrow may be very different than what people are used to today, they believe.

The advantages, however, are that by utilizing new construction methods, new materials and new ideas, those who cannot presently afford adequate housing, might in the future find a decent place to live.



PEOPLE PLANNING The valley has for several years been part of a huge building boom that has resulted in more than 33,000 new homes being built in the area. In Chino, which has become one of the fastest growing cities in California, city planners are careful to monitor growth in order to provide adequate governmental services to citizens. Above, Chino's director of community development, Dennis Chiniaeff, points out rapidly developing areas to a fellow city planner, Michael Vairin. The two, and others like them, work to make sure development is orderly.

Home construction is up despite high prices

Despite today's high priced housing market, new home construction in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties — particularly the local valley area — has skyrocketed in recent years.

More than 33,000 new homes have been built in the valley since 1970.

In the tri-communities area of Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda the total number of homes has nearly tripled — from 5,549 in 1970 to more than 15,000 today.

In Chino, Walnut, Diamond Bar, San Dimas, La Verne and Upland, similar trends are evident. The number of homes in many of those areas has nearly doubled since 1970.

Ontario, Claremont and Pomona have also begun to see signs of housing growth, with Ontario leading the way with an additional 5,000 dwelling units since 1970.

County and local officials see no slackening in the demand for new houses. In the West End of San Bernardino County rampant growth has been slowed until problems of inadequate sewage treatment facilities and overcrowding in schools are solved.

Despite the growth problems, however, several thousand new dwelling units — already approved for construction — are expected to be built in the West End during the next two years.

On the Los Angeles County side, overcrowding and sewage treatment problems have not been as severe. Thousands of new homes are also expected in those areas too.

A breakdown of housing growth by area between 1970 and 1977 follows. The statistics are the most recent available, but do not reflect additional growth known to have taken place since they were gathered.

Housing growth in valley since 1970

	Total number of dwelling units
Area	1970	1977
Pomona	28,864	29,765
Claremont	6,788	7,776
La Verne	4,135	6,235
San Dimas	4,375	7,000
Walnut	1,590	2,750
Diamond Bar	3,330	5,904
Chino	7,405	14,003
Ontario	20,723	25,273
Montclair	8,573	8,820
Upland	12,231	17,353
Alta Loma-Etiwanda	3,008	8,267
Cucamonga	1,481	2,945
Guasti	1,060	925
TOTAL	104,563	137,034

The purchase price for the average new home has climbed dramatically since 1970. Since the statistics below were tabulated in January of 1977, prices for homes have risen even further. A comparison by years of what it cost to build a new home follows:

	1970	1975	1976
CONSTRUCTION (labor and materials)	$17,580	$25,200	$29,000
IMPROVED LAND (including government fees)	$ 6,600	$12,450	$14,800
FINANCING	$ 2.040	$ 4,450	$ 5,000
OVERHEAD (profit and fixed costs)	$ 3,610	$ 5,690	$ 7,400
MISCELLANEOUS	$ 1.570	$ 2,610	$ 4,900
TOTAL	$31,400	$50,400	$61,100

Water bonds are necessary

The water bond issue on which Pomona Valley citizens in Los Angeles County communities will vote on Tuesday is not as complex as it sounds. That the election has been allowed to become controversial is regrettable, because the project is vital.

In informing oneself on the election, there are just two primary considerations involved: energy and quality water.

The water treatment plant and storage reservoir which the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District proposes to build north of Claremont would save thousands of dollars in electricity which are now being spent to pump the water uphill to foothill communities from an existing plant in Pomona. If voters can understand the economics of saving energy they are well on the way to understanding the necessity of this project.

Now to the issue of quality water. The fact that our local well water supply is running short cannot be refuted. Practically every water basin has been receding for the past decade or more, due to overpumping and not enough replenishment because of the drought. In order to use many of the local water basins now, the water must be blended with imported water to meet minimum health department standards.

The proposed program of the PVMWD provides for efficient use of imported water, delivered to all residents and other water users within the valley at minimum energy and transmission costs. It greatly improves water quality by reducing the tons of dissolved salts now imported from the Colorado River sources. It prepares the region for Feather River water to augment remaining Colorado River water supplies not lost to Arizona and other Colorado River states by a U.S. Supreme Court decision. This region is fortunate because both the Colorado River system and state water system pass through the upper reaches of the valley.

On balance, the water bond election proposed by the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District is both necessary and vital to the present and future of this region. It provides for equitable financing of facilities needed within each city and a flexible method of payment for both the water facilities to be constructed and the water used.

True, Pomona does have an adequate supply of water at the present time so that its reliance on an expanded and more efficient system is not as great as are neighboring communities which are not so fortunate. But, since the repayment of the water bonds will be asssessed according to each community's use of imported water, the projected cost to Pomona householders is minimal compared to surrounding areas. Also, the project is good insurance for Pomona in the event that the drought years continue.

It would be ironic indeed if this area, blessed with main water feeder systems, would allow itself to be bypassed because it did not prepare itself to use its share of the water it is already paying for.

The Progress Bulletin, after carefully analyzing all factors, strongly urges a YES vote on the bonds on Tuesday.

Lance's law

Whatever else happens to Bert Lance, the former director of the Office of Management and Budget, he ought to be remembered for his advice to the federal establishment: if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

A perfect example of how easy it is to violate that dictum for the noblest of purposes is illustrated by a true story making the rounds of the academic community.

University of Missouri President James C. Olson entered an elevator with a student in a wheelchair recently. The student looked around in vain for the buttons and asked where they were.

Olson replied that Department of Health, Education and Welfare regulations required specifically that for the convenience of people in wheelchairs, the university must place the button panel on the back wall of new elevators — at some considerable expense. The incredulous student informed the president that nobody in a wheelchair ever enters an elevator front first. They back in.

Unfortunately, nobody in Washington ever thought to ask a handicapped person about that.

Think on these things

The simplest remedies can heal our deepest ills. A smile — someone's whistle, the sound of birdsong — the knowledge that all's well with someone we love.

How easy we are to please when we're content within ourselves and can see and hear these simple things — and how unreasonable we are when we blow something clear out of proportion and make ourselves sick in the process.

A choice is something we don't always believe is possible — but, nine times out of ten we have that choice of whether to take things in our stride — or explode. It has been known to take a little of each before we can learn to be contented, or know what really counts.

Pro and con on water bonds

Dear Editor:

Two years ago we voted against an expensive Pomona Valley Municipal Water District water project. Recent water history gives us no reason to change our minds. The severe drought conditions throughout the state should not be incentive to increase our dependence on Northern California water. Rather, the drought should herald an era of careful use and recharge of local water supplies, of pricing policies that encourage conservation and of funding water projects through revenue bonds. The general obligation bonds to be sold for this project hide a significant water cost in the property tax bill and, therefore, may encourage greater water consumption.

Two years ago many of us urged PVMWD to finance a thorough, professional study of causes and solutions to the nitrate problem existing in some of our wells. We called for a conservation plan before the district's peak summer water use committed us to pay for a much larger part of the facility than our total percentage of water use would warrant. We hoped for a thorough examination of the developing technology in the management and utilization of natural groundwater basins for storage, recharge and supply — before we greatly increase our dependence on imported sources.

Instead, our tax money has been spent on the recent slick brochures emphasizing drought and followed up by an expensive telephone campaign. The truth, of course, is that the proposed project cannot create water supply! Let's vote NO again and demand that our public agencies put their money and time in developing policies, projects and funding approaches that will do something to meet our future water needs.

Dear Editor:

Let's do it right this time. I refer to the water system serving our valley, and the opportunity to make it more functional and adequate.

In the past Pomona Valley has failed to act when given a chance to augment its water supply. In 1936, when the Metropolitan Water District tried to persuade our residents to join in bringing Colorado River water to Southern California, well-intentioned but uninformed leaders refused to accept the invitation and scoffed at the idea that we needed more water. They said that our wells and the flow of water from the canyons would be adequate for our needs.

This proved to be erroneous thinking. Water levels receded and 10 years later some of those same leaders started urging us to join MWD to get additional water. This was difficult to do. It took lots of pressure to persuade the district to accept us, even though we paid for our participation on the basis of original and subsequent costs: assessments, taxes and interest.

By delaying our joining the MWD, we did our valley a great disservice, for not only did it cost a great deal more, but water lines and the treatment plant were installed on the basis that our valley would not be served. Therefore it has not been possible for us residents to enjoy the benefits of treated and soft water from the La Verne (Weymouth) plant.

The bond issue to be voted on at the polls on Tuesday will overcome this great deficiency and will also increase capacity as well as operating efficiency. Distribution to all parts of the valley will be by gravity flow, without paying money to pump it to its destination.

The cost is minimal: only $200,000 for Pomona, $2,800,000 for La Verne, $3,500,000 for Claremont, etc. The total of all nine participating areas adds up to $26,000,000 being voted on. The saving in soap alone, plus reduced costs of operations, would make up for the small amount each user would be assessed.

Again I say, "Let's do it right this time." Go to the polls Tuesday and vote for improved water.

Clem Neibel
La Verne

Dear Editor:

Several things are disturbing about the role and position of the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District in Tuesday's water bond election.

First of all, why is the PVMWD, which takes a strong position on one side of this issue, conducting the election? One result of PVMWD's control shows up in the sample ballot, mailed out to all water district voters. Included in it is the analysis of the ballot measure, which should be an objective and impartial statement by a neutral analyst; but it was submitted by PVMWD's own district counsel, who shows his bias by calling the facilities the bond would support "useful and necessary."

PVMWD's argument in favor of the ballot measure is also disturbing. Giving no evidence and no reasons whatsoever, it asserts that water storage and transportation are "badly needed." It then jumps to scare tactics, claiming that lack of water means loss of jobs, etc. For one thing, supplying storage and transportation, which is what the bond measure would fund, is not the same thing as supplying water. But we don't need the treatment facilities because the existing Weymouth Plant normally operates below capacity. And as for the water, in the Oct. 24 Progress Bulletin, Stan Kawa, manager of the PVMWD, admitted that ample water exists in the district. So the ballot argument is false. By focusing the rest of its statement on how big a system to build and how it should be financed, PVMWD throws up a smoke screen. It never justifies the need for the project in the first place.

Another objection to the way the PVMWD has conducted itself in this election campaign is its attempt to keep a legitimate "con" argument by the League of Women Voters off the ballot statement. The PVMWD hoped to substitute a bogus argument by one of its own board members who had previously seconded the motion to support the bond measure. Only when faced with a legal suit by the League of Women Voters did the PVMWD back down.

We hope that voters will see through the feeble arguments of the PVMWD and will reject this expensive and unjustifiable measure.

Nixon's attempted coup

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most audacious of the Watergate schemes was Richard Nixon's attempt to Nixonize the federal bureaucracy and bring it under his tight, personal control. Without the consent of Congress, he intended to increase the power of the presidency in a revolutionary way.

If he had been able to pull it off, it would have amounted almost to a coup against our existing form of government. He succeeded to a degree in subverting the Civil Service Commission, which is supposed to protect the professional bureaucracy from political encroachment.

The story of Nixon's attempt coup has never been fully told and the conspirators have never been held accountable. In fact, the commission is still populated at its upper levels by officials who helped him subvert the civil service system. Here are the details:

Richard Nixon had an intense distrust of the millions who compose the permanent government. He often complained that the federal bureaucracy was dominated by "liberals" and "academics." He would confide to intimates that a "Jewish cabal" had taken over this office or that agency. He issued orders that no more "Ivy Leaguers" should be appointed to high positions.

Nixon's denigration of the civil service system led the White House to begin a quiet political purge. Those who were considered unreliable were shunted into obscure jobs and replaced by people with Nixon credentials. The White House also set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of new applicants for government jobs.

This subversion of the regular institutions of government, of course, was conducted in the utmost secrecy. Even in the backrooms of the White House, Nixon aides were careful not to refer to it in political terms. Admonished the White House hatchetman in charge of the purge, Fred Malek: "I propose we stop calling it 'politicizing the executive branch' and instead call it something like strengthening the government's responsiveness." The euphemism stuck and the operation became known thereafter as the Responsiveness Program.

By executive decree, President Nixon also sought to create around himself a super-cabinet of loyal aides who would have total power over the bureaucracy. They would force his policies upon the government through White House agents who would be installed in every department.

Nixon, meanwhile, intended to encapsulate himself from unnecessary turmoil, devote his energies to formulating policies and deal regularly only with those select few who were on his personal wave length. He would leave it to them to enforce his edicts through a political system that would turn the bureaucracy into an unquestioning, subservient arm of the White House.

But he found out that a seething enterprise like the federal government could not be compartmentalized, cordoned off and led from a glass bubble. He left behind, nevertheless, civil service officials who not only supported his power play but who allegedly destroyed documents to prevent Congress from learning of the abuses.

The transition team, which helped turn over the reins of government to Jimmy Carter, was sharply critical of several career people at the Civil Service Commission. Although the transition papers have been kept secret, inside sources say the final report pointed an accusatory finger, for example, at John Cole.

He heads the powerful Bureau of Personnel Management Evaluation, which has the authority to examine the personnel practices of any government agency. Yet despite the critical evaluation of his own performance, Cole is still evaluating others. Furthermore, the commission has no plans to transfer him.

This has upset Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who has been keeping a watchful congressional eye on the commission for years. He has written a stinging, secret letter to President Carter calling for the removal not only of Cole but of the executive director, Ray Jacobson.

Declares the letter: "Suspending the authority of (Jacobson and Cole) is essential. Until questions of document destruction and concealment of the commission's role in violating the merit system are answered, these individuals should not be allowed to exercise authority."

Some of the past abuses may yet wind up in court. Congressional critics complain that the Justice Department has been less than vigorous about investigating these excesses of the Nixon era. But Civil Service Chairman Alan Campbell says he was assured by high Justice officials only last week that the investigation is still active.

Feudin' in New Hampshire

MANCHESTER, N.H. (NEA) — New Hampshire and the nation will have to look elsewhere for entertainment next year.

The best political brawl on the horizon has been called on account of cold feet. GOP Gov. Meldrim Thomson can't quite bring himself to climb into the ring with Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., his arch enemy.

"There's nothing I would like better. I lie awake thinking about it some nights," says the only governor in America who makes Ronald Reagan look like a left-winger.

"But I can do more good in my present position."

That's what they all say, of course, when they duck a fight. The real reason is a pragmatic political assessment. A secret poll by Robert Tester, the Republican Party's top pollster, shows McIntyre would whomp Thomson in a Senate race.

Politicians elsewhere, including many Republicans, think Thomson is the sort who shouldn't be permitted to have sharp objects. But the three-term New Hampshire governor is crazy like a fox when his own political neck is on the line.

Thomson and McIntyre loathe each other. It is not surprising; they couldn't be more different in personality, background and ideology.

McIntyre, a New Hampshire native who has served in the Senate since 1962, is a low-profile politician with a moderate-to-liberal voting record. In one of the few states where Republicans still hold a wide edge in voter registration, he has won reelection handily over the years despite furious opposition from William Loeb, ultraconservative publisher of the Manchester Union Leader, the only newspaper with statewide circulation.

Thomson, on the other hand, is a transplanted Georgian who was virtually created by Loeb, politically speaking. He once ran for governor as an American Party candidate before winning, as a Republican, in 1972.

His antics as governor, during three two-year terms, have drawn widespread national attention. In fact, his reputation for bizarre conduct is such that when he went to the Republican National Convention last year to support Reagan's nomination, the Reagan forces assigned a watchdog codenamed "The Muzzle" to keep Thomson under wraps.

One of Thomson's pet stunts is lowering the state house flags to half-mast whenever he doesn't like something done in Washington (which is nearly all the time). He did it when President Carter proclaimed amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders, and again when the Panama Canal treaties were signed.

Thomson is a big cheese in the Conservative Caucus, a national pressure group, and serves as "secretary of state" in the group's "shadow cabinet." The Panama Canal issue is his favorite hobby horse right now, and he is riding McIntyre about it incessantly.

A few weeks ago, the governor threatened to reconsider his renunciation of the Senate race if McIntyre — presently undecided on the canal issue — should vote for the treaties.

"Mr. Loeb and Mr. Thomson and the Conservative Caucus can take their threats and run them up and down the governor's flagpole," replied McIntyre.

The senator and other New Hampshire Democrats wish Thomson would carry out his threat and run against McIntyre next year. They are confident they could beat him, and would love to get him out of the governor's office.

But McIntyre will have to find some other way to fire up his troops. And Thomson will no doubt be reelected once more. New Hampshire voters may not approve of his antics all the time, nor consider him respectable enough for the U.S. Senate, but they love his rock-solid resistance to raising taxes.

New Hampshire is the only state in the union without either an income tax or a sales tax, and Thomson crusades on a pledge to keep it that way. State and local government services are miserable, but the voters don't seem to mind.

When the dust settles after next year's elections, the chances are excellent that McIntyre and Thomson will be right where they are today — hurling insults long distance, between Washington and Concord.

Dr. Miller

Best to check that furnace

DEAR DR. MILLER: It's Pert, my canary. He's been acting poorly ever since I started using this new gas heater. I remember reading about how easily canaries can be poisoned by gas. Do you suppose there is a connection? Should I have the furnace checked? — W.R.

DEAR W.R.: Since Pert's poorly, it would be best to have the furnace checked for leaks. Your canary's condition could be caused by something entirely unrelated. Conversely, canaries are very susceptible to gas — and such fumes could endanger other pets and humans, too.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Beautiful eyes are the most striking feature of my Siamese. But they do strange things. Part of the time they bounce back and forth very rapidly, and it's quite startling when you notice it. It doesn't seem to bother her, as far as I can tell. Does it have to be treated? — K.F.

DEAR K.F.: No, it doesn't have to be, which is fortunate because there isn't any treatment for nystigymus in a Siamese anyway. This rapid horizontal eye movement doesn't bother the cat and is peculiar to some animals within this breed. (Some severe brain and ear infections may cause a somewhat similar, though slower, eye movement in an affected dog or cat. This condition does, of course, require immediate treatment.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our veterinarian wants to operate on our old dog. He admits the operation is dangerous but says it is the best chance for Fluffy. We have no reason not to take his advice but we are, frankly, scared to death of surgery ourselves and would rather do anything else than put her through this. Would it be unfair to our doctor, whom we do trust, to ask for a second opinion as to whether the surgery has to be done? — N.C.

DEAR N.C.: When, for whatever reason, you have difficulty accepting your own veterinarian's advice, seeking a second opinion is a logical step. Your own veterinarian should, of course, be informed of your concern so he can either help you in choosing another doctor for such an examination or, at the very least, provide the other doctor with his findings regarding Fluffy's condition. Don't procrastinate, however. If surgery is the answer, the sooner it is done (in most cases), the better its chances for success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You are where the action is today. You make things hum and could even turn a dull meeting into something lively and interesting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In things personally gainful, you are quite clever today. This, coupled with an innate sense of timing, gives you a real advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you may be lax in matters where only you are involved, be bold and forceful in regard to the interests of those under your wing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You've got some clever ideas in matters that could add to your resources, but be alert. Things could develop much faster than you think.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Pennies have a way of adding up to something far larger for you today. Don't be perturbed if early returns are smaller than expected.

Libber's letter fit to print

Dear Ann: I must respond to "California Pig" — the chauvinist louse who said Women's Libbers are largely responsible for the increase in male impotency.

Dear Pig:

I'm tired of being your scapegoat. We've been blamed for the rise in unemployment, the increase in crime, homosexuality — and now it's male impotence. Perhaps you've had problems with one woman. Well, too bad. Everybody has problems with somebody at one time or another.

You say "the Libbers" don't WANT a man to protect them. Do you honestly think men are protecting women today? From what?

Was I protected by a man when he raped me? Was I protected by a man when he denied me an abortion for an unwanted child? Was I protected by a man when he refused to give me a job because he thought women should stay home and do the cooking and cleaning?

Thanks, Pig, but we don't need your "protection." It's high time you stopped blaming women for your own inability to function as an adult. For years you blamed your mother — and now your sweetheart or wife is supposed to take the rap for your immaturity. Grow up or shut up! — Heard that Song Before

Dear Heard: Many "Libbers" wrote to express the same sentiments but your letter was one of the few that was printable. Have a good day!

Dear Ann Landers: You have stated many times that the purpose of your column is to educate people. This letter is on behalf of those of us who handle money.

I work for a large western bank and handle anywhere between $7,000 and $15,000 a day. Almost everyone thinks that the extra $10 or $20 they get when someone makes a mistake will not hurt a large corporation or bank. They are right. It won't — but it can sure hurt a teller or a cashier. What people don't realize is that it goes against his (or her) record and could cost a person his job.

I am appealing to your readers to please — if you get more money than you are entitled to — return it. Not only will your honesty re-affirm the cashier's faith in humanity but it might even save his job. — We All Make Mistakes

Dear Mistakes: Here's your letter — but you left out the most important benefit of all — self-esteem. Returning money when you have been overpaid gives you a good feeling about yourself. And people who feel good about themselves are a joy to all mankind.

Dear Ann Landers: I received in the mail yesterday two invitations — both for dinner parties on the same evening.

I like one of these couples better than the other but my husband says we should divide the time — go to one for cocktails and explain that we have an obligation to go elsewhere for dinner. He feels in this way we will at least have made an appearance at the first party which is better than a turn-down. (I should tell you the two hostesses are not fond of each other.)

I think we should accept the invitation from the woman I feel closest to and not try to make both affairs. What do you say? — Split Personalities

Dear Persons: Your husband's idea is a good one. The hostess will probably feel better if you come by for cocktails than if you give her a negative response.

Unlimited excuses at hand

When it comes to homework, educators have heard every excuse in the book.

"My mother wrapped the garbage in it."

"I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out."

"My little brother pee-ed on it."

The excuses often showed more imagination than the assignments turned in and invariably involved a third party who was totally responsible for their deficiency.

This fall, 850,000 women over 35 are returning to the classrooms as students. They're not entering the academic world empty-handed. Thanks to their children, they have a couple of years' supply of excuses. Only a few words have to be changed to get them off the hook.

"I was going to do my homework last night, but my husband put me to bed early."

"My paper was typed neatly and ready to turn in when my brother spilled his martini all over it at the breakfast table."

"I had every intention of going to the library, but I couldn't find my car keys."

"My children were hanging on the phone all night and I couldn't call my best friend and get the assignment."

"I didn't feel well. I went into false labor 10 months early."

"I picked the same topic every other person in the class picked . . . The Evolution of Storm Doors in the Ming Dynasty . . . and all the books were out."

"Our dog is being paper trained . . . you may have noticed."

"I was absent yesterday because I was waiting for the washer repairman and didn't know you had made an assignment."

"Do you think just because this assignment is done in yellow crayon, my kids did it for me?"

"My husband wrapped his gum in it."

As the child of one of my best friends told his Mother at breakfast one morning, "You just tell your teacher we got home late last night and we felt your sleep was more important to your health than that stupid assignment."

That's easy for him to say. He's not a 50-year-old second-semester Freshman.

Dr. Lamb

Scant chance of pregnancy

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband and I get into arguments over whether or not I can become pregnant. He says no and I'm afraid I may still become pregnant.

I am not taking the pill and am 56 years old. I haven't had my period in more than three years but I believe I am still going through the change as I get very nervous at times and still get estrogen shots. How long must I get shots? It's over 18 years now.

DEAR READER — If you get pregnant you are likely to set a new record. Published accounts say that the oldest woman to have a child was 56 at the time of the birth. Some of my readers have brought to my attention at least two instances of women who were 57 who gave birth. Since you must be past your 56th birthdate and it will take nine months to have a child you will be at the top of the record if you achieve that rare distinction.

Many doctors believe that if a woman in her 50s goes through the menopause and doesn't menstruate for one year she is not likely to get pregnant. Others prefer to wait two years after menstruation has stopped before saying that a woman is no longer fertile.

The symptoms you have may not be from menopause. It is very likely that your ovaries have not been functional for nearly all of the three years since you have stopped menstruating. There is a lot of the confusion about what symptoms are caused by menopause. Put simply, a lot of people get nervous who are not going through the change of life, including men.

To give you a better understanding of the change in life and what symptoms it really causes I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Whether or not a woman needs estrogen after menopause is an individual matter. Some women produce enough female hormones from the adrenal gland to get along quite well and others do not. Only an examination by your physician can answer the question of whether or not you need it.

For women who need estrogen support it is really replacement hormone therapy to help do part of what the ovaries used to do. In these women the female hormones help to prevent changes in the vagina cells that cause dryness and may lead to chronic infections. The hormones are specific for controlling hot flashes caused by lack of estrogen.

There is some evidence that adequate amounts of estrogen help to protect against ostgoporosis (dissolving bones) but less indication that they stop the process once it has begun.

There are good studies that show that women taking female hormones after the ovaries stop functioning, or have been removed, have a much lower death rate from a variety of medical conditions, and live healthier and happier lives. Women who take estrogen after the menopause should have careful regular medical examinations to be certain there is no evidence of breast cancer and there are no signs of malignancy of the uterus if a hysterectomy has not been done.

"(Jogging) is something you can do every day, you don't have to reserve a court or get up a game. Running requires no special skills. And you have that wonderful feeling of health. And somebody said it was often more beneficial to jog around the psychiatrist's building than to enter . . . It's cheaper than a couch."

—Linda Schreiber, one of the women who ran last week's New York City Marathon.

"Democracy is pluralism, and when you've emerged from a dictatorship as we did, and the people here in Greece and in Spain, you have no trouble recognizing where it exists and where it does not."

Today's hand was played 20 years ago in the last quarter of an important team match.

You are in seven spades and it is a cinch to see that your opponents would also be there.

Your team was well behind at the three-quarter mark and you realize that your only chance to win will be to make seven while your opposite team goes down.

The hand is going to depend on taking a successful heart finesse and when you get around to it you have managed to eliminate everything but hearts and East has discarded one. Hence, he started with four — West with three — so the odds are slightly in favor of playing East for her ladyship.

Pedro Cabral of New York decided after long thought that the other South would take the percentage play. He played West for the queen and made the grand slam.

Now, what would you do if you were at the other table and only wanted to make the same play that Pedro made.

The other South took the percentage play, lost the slam, but still won the match by a very small margin.

A Michigan reader wants to know what the four-spade bid means in the partnership sequence: one diamond, one spade, four spades.

Most experts play it as showing the same 18 or 19 points in support of spades as standard bidders do, but add the extra proviso that their hand does not include a singleton or void.

A. One sort can, anyway. Anguilla rostrata is its nomenclature. Been known to wiggle over moist ground as far as three miles.

Q. "What's 'witch hazel'?"

A. A shrub with pliant branches that blooms in the fall. Also, an alcoholic lotion made from witch hazel bark. 'I love you' is vital message

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

I received a phone call the other day that broke in on a pressure-filled day in a very special way. My friend asked, "Do you have a minute?" I said, rather quickly, "Yes . . . just a minute?"

"Yes," my friend answered. "I was just thinking of you and wanted to tell you that you are very special, and that I love you." Wow! I felt the tension flow out of me. I pulled up a chair and sat down as a feeling of happiness came over me. This loving surprise, deeply appreciated, was savored for what turned out to be several minutes.

"I love you." We need to hear it and we need to say it. This is not something to be said only during the romantic period of courting, but it should be said to one another through all of the living and sharing of life's ups and downs. Sharing love — whether between parent and child, husband and wife, neighbors or friends, is our greatest source of happiness.

Love is our most potent resource. Yet, many are uncomfortable communicating loving feelings. Why is this so difficult for some?

Psychological research on love has revealed that a lack of love in childhood can have a devastating effect on a person's ability to give and receive love in later life. Children who receive little love value love less as adults.

People have difficulty telling another, "I love you," for many reasons. Lack of self-confidence and natural shyness are two explanations I frequently hear. Fear of being seen as soft or feminine is the feeling some men have. A major cause that holds a large number of people back from saying, "I love you," is the fear of being rejected.

Love relates closely to happiness in marriage, in contacts with family and friends and even on the job. Satisfaction in life and a happy marriage seem closely related.

Nearly every marriage provides the opportunity for a man and woman to place the happiness, growth and fulfillment of the other as equal to his own. Taking this opportunity . . . taking this chance . . . is the act of love. Using this most important resource in our lives brings nourishment. It isn't whether giving love brings love back. Giving love makes us feel more alive, more secure — more complete. Giving love is a gift I give myself.

Housing prices skyrocket in just a few short years—

reasonably inexpensive in comparison with Orange County or Los Angeles County.

He said homebuyers can save several thousand dollars on their purchases by coming to the valley.

While many believe it is speculators and investment buyers who are forcing the price of housing up, Murphy says there are several factors causing what he expects this year to be a 25 percent increase in the average cost of a home.

Murphy says the biggest proportion of home buyers in the area today are young couples who are buying their first home.

Most of the young couples, he says, are forced to have two incomes to afford a home.

He believes the trend may lead to an influx of foreclosures on some homes when — due to emergencies — one of the spouses will have to quit his or her job.

"Some people are buying a lot more house than they need and are paying more than they can really afford," he explains.

"Too many people making the purchase of a home dependant on two family incomes can cause problems."

The real estate expert says another reason for the upsurge the number of homes being sold and bought are that older couples — who because their homes have increased in value — are able to use equity to buy a more expensive house.

Such a move, he believes, results in increased market activity.

"The person who is buying a new home is usually selling a used one," he says.

Investor-speculators are also an influence, he says, but their involvement in the market has fallen off in recent months.

According to statistics tabulated by the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, the average price of a home in Pomona rose from $23,155 in 1975 to $32,949 as of September of this year.

In Claremont, home prices rose from an average of $43,006 to $62,954; in La Verne, from $36,306 to $52,601.

The historical rate of inflation for housing has been about 6 to 8 percent a year, said Murphy. During the last 12 months, housing prices in the Pomona Valley have escalated by 25 percent.

But Murphy believes the inflationary rate will have to to slow before too long, or no one is going to be able to afford a house.

"It can't continue," he said. "It's impossible for housing prices to continue increasing at a 25 percent rate. It's just going to outstrip itself," he said.

Murphy believes government has been largely to blame for the rapid increases in the cost of housing and his comments seem to be supported by area builders.

Ken Willis, a spokesman for the Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association (BIA), says local government has been increasing the prices of homes over the years by tacking on fees for many public works projects.

A comparison of housing cost statistics provided by the Construction Industry Research Board, located in Los Angeles, indicate that government fees and permits for houses are growing at a much faster rate than prices for other aspects of building.

According to Willis, government fees can add $2,000 to the price of an average sized, 1,600-square-foot home.

Willis believes builders are being used as a scapegoat by local government that gives "politicians and bureaucrats" the ability to raise funds for government projects without going to voters.

Willis says government charges on each home can end up costing an individual homeowner over $5,000 when interest charges and other factors are considered.

Other factors influencing the price of homes have been increases in labor and raw material costs.

Wood alone has gone up in price nearly $1,500 for the average home recently.

Interest rates have also climbed significantly, adding to the overall builder's cost for a home and the individual homeowner's mortgage payments.

Builders, however, generally believe the housing market to be an indicator of the nation's economic health. As long as homes are being built and sold, the economy of the U.S. generally shows signs of improving, says Willis.

Man intrigued by the unknown

Course taught by minister on 'Apocalypse' is popular

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Blay doesn't necessarily think "The End Is Near," but he has some idea what it's going to be like when it comes.

Blay got the idea while doing research for other adult education courses he has taught, which studied the Bible as literature or probed Van Daniken's "Chariot of the Gods."

All of the courses have been filled to capacity, said Blay, a cherubic, 43-year-old, ordained Lutheran minister who recently became pastor of a congregation, relegating his teaching to part-time.

"I think mankind has always been interested in the unknown," he said. "He has always been a little afraid of it because of the fact that it is unknown."

He said he also thought recent occult movies like "The Exorcist" and sci-fi hits like "Star Wars" and "Logan's Run" have heightened the general interest in the unknown.

"I think the majority of mankind is rather insecure," Blay said. "And I think this (studying) might give mankind a sense of security in that these may not be actualities, in terms of the future, but they're definite 'maybes.'"

Blay does not approach his students as a prophet or guru. Rather, he introduces what has been written and lets the students make up their own minds.

"My idea is not to influence people, but to present the different concepts," he said.

Privately, however, Blay said he felt that in the next 150 years the world was "going to be altered almost beyond recognition or else plunged back in time, so that it's still going to be altered, because man in his stupidity decided to destroy himself.

"It could occur any time," he insisted. "It could happen tomorrow."

Blay defines apocalypse as a "gigantic change in the world — at least civilization as we know it."

He said he was certain the end would be violent and that many would not survive it.

"It could be overnight or an ongoing thing that could take decades, perhaps even centuries — which I should rather doubt," he explained. "If it is an ongoing thing, we could be witnessing our own apocalypse now."

He insists, however, that some will survive and mankind will prevail.

"Modern man is looking for whatever certainties he can find in a very uncertain world," Blay said. "And there are such things in terms of apocalypse — regardless of what that turns out to be. Nobody can tell me, for example, that a Third World War would not be apocalyptic. Anybody who said it could be 'limited' is insane."

Sedentary Americans?

BOSTON (AP) — Many Americans just may be leading such sedentary lives that they are "virtually motionless," moving about little more than if they remained in bed 24 hours a day, Dr. William Kannel, director of the famed Framingham Heart Study, said here recently.

Kannel said 16 percent of men and 21 percent of women in a group studied in Framingham achieved activity scores of 29 or less. He said that spending 24 hours in bed rates a score of 24.

Now known as the Boston University-Framingham Heart Study, the project has involved studying several thousand Framingham residents for 27 years.

Kannel told a symposium on leisure time sponsored by the Massachusetts Medical Society that even in the group scoring the highest levels of activity, with scores higher than 36, few would qualify for a high level of physical fitness.

Despite the lack of scientific evidence on exact relationships between activity and fitness, he said, "it is of interest that the greater the dose of those sedentary traits, the greater the risk of cardivascular disease."

He's seeking an answer for 'low vision'

Valley man 'intrigued' by life helping people see better

Lawrence E. Gallarini of Alta Loma was a sophomore in high school when he first stumbled onto the world of optometry.

"My math teacher couldn't understand why I couldn't do my schoolwork, until he realized I couldn't see the chalkboard," he recalls.

"The school nurse would write notes to my parents suggesting I see an eye doctor, and I kept throwing them away. My vision was about 10/200."

"Then I finally got glasses, and saw 20/20 for the first time. I saw things I had never known existed. That's when I decided to go into optometry and help others see."

With that goal firmly in mind, he became Dr. Gallarini in 1967, graduating from the Los Angeles College of Optometry.

At that time little help was available to patients with low vision, a subject which greatly intrigued Dr: Gallarini as a student. Many patients with low vision were classified as legally blind, meaning that their best vision even with corrective lenses in 20/200 or worse.

After serving a three-year hitch as a Navy optometrist, Dr. Gallarini's interest in low vision was rekindled when he returned to the optometry college for further accreditation. Based on his qualifications and interest, he was one of seven optometrists asked to help staff a low vision center. Dr. Gallarini has taught low vision at the Southern California College of Optometry (formerly Los Angeles College of Optometry) in Fullerton since then. He also sees low vision patients in his private practice in Ontario.

His work in low vision and other areas of optometry earned Dr. Gallarini the title of Young Optometrist of the Year in 1974 from the California Optometric Association.

As chairman of the association's department of education and research, Dr. Gallarini is concerned with educating optometrists on the various new techniques available to them.

According to him, help is available to those whose visual loss is so great they cannot read a newspaper or letter.

"That doesn't mean they can't see, because their eyes still function. They just can't see as well, almost as if they were seeing through a dirty windshield.

"Yet their visual demands are the same as those who have normal eyesight," he asserts.

The 35-year-old optometrist says that studies have shown that about 75 percent of those with low vision problems can actually be helped. The difficulty, he states, is getting these patients to seek help, since in many cases they have been told there is no hope for normal seeing.

"Some people tend to give up when they acquire a visual loss," he says. "We try to show them they can indeed see with the help of low vision devices."

These devices range from simple hand magnifiers to closed-circuit TV systems, but most of them can easily be fitted onto a pair of glasses. Bioptic telescopic lenses, similar in principle to bifocal glasses, allow the patient to fucus on a near distance with one part of the lens and on a far range with the other. Telescopic lenses are also available for people whose work does not allow them to bring a device close to the material they wish to see.

"Using a low vision device demands concentration, for many times patients must bring the reading material up very close to the special lens, but generally patients learn to accept these aids," he asserts. "If we can help restore their vision through these devices, then for many we have restored their privacy, for now they can read their own letters and balance their own checkbooks."

The final decision of whether to prescribe a device or not always lies with the patients, says Dr. Gallarini. "We can only give them options, and perhaps even lend them a device so they can test it out, but they must decide whether they want to see again or not."

Dr. Gallarini is also involved in vision therapy, which attempts to get patients to use both eyes to see. "The optometry field has progressed considerably in the last 10 years. We used to check for clear vision only; now we are testing for efficient eyesight. Just because you see clearly doesn't necessarily mean your eyesight is functioning as well as it can.

"We have always tested for eye muscle positioning, but now we are actually helping patients exercise a lazy eye so that they can develop binocular, or two-eyed vision," he says.

"For example, a child who keeps bumping into things might be enjoying good, clear vision, yet he might be looking down a tunnel, unaware of any peripheral sights.

"In this case, the child has never learned to use his side vision," says Dr. Gallarini.

"Many of us discover our eye skills through our environment and hold onto them, while others don't. By listening and studying their actions, we can spot the problem, and through exercises help these patients refine their awareness of the world."

Irony seen in bit of political symbolism

Ancestor of religious 'dissident' envoy to England with a mission

EDITOR'S NOTE — For 14 years Kingman Brewster presided over Yale University. Now he is a diplomat with a mission. He told about it in an interview with AP Diplomatic Correspondent Arthur L. Gavshon.

By Arthur L. Gavshon
AP Diplomatic Corr.

LONDON (AP) — William Brewster sailed to Plymouth, Mass., aboard the Mayflower in 1620 vowing with 100 other dissident fellow Pilgrims to recover the religious freedoms they began losing in the England of Queen Elizabeth II.

Today, the descendant of that refugee, Kingman Brewster, is the U.S. ambassador to the Court of Elizabeth II.

The irony of that bit of political symbolism has not escaped the erudite envoy, former president of Yale University, who, soon after presenting his letters of credence last spring, was quoted by a British interviewer as saying: "It is satisfying for the descendant of a dissident refugee from Elizabeth I to present his credentials to Elizabeth II."

Of course, Elizabeth I had been dead 17 years by the time the Mayflower sailed. But even while she was alive, the Pilgrims felt they were being persecuted to the point that they began breaking away from the Church of England and setting up their own Congressional houses of worship.

Brewster's ancestor William may well have taken pride in the emphasis the ambassador of today places on the need to preserve not only the liberties but also the unity of the English-speaking world.

"The American political experiment sprang from English values, traditions and institutions," the ambassador told The Associated Press in an interview. "Indeed it was to vindicate the rights of Englishmen that the Colonies, in exasperation, reluctantly rebelled."

"The rights of Englishmen" spelled out by the 17th century Pilgrims broadly resemble those standards of human dignity and freedom which President Carter would like all nations to respect.

Brewster had been talking about the importance of those rights to the English-speaking world long before Carter was elected. In the 1975 Churchill Lecture he voiced his conviction: "It is our first obligation to see that 'the rights of Englishmen' are not lost, that they are protected and nurtured in their natural home."

That "natural home" to him is North America, Britain itself and Australia, which he said provides "a global strategic base" from which the English-speaking peoples could defend their principles against any assailant.

It was more than a matter of political identification that seemed to impel Carter to pluck Brewster from the post he had held at Yale since 1963 in order to rekindle as ambassador here the "special British-American relationship" to which both say they are devoted.

"At Yale, Brewster had engaged in the sort of activities that Carter would almost surely have endorsed. He led an anti-Vietnam war demonstration to Washington. He was influential in having more women, more blacks, more minority elements in the university. Through the 1960s he was a force for moderation when student passions ran high.

Brewster's structured, sometimes serious, often witty speeches already have attracted the attention of many Britons in England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, where he made a point of becoming visible soon after settling in.

In the interview the 58-yearold former Navy pilot discussed the sunnier outlook Britain faces after decades of economic travail; popular yearnings for peace in northern Ireland; the way an academic sees the span and variety of his role as chief of a big diplomatic mission, and one of his pet theories that treasury masters of the Western world should transform their tax systems so that people would pay on what they spend rather than on what they earn.

On the outlook of Britain awaiting the full flowering of the North Sea oil bonanza, Brewster said the country now has every chance to escape from "ancient woes" and approach "a more productive and equitable society." As he sees it "the first job is to make Britain more competitive, more productive so that it can restore its basic capacity for growth" and a great deal will depend on the next five years. By that, he said, he meant if the governing Labor Party or the opposition Conservatives manage the oil boom well — using new revenues for capital improvement and not entirely on consumption and welfare — then the nation and entire Western world would benefit enormously.

On his visits to Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales where separatists seeking to break out of the United Kingdom sometimes have used bombs and bullets, Brewster said: "You cannot understand a country, any country, by remaining in the precincts of its capital city."

While in Belfast he stressed what he called "the distress, disapproval and downright disgust" felt by the Irish-American political leadership at the eight-year old sectarian struggle between the Protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority.

On rekindling "the special relationship" between the United States and Britain, Brewster said he does not think of this "in power-political or diplomatic terms," nor only as an "affinity of sentiment, culture and language." Its most special thing, he said, "is how desperately important to each of us it is that the other should succeed" in the shared aim off preserving "ordered freedom for the world."

The ambassador spoke of a new concept of tax policy he has been interested in for some years — the idea being "the more you spend, the more you had to share with the government." Those people who preferred to save their income, he explains, would put it into productive investment without being penalized. The idea, he noted, is not U.S. policy — yet equally he has not abandoned it as a means of providing a new form of incentive that most Western countries could well use to provide the investment funds for which they hunger.

"It's an idea whose time has not yet come," Brewster said.

Family views world of art

The exhibit, a sampling of the 120,000-piece Alinari family archives, is arranged in six categories: documents and photographs of the Alinari family, images of Florence, art treasures, cameras and accessories and pictures of European cities and landscapes.

Leopoldo Alinari, an engraver's son, became involved in commercial photography in the 19th century when it was still a relatively new concept. He was joined by his brothers, Giuseppe and Romoaldo. Their sons, Giuseppe and Vittorio, and grandsons, Leopoldo and Carlo, also became photographers in the family firm.

The company, Fratelli Alinari S.P.A., was sold in 1920. The current owners expanded the archives and are managing the exhibit.

Near ghoulish 'death strip'

Fence, and whole world, separate German towns

ECKERTAL, West Germany (AP) — To Juergen Pieskar, the German-speaking people over his back fence might as well live in another world. Pieskar lives in West Germany. His neighbors are in Communist East Germany.

A ghoulish collection of electrified fences, guard towers, and a heavily mined "death strip" erected by the East Germans separate Pieskar's village from Stapelburg, a farming community a few hundred yards into Communist territory.

A December 1971 transit agreement between the two Germanys permits West Germans and other foreigners to cross into the East at a handful of locations. Eckertal, on the northern rim of the Harz Mountains, is not among them.

East Germany normally forbids travel to the West by the majority of its citizens.

To visit their "neighbors," residents of Eckertal must travel 50 miles northeast to Helmstedt or 70 miles southeast to Duderstadt, cross into East Germany, then drive back to Stapelburg.

Residents say few make the trip.

"There isn't much contact any more," said Ursula Sehnin, a waitress at a restaurant some 150 yards from the border. "An elderly couple has a son and daughter in the village over there but most people came here after the partitioning. It's like another world."

Pieskar, who has lived here for about 20 years, claims "life is not bad" along the border but "the children have to be careful. They can't roam and play all over the place."

About 50 yards behind Pieskar's new brick home flows a tiny brook. A sign warns that the middle of the stream is the border with East Germany.

A few yards behind the creek, flanked by white birches and evergreens, lies the complex of fortifications that makes the inner German border one of the most heavily fortified in the world.

East Germany claims the fortifications, which extend some 856 miles from the Baltic Sea to Czechoslovakia, are designed to keep fascists and neo-Nazis from the West out.

West Germany, citing the millions who fled East Germany before erection of the Berlin Wall in 1961, says the fortifications are to keep would-be East German defectors in.

Pieskar, who like many West Germans has relatives in the East, claims some residents of the border area are still apprehensive, although detente has eased fears of invasion.

Many were attracted here by cheap land and rural charm. Most of the several hundred residents of Eckertal moved here after creation in 1949 of East Germany, officially the German Democratic Republic, from the Soviet occupation zone.

West Germany was formed in the same year from the American, British and French zones.

East Germans must obtain special permission to live within three miles of the border, and residents of the district carry special identity cards. West Germans need no such special permission.

The border, a potential flashpoint of East-West conflict a generation ago, has become a tourist attraction, where thousands come each year to the Western side to peer through binoculars at a slice of life on the other side.

An occasional bicycle rider glides down the road beyond the fences, and during the summer tourists can watch East German farmers tend their crops.

The highway that once linked Eckertal and Stapelburg runs to the border, then resumes beyond a trench and fortifications.

Broncos blanked again

The Broncos were blanked by host Cal State Fullerton 48-0 in a contest played at Cerritos College.

The game marked the fourth time this year that Poly had been shut out, a new school record. It was also the third time in their last four games that the Broncos have been a victim of a goose-egg treatment.

Fullerton, a Division I school, just had too much of everything for the Broncos to handle Saturday night. The Titans rolled up a huge 463-193 advantage in total yardage in completely dominating the contest.

Poly, now 0-7 on the year, never advanced the ball closer than the Titan 34-yard line in the game. With the win Fullerton is now 4-5 on the season.

Bunn rushed for 70 yards and one touchdown, a 22-yard scamper in the third quarter. He also clicked on five-of-five passes for 67 yards while playing only a little over two quarters of football.

Steve Martindale took over the quarterbacking for Fullerton in the late going and ran for two more scores. Mike Martin also scored twice for the Titans, while Graves rushed for 52 yards and yet another Titan tally.

Poly's freshman quarterback Gordy Bohannon hit on seven of 16 passes, but those completions netted only 53 yards. Bohannon was also intercepted once.

Former Pomona High and Mt. San Antonio College signal-caller Steve Taylor took over for Bohannon in the final quarter and hit on two of eight tosses for 58 yards.

Poly netted only 82 rushing yards, with no individual totalling more than 26 of those stripes.

Cal Poly will hope to pick up its first win when it celebrates Homecoming Saturday night vs. Santa Clara.

Kings stymie Rangers again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Syl Apps, Mike Murphy and Marcel Dionne provided the scoring punch as the Los Angeles Kings handed the New York Rangers a 3-1 National Hockey League setback Saturday night.

The win was the Kings' second over the Rangers this season and kept Los Angeles unbeaten against New York in the last 11 games. The Kings are 10-0-1 during that stretch, dating back to 1975.

Apps, playing only his second game for the Kings since coming to Los Angeles in a trade from Pittsburgh last Tuesday, opened the scoring after 4:29 of play with his first goal of the year. He connected from the side of the net after Dionne's drive hit the board and bounced in front of Apps.

The Kings made it 2-0 on Murphy's short-handed goal early in the second period, with Tommy Williams and Butch Goring getting the assists. Murphy beat New York goalie John Davidson from 10 feet for his sixth goal of the season and his third in the last four games.

The Rangers scored with 11:15 left in the game on Lucien Deblois' 10-footer which eluded Los Angeles goalie Rogie Vachon.

Dionne's empty net goal with 1:17 left added an insurance tally for Los Angeles.

USC leaves Stanford standing in rain

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Stanford walked into a Cardinal and Gold thrashing machine . . . and was thrashed.

The 49-0 score tells the story. It was as one-sided as the score indicates. Rain that started about an hour before game time and continued through the first quarter kept about 6,000 fans away.

The 65,101, mostly USC fans, that turned out, didn't mind at all. The Trojans dominated offensively and defensively.

In dealing Stanford its worst defeat ever by a USC team, Troy out first-downed the visitors, 33-17, outrushed them, 453 yards to 42 and outgained them, 592 yards to 208.

But the road to the Rose Bowl is still a long way from being clear. Next, the Trojans journey to Seattle to do battle with Washington, surprise 50-34 victor over Cal.

The Huskies, UCLA and USC are all 4-1 (Stanford is 4-2). With UCLA hosting weak Oregon State (0-5) next, another USC-UCLA titanic is taking shape if USC can get by Washington.

"I'm amazed we shut Stanford out" said USC coach John Robinson. "Of course, we made all the interceptions today that we dropped last week.

"This was one of our best games all around. We just have to learn to relax. We were so uptight last week (against Cal) we just couldn't execute."

In the Trojans three losses beginning with the Alabama game, quarterback Rob Hertel had started out poorly completing only four of 29 passes with four interceptions in the first halves of the games.

Against Stanford, Hertel connected on five of nine aerials for 82 yards and two touchdowns (one interception) as Troy rolled to a 21-0 halftime lead.

"We didn't start our comeback too late, thank God," grinned Robinson. "I'm really proud of our kids. We never lost faith in ourselves. Today our team played as well as I've ever seen it play."

Along the way, fullback Mosi Tatupu (101 yards in 13 carries) put on the best running show of his career. A crunching blocker, the 6-0, 225-pound Samoan had never carried more than 11 times in a game nor hit the century mark in yardage.

Tailback Charles White (126 yards and two TDs in 16 carries) broke the conference sophomore rushing record and now has 1,114 yards on 217 rushes to break the mark of 1,034 set by Anthony Davis in 1972.

White also moved by Jon Arnett into seventh place on Troy's career rushing list with 1,972 yards in 21 games played.

Split end Randy Simmrin caught one pass for 26 yards and now has snared at least one in 33 straight games.

White saw his own conference freshman rushing record broken by Stanford's Darrin Nelson. Nelson was held to 22 yards on nine carries. But he needed only three yards to top White's 744.

Nelson, who had averaged 5.7 yards per carry coming into the contest, averaged only 2.44.

Cardinal Guy Benjamin, who was the nation's leading passer when the game started (65 percent completed for 1,878 yards and 16 touchdowns), was shackled by Troy's defense.

Benjamin completed half of his 38 passes for 208 yards. But he was intercepted four times and sacked four more coughing up the ball on one to set up one of USC's seven touchdowns.

"We knew we were confronted by a dramatically bigger and faster team today," said Stanford coach Bill Walsh. "At the beginning of the season, they were ranked first in the nation and we were no better than fifth in the conference.

"They were bigger and faster at every position today. USC's running is ominous. It's the best-balanced, most finely tuned team we've faced all year and the best team we've played."

Yet when Robinson walked into the dressing room, his head was down and one could have sworn his team had lost.

"I was just thinking about next week (Washington)," he said half seriously.

Washington had dealt Stanford its only previous Pac 8 loss, 41-25, at Washington Oct. 15.

TROJAN TATTLE — Hertel marched USC to a touchdown the first time USC had the ball. The TD was a thing of beauty with Lynn Cain, on a fourth and two at Stanford's six, faking a dive for the first down while Hertel lobbed a pass to wide open reserve tight end Dan Burns in the end zone.

PASSING GAME

Walnut High quarterback Steve Green winds up to pass during the Mustangs' 35-8 victory over Royal Oak Saturday night at MSAC. Green threw for over 250 yards in the game.

Rout Royal Oak, 35-8

Mustangs soothe memory

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Ken Gunn, head coach of Walnut High's Mustangs, hasn't forgotten last week's disappointing loss to Gladstone.

But the Mustangs' convincing 35-8 conquest of Royal Oak Saturday night at Mt. San Antonio College helped to blunt that memory.

"Anytime you beat Royal Oak, it takes some of the sting out," Gunn said after the game.

The "sting" was applied by the Gladiators last week, but the hurt has been mounting all season for the Mustangs, who took over second place in the Hacienda League with a 5-1 record (7-1 overall). Royal Oak fell into a third-place tie with Ontario at 4-2.

Walnut has been plagued this year by injuries — not the least of which knocked starting running backs Dave Woronkiewicz and Tony Rossi out of the lineup.

But sophomore Jon Vallejo, a 5-foot-9, 150-pound scooter, picked up the slack for the Mustangs Saturday night. He rushed 28 times for 132 yards and two touchdowns.

"Our offensive line did a great job tonight," said Gunn, "and I'm really proud of the way Vallejo carried the load."

Steve Green, the quarterback who has spearheaded Walnut's offense all year, had another exemplary game against the Romans. He completed 20 of 28 passes for 256 yards and a touchdown and was intercepted twice. Green now has 1,460 yards passing for the year.

But Walnut's offense didn't steal the show by any means Saturday night. The Mustang defense was, if anything, even more impressive.

"I've been hearing a lot about Royal Oak's defense," Gunn said, "but I think we hit harder than they did."

Walnut held Royal Oak to 146 total yards — 85 on the ground and 59 in the air — while the Mustangs rolled up 384 yards against a defense that had allowed just 36 points in five previous Hacienda League games.

Mustang defenders came up with four interceptions — two by Doug Vind and one each by Andy Crowe and Brad Hurst — while two Roman quarterbacks completed just two of 16 passes. Crowe's fourth-quarter interception went for a 40-yard touchdown and was followed on the next play from scrimmage by Hurst's interception.

Jim Schoulten, starting for the first time, caught eight of Green's passes while Pat Flaherty grabbed six and Hurst caught two for 81 yards.

Walnut will host Ontario Friday.

No luck as Owls stumble

MISSION VIEJO — Citrus College was its own worst enemy Saturday night in its Mission Conference showdown with Saddleback at Mission Viejo High.

The Owls turned the ball over eight times in losing to the Gauchos 25-14. Saddleback is now 5-0 in M.C. action while Citrus is 4-1.

Citrus gave the host Gauchos nine quick points at the very start of the action and never was able to catch up.

A lateral fumbled out of the end zone netted Saddleback a safety, and on its next possession the Owls fumbled on their own two and Greg Speicher ran it in for the Gauchos to make it 9-0.

A field goal made it 12-0 Saddleback early in the second quarter, but Citrus got back in that game as quarterback Ken Eriksen hit James Williams with a 25-yard TD toss.

However, a Citrus turnover cost the locals dearly again in the third quarter. The Owls lost a fumble at their own 11 and one play later Gaucho QB Billy Yancy hit Joe Haigh with an 8-yard scoring strike to push Saddleback's advantage to 19-7.

Leo Burke scored later in the quarter for the Owls to make it a tight 19-14 contest, but another TD run by Speicher, this one of four yards, iced the win for Saddleback.

The Gauchos finished with a 351-282 advantage in total yardage, thanks mainly to their defense holding Citrus to a net of only 36 yards on the ground.

Owl QB Eriksen had a big night with 16 completions in 34 attempts good for 243 yards, with Dave Kirby catching eight of those for 79 yards.

Norton emerges on split verdict

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ken Norton overcame the slight-of-hand style of Jimmy Young with a blasting body attack that carried him to a split 15-round decision Saturday night and kept him in good position for a rematch with heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali.

Norton, unable to attack effectively to the head of the elusive Young, scored well to the body and closed out the fight with a tremendous body attack as the crowd openly rooted for Young.

Nothing fancy in UCLA victory

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — UCLA's 21-3 victory over Oregon Saturday wasn't fancy, but it kept the Bruins in the midst of a tough battle for the Pacific-8 Conference crown.

Coach Terry Donahue complimented the effort of his defense, then was thankful that the Ducks, who dropped to 1-7, were without much offense too.

"If they would have had a passer to go with their offense, it could have been different," he said.

But Oregon's veteran quarterback Jack Henderson was out with a knee injury, and the Ducks struggled behind the command of freshman Dan Daly and sophomore Tim Durando.

Mike Molina's 52-yard return of an interception for a touchdown with 26 seconds left in the half was the turning point, giving the struggling Bruins a 14-0 halftime edge. The interception came on a fourth-down play.

"There's no question that was the key play in the game because it gave us a little momentum and we were certainly hanging on at that time," Donahue said.

He had praise for Oregon's defense, which had given up 199 points in its last four games.

"I felt they fought very hard," Donahue said. "They guessed a lot and stunted a great deal and guessed right, which means we must have some real tendencies that they picked up on."

UCLA scored first on an eight-yard pass from Rick Bashore to Theotis Brown, capping a 48-yard drive.

Meanwhile, four times the Ducks were forced to start inside their own 20 and they failed to muster any offensive threat.

UCLA, now tied with Southern Cal and Washington atop the Pac-8 at 4-1, scored its third touchdown on the first play when Freeman McNeil bulled over the goal from one yard out.

Oregon's lone score came on Roy Geiger's 39-yard field goal with 3:16 left in the game.

Frank Corral's booming punts forced Oregon to start drives from the six, the 15 twice and the 19 as the Ducks had just three first downs in the first half.

COACH JOHN McKAY . . .
. . . returns to Coliseum

Tampa Bay visits Coliseum

Rams 'assured' of win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John McKay made a triumphant exit from Los Angeles, but his return to the Coliseum today will be as coach of the non-winning Tampa Bay Buccaneers who still seek their first National Football League victory.

They aren't favored to do it this time either as they face the in-and-out Los Angeles Rams.

"I know that sooner or later he'll turn that Tampa Bay team around and make them winners," says Rams quarterback Pat Haden in assaying McKay for whom he played during glory years at the University of Southern California.

At USC, McKay posted a 127-40-8 record with four national collegiate championships. On an opposite vein, his Buccaneers are 0-21 in NFL play.

Ricky Bell, the tailback who played for McKay at USC and was Tampa Bay's No. 1 draft choice last season, the first man to be picked in the NFL selection process, commented:

"This has been very difficult for me. Winning has been part of my life. I will never adjust to losing. At SC, winning made life enjoyable."

Bell then commented, "I feel sorry for our defensive guys. They've really done well. They gave up only one offensive touchdown against both Minnesota and Dallas. Offensively, we just aren't consistent."

The Rams haven't been consistent either although they're tied with Atlanta for the lead in the NFC West with a 4-3 mark. After whipping Minnesota 35-3 two weeks ago, Los Angeles was upset by New Orleans 27-26.

Bell and Anthony Davis, both running stars are USC, are newcomers to the Bucs — Davis coming to the NFL after a season in the now defunct World Football League and another in Canada. Wide receiver John McKay Jr., is another of the former USC Rose Bowl stars on he club.

In fact, young McKay teamed with Haden, the Rams starting quarterback, to make a winning passing combination in both high school and college and roomed with the McKays during his final high school year.

Haden won the starting job back from Joe Namath four games into the season and now has 41 completions in 69 attempts for 612 yards and five touchdowns.

The kickoff is at 1 p.m. PST with a crowd of 50,000 expected for the Coliseum return of John McKay.

Local SCIAC squads fall

La Verne, Claremont-Mudd and Pomona-Pitzer all found the welcome as cold and wet as the weather Saturday night.

The Leopards dropped a 32-17 game at Redlands. The Stags fell at Occidental, 21-7, and Pomona-Pitzer was bombed, 53-6, at Whittier.

Whittier and Redlands remain undefeated (3-0) in conference play. La Verne and Pomona-Pitzer are winless (0-3) in the SCIAC. Claremont-Mudd, by virtue of having played the Sagehens, is 1-2.

At Redlands, it poured before the game started, hailed when it began and the Bulldogs rained on the Leos all night.

The Leopards took the opening kickoff and David Serrano returned it 38 yards to the Bulldogs' 42. Three plays later, Andrew Ford kicked a 44-yard field goal to give the Leos their only lead, 3-0, 1:46 into the game.

Redlands then drove 69 yards in six plays for its first TD. The Bulldogs tallied twice more before La Verne got on the board again.

It was 22-10 at the half, 29-10 after three quarters.

Ben Morrow was the Leos' leading rusher with 64 yards on 18 carries. Robbie Hogan, taking over for Brad Frick, had 49 yards on 16 carries.

Redlands outgained the Leopards, 309-277 and had 16 first downs.

At Whittier, Pomona-Pitzer was blanked until the last three minutes when quarterback Lyle Lansdell scored on a five-yard run.

The Sagehens showed a net of 38 yards gained to Whittier's 451. The 'Hens had a minus 49 yards rushing and a total of 87 passing for their net of 38. Bob Warren of Whittier was the game's leading rusher with 110 yards on 22 carries.

Chaffey awaits biggie

CHULA VISTA — Chaffey College set up its titanic, a week hence, in the Mission Conference race Saturday night as the Panthers scored a comfortable 24-16 win at Southwestern.

That credit sign hiked the Panthers' MC mark to 4-1 and 7-1 overall. However, it's all on the line next weekend when they host unbeaten Saddleback.

Although sporting but a 3-0 edge at intermission, Chaffey broke the game open in the third period as the Panthers scored three times for a 24-0 advantage.

Craig Ralston set up Chaffey's initial points when he recovered a fumble at the Southwestern 12-yard line and with 40 seconds remaining before the half, Paul Belmudes booted a 30-yard field goal.

Chaffey wasted little time in the second half as it marched 81 yards on its initial possession — Bob Pleasant covering the final 15 on a sweep of right end.

Knights ramble to win

Ontario Christian High nailed down at least a tie for the Olympic League title Saturday afternoon by blanking host Los Angeles Baptist 44-0.

The Knights are now 6-0 in Olympic League outings and will close out their regular season Friday night by hosting Bell-Jeff. OCHS is 7-1 on the season.

In the only other prep outing Saturday, La Verne Lutheran dropped a 27-0 outing to San Jacinto — the latter holding a share of the Arrowhead League lead with Webb.

Quarterback Joe DeHoog led the way for the Knights Saturday in the rout of L.A. Baptist. DeHoog clicked on 13 of 25 passes good for 205 yards and three touchdowns.

DeHoog hooked up with Roger Sybesma, Bob Aukeman and Dave Hooyenga for the TD aerials. OCHS rushers added 107 yards to the Knight offense.

As effective as the Ontario Christian offense was, its defense was even better. The Knights, in posting their second shutout of the season, shut down Baptist completely and accounted for eight points themselves.

Bernie Mulder picked off a pass and returned it 38 yards for a touchdown, and the Knight defense also pressured the Baptist quarterback into fumbling out of the end zone for a safety.

Defensive end Tom Lanting added three sacks to the OCHS effort.

Record, record . . .

NCAA mark

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson broke the NCAA single game passing yardage record Saturday, throwing for 571 yards and five touchdowns as 14th-ranked BYU rolled over Utah 38-8.

The sophomore quarterback, who became a starter four games ago when Gifford Nielsen was injured, broke the NCAA mark of 561 yards set by Tony Adams of Utah State in 1972.

NAIA feat

FAYETTE, Mo. (AP) — Central Methodist quarterback Tom Stine connected on 24 of 34 passes for 571 yards and a new NAIA record Saturday afternoon as he led his team to a 56-43 win over Culver-Stockton.

The junior quarterback from Florrisant, Mo., topped the previous NAIA high of 564 passing yards in a single game which was set last year by Jim Reese of Abilene Christian Univerisity in Abilene, Tex.

NCAA log

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Doug Williams threw seven touchdown passes and became the NCAA's career passing leader Saturday as Grambling University smashed Langston College 65-0 in college football.

Top powers roll up scores

By The Associated Press

Notre Dame, Michigan and Oklahoma all exploded over the 60-point level as several college football teams rolled up big scores in a record-making Saturday.

The fifth-ranked Fighting Irish buried Georgia Tech 69-14, sixth-ranked Michigan crushed hapless Northwestern 63-20 and No. 3 Oklahoma walloped Oklahoma State 61-28, setting the tone for a rash of high-scoring games among the nation's elite teams.

Also among the day's big point-makers was Washington, a 50-31 conquerer of No. 17 California; 16th-rated Southern Cal, which beat Stanford 49-0; No. 12 Pitt, a 44-3 winner over West Virginia and No. 14 Brigham Young, a 38-8 victor over Utah.

Meanwhile, second-ranked Alabama wrapped up a berth in the Sugar Bowl with a 24-3 whipping of No. 18 Louisiana State. The victory gave the Crimson Tide its sixth Southeastern Conference title in seven years and an automatic spot in the Sugar Bowl game Jan. 2, 1978 at the New Orleans Superdome.

In other action involving Top Ten teams, Texas walloped Houston 35-21; fourth-ranked Ohio State smashed Illinois 350; No. 7 Kentucky trimmed Vanderbilt 28-6 and No. 9 Penn State edged North Carolina State 21-17.

Among the rest of the nation's ranked teams, No. 11 Nebraska subdued Missouri 21-10; No. 13 Clemson played to a 1313 tie with North Carolina; 15th-rated Florida State bested Virginia Tech 23-21 and Colorado scored a 12-7 victory over Iowa State, ranked No. 19 in the country.

Joe Montana passed for 273 yards and three touchdowns, scored another on a one-yard sneak and ran for a two-point conversion to lead Notre Dame's romp over Georgia Tech.

Rick Leach ran for two touchdowns and passed for two others in a third-quarter barrage that led Michigan over winless Northwestern in their Big Ten game. The Wolverines led by only 14-7 at halftime before breaking the game open in the third period.

Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott rushed for 103 yards on 17 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, and passed for 85 more yards to pace the Sooners' slaughter of Oklahoma State.

Warren Moon ran for two touchdowns in the decisive third quarter and Michael Jackson of the ball-hawking Washington defense intercepted two passes as the Huskies, sharing the Pacific-8 football lead, beat California.

Tony Nathan scored two touchdowns on one-yard plunges and fired a 20-yard touchdown pass as Alabama overcame a rash of fumbles to beat Louisiana State.

Top-ranked Texas, ignited by Earl Campbell's three touchdowns and quarterback Randy McEachern's field generalship, stunned Houston in a Southwest Conference game.

Ohio State, held to one touchdown in the first half, erupted for three in the third quarter — two in a span of 13 seconds — and rolled over Big Ten foe Illinois.

Longest win streak ends

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Danny Rogers snared a 79-yard touchdown pass from Terry Skinner and Tom Hay added the key extra point Saturday night as East Texas State shaded No. 1-ranked Texas A&I 7-6 to snap the Javelinas' 46-game unbeaten streak.

The last time Texas A&I lost was Nov. 10, 1973.

SCIAC harrier finals

Sagehens sharp

WHITTIER — Pomona-Pitzer had a big day at the SCIAC Cross-Country Finals here Saturday afternoon.

The Sagehen runners nabbed second place behind Occidental in the men's race and won the women's division. Claremont-Mudd was third in both the men's and women's race.

Oxy's Tom Colley won the individual honors with a 26:23 clocking on the Whittier College course. Pomona-Pitzer's Gerry Harnett was the top local among the men with a fourth-place finish (27:06). Other 'Hens running well were Gerard Honore (10th), Nick Buchan (12th) and Jeff Lee (13th).

Caltech's Celia Peterson won the women's race. Sagehen runners Ruth Hales, Kathy Laun, Erika Klopfer and Caroline Deuerling all finished in the top ten to pace the locals to the team victory.

The Oxy men and Pomona-Pitzer's Harnett will now advance to the NCAA Division III Nationals, to be held Wednesday at Case-Western Reserve U. in Cleveland, Ohio.

Don Lugo wins crucial

SANTA MARIA — Don Lugo High, with its hopes for a CIF playoff berth riding on the outcome, scored a crucial 24-14 win over host St. Joseph here Saturday afternoon.

The win for the Conquistadores ups their season record to 4-2-1 and keeps their hopes for a CIF playoff berth alive. The "Q's", with one game remaining (at Chino High Saturday night vs. Brentwood), are seeking entry into the playoffs as a free-lance team.

Don Lugo looked most impressive Saturday in beating St. Joseph, a team from the rugged Los Padres League. Lugo rallied from a 14-14 halftime tie to dominate the action in the final two quarters and pull out the victory.

"This was the biggest game in Don Lugo's history," a happy Conquistador coach John Monger said afterward. "They are a real good team and are tough to beat at home, but we did it.

"I'm especially pleased since we have over 400 of our fans travel to Santa Maria for the game," Monger contined. "It was a big thrill for our team."

Running back Carlos Sanchez paced the Lugo effort Saturday by racking up 181 yards on 21 carries and scoring two touchdowns.

However, it took a 3-yard pass from quarterback Bobby Malins to Evan Mathews on a fourth-down play in the third quarter to net the winning TD for Lugo.

Malins finished with seven completions in nine attempts, good for 113 yards. Fullback Manuel Villalobos added 49 yards to the Lugo ground game.

Running back Randy Murrlow led St. Joseph with 120 yards on the ground.

Don Lugo	7	7	7	3—24

'Lame duck' on pole

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — "Lame duck" Sam Sommers, who found out much to his surprise last week that he has been fired, stunned the favorites and put his Chevrolet on the pole position for today's Dixie 500 Grand National stock car race.

Sommers, driving what may be his last race for Savannah businessman M.C. Anderson, roared around the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway at an average speed of 160.229 miles per hour.

Richard Petty ran 160.084 mph in his Dodge to earn the other front row starting position in the 40-car field, which was filled Saturday.

Steady rains that had prevented any track activity since Thursday let up Saturday morning. Officials had been considering postponing Sunday's race one week if the rain hadn't stopped by Saturday afternoon.

Finals simply no match

Evert quiets King

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, her machine-like ground strokes working to perfection, overwhelmed Billie Jean King 6-2, 6-2 Saturday to win the $250,000 women's tennis Series championships.

Evert, who earned $75,000 for her victory in the round-robin tournament, completely dominated the foe she has replaced as the first lady of women's tennis.

King had won three straight tournaments on the championship series circuit going into this event at Mission Hills Country Club, but her game was definitely not up to par in the final against her old rival.

King's only real threat in the nationally televised match came in the third game of the opening set, when she led two games to one and seemed near a service break with Evert down 0-40.

But Evert, usually at her best under pressure, came back to win that game and went on to coast through the next four.

The second set was all Evert, as she broke King's service in the third and fifth games.

King, saying she was very disappointed with her play, added that Evert always seems to be at her best when they meet.

"She's always loose when she plays me," the 33-year-old King remarked. "She feels like she has nothing to lose. But of course today my game was absolutely shocking."

Evert, 22, who first began playing King when she was a teen-ager, said that her attitude toward her long-time opponent remains the same today.

"I was 14 or 15 when I first started playing her," said Evert. "She was, and is, a living legend, and I felt I had nothing to lose. I never feel nervous playing her and I always seem to be at my best."

Both Evert and King have been bothered by physical ailments in the past year.

King underwent the third knee operation of her career about a year ago, and has been slowly working her way back into shape.

Scuffle ends in forfeit

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky State was awarded a 1-0 college football forfeit victory Saturday when Livingstone Coach Baxter Holman took his players off the field late in the first half.

With 18 seconds left in the first half, Kentucky State running back Ruie Hannah caught a pass from Curt Sullivan to put the ball on the Livingstone 43.

Kentucky State, leading 8-0 at the time, was called for clipping and late-hit penalties on the play, which precipitated a scuffle between the two teams.

Holman, who objected to the call by the official, wouldn't let his players return to field after order was restored.

The fighting lasted about two minutes. Both benches cleared, but the players were "headed off before a major brawl," a Kentucky State spokesman said.

Middleweight crown

Valdes champ

CAMPIONE D'ITALIA (AP) — Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia outpointed Bennie Briscoe of the United States in a 15-round fight in this North Italian gambling center Saturday night and won the vacant world middleweight boxing title.

The 31-year-old Colombian won a unanimous decision in succeeding Carlos Monzon of Argentina as the champion. Monzon retired from boxing earlier this year after seven years as titleholder following his second triumph over Valdes.

The bout was a pale carbon of the 1974 title fight between the two boxers who traded savage blows for seven rounds until Valdes landed a right hook which knocked out Briscoe. It was the only knockout in the American's long career.

The two fighters also had met in 1973 when Valdes won a decision. That bout also was more exciting than this one.

Briscoe and Valdes lacked continuity and appeared tired at the end of the 15 rounds. Briscoe tried to slow down Valdes, working on the body from the outset.

Valdes was faster afoot and with his punches, but Briscoe occasionally had him in trouble.

Briscoe kept moving forward, trying to wear down Valdes. But the American often was stopped at mid-range by the Colombian's left jabs and right hooks. Briscoe, born in Georgia but now living in Philadelphia, kept boring in. But Valdez was a superior boxer and rallied every time the American began threatening.

Borg nabs Cologne Tourney

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Wimbledon ace Bjorn Borg of Sweden defeated Hungary's Balazs Taraczy 6-2, 6-3 in the $50,000 Cologne Grand Prix Tennis Tournament Saturday to enter the men's singles finals as the favorite.

Borg gave a glittering 90-minute performance before 6,000 spectators in Cologne's indoor sports hall.

Ignoring medical advice to drop out of the tournament because of the flu, Poland's Wojtek Fibak battled on despite a fever to defeat Buster Mottram of Britain 6-0, 3-6, 6-4 in another semifinal match.

Fibak slackened his pace after winning the first set, promptly losing the next set. The Pole rallied in the third set to show stronger nerves than Mottram, who managed to fend off three matchpoints before succumbing.

'Disney leaders three up

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones blended their talents for a back-9 29 that propelled them to a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World National Team Golf Classic.

"The only really nice thing about a third-round lead," said Jones, "is that you know if you play good the next day you're going to win. If you're trailing, you can play good and not win."

Gilbert and Jones had a better-ball score of 61, a whopping 11 under par on the rainsoaked, 7,197-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World and compiled a 54-hole total of 187, a dizzying 29 under par.

Tied for second at 190 were the teams of Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin and Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mexican Victor Regalado. Weiskopf and Irwin combined for a better ball 63 in the cloudy, threatening weather, while Regalado and Rodriguez clowned their way to a 65.

"We've still got a lot of golf to play," warned Gilbert. "And we've got some tough teams behind us—Irwin and Weiskopf aren't gonna be easy to handle. I just hope we can do it.

"Our strategy is to put two balls on every green and give us a par-option-birdie opportunity."

Steve Melnyk and Andy North were 4 strokes back at 191 after a 64.

Rodriguez and Regalado held a 1-stroke lead going into the third round and obviously were disappointed with their performance.

"Overall," said Rodriguez, "we played lousy. We played just like a Puerto Rican and a Mexican."

Eddie Pearce and Terry Catlett had a 64 for 192 and were tied at that figure with Morris Hatalsky and Don Pooley, who had a 63.

Johnny Miller, playing with Japan's Tsuneyuki Nakajima, had a 64 and a 193 total. They were tied with veterans Charles Coody and Lou Graham, George Burns and Ben Crenshaw, Lon Hinkle and Craig Stadler. Hinkle-Stadler had 66, Burns-Crenshaw 62, Coody-Graham 64.

Former champions Mac McLendon and Hubert Green, the current U.S. Open titleholder, were 66-195.

On the 15th, Jones started a three-hole birdie-binge that put them in front. He scored on putts of 15, 6 and 12 feet and Gibby capped it off with a 22-footer for birdie on the 18th.

Cauthen guides winner

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Johnny D., ridden by sensational 17-year-old jockey Steve Cauthen, unleashed a burst of speed leaving the backstretch and coasted to victory Saturday in the $200,000 Washington D.C. International at Laurel Race Course.

The 3-year-old gelded son of Stage Door Johnny, owned by Dana S. Bray Jr. of Twins Falls, N.Y. and representing the United States, ended France's four-year dominance of the International.

The Virginia-bred Johnny D., who opened up his lead to as much as 10 lengths entering the stretch, scored by 2½ lengths over Ogden Mills Phipps' Majestic Light, the 5-2 second choice who made a belated stretch run in the 1½-mile turf test.

Nelson Bunker Hunt's Exceller, the 3-2 favorite representing France, rallied to finish third in the field of eight, but was 14 lengths behind Majestic Light.

Cauthen, who recently became the first jockey to earn $5 million in purses in a single year, rode Johnny D. over the soft course in a slow time of 2:42.

The winner returned $22, $7 and $3.80. Majestic Light paid $3.80 and $3.20 and Exceller returned $2.60.

WHEN'S A BIG Fella COMING TO POMONA

Adult cage loops set

Registration for the Pomona Park and Recreation Department adult basketball program are now being accepted. Teams may sign up on the night they wish to play.

Practice games to determine classification begin in December with league play beginning in January. Leagues are classified A, B, or C and there is a half court program.

Players must be at least 16 years old and not have played high school, college or professional basketball since Sept. 1 of this year.

For information regarding entry fees or registration, call 620-2321 from 8:15 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Deadline to sign up is Nov. 30.

Gyms are open for practice now from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Fremont Jr. High (Tuesdays), Simons (Wednesday) and Emerson (Thursdays).

Class offered for cage refs

The Pomona Park and Recreation Department will have a class on basketball officiating starting Monday night at 6 p.m.

Persons attending the classes, in the City Hall Boards and Commission Room each Monday through Dec. 12, must be at least 16 years old.

Those attending will have the opportunity to officiate in the city's youth and adult basketball programs this season.

UP AND OVER — Claremont's Bob Hadley makes a successful jump at recent NBA Grand Nationals at Northridge. Hadley is one of the top-rated riders in the rapidly-growing sport of bicycle motocross racing and has raced across the nation helping to promote the sport.

Claremont's Hadley shines

Hadley finished the main event behind only current national champion, Stuart Thomsen in a field of the country's top 50 riders. The event was held at Devonshire Downs in Northridge.

Thomsen also captured the Open Pro class. Over 1,000 riders from ages 6 to 21 participated in the event, the largest BMX meet ever held. Riders from Arizona, Colorado, Hawaii, Nevada, Oklahoma and Washington joined with the Northern, Central, Southern and San Diego divisions of California for the meet.

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles had proclaimed Sunday, Oct. 30 (the date of the race) as official Bicycle Motocross Day in L.A. Over 100,000 young people compete in the fast-growing sport of bicycle racing.

Claremont's Hadley is currently number two in point standings for the Southern California Division of the NBA, with a total of 5,601 points. He placed second in the 16-and-over Expert Class in the halftime races at the Coliseum during a Rams-Eagles exhibition football game earlier this year, after having competed this summer in races in Arizona, Georgia, Kansas, Missouri, Ohio and Oklahoma.

Hadley is also editor of the NBA World, and a contributing writer to Bicycle Motocross News and Bicycle Motocross Action magazine. His picture is currently featured in a major bicycle manufactor's ad for motocross bikes.

Another valley youth, Brian Dworshak of Alta Loma, also did well in the Grand Nationals. Dworshak, sponsored by the Bike Shoppe of Pomona, placed third in the 14-and-over Open Class.

Brook Hadley, 13, also of Claremont, competed in the 13-year-old Open and Expert classes, making it to the main event in both classes. Brook is a student at El Roble Junior High in Claremont.

Bob Hadley is a graduate of Our Lady of the Assumption School in Claremont and Don Bosco Tech High in Rosemead.

Ron LeFlore top Tiger

DETROIT (AP) — Outfielder Ron LeFlore was named Tiger of the Year Tuesday by the Detroit chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

LeFlore received 22 of a possible 38 votes, including two half votes by writers who split their choice between LeFlore and first baseman Jason Thompson.

Thompson was runnerup with eight votes. Pitcher Dave Rozema — named Tiger Rookie of the Year a few days ago by broadcasters — and second baseman Tito Fuentes got one vote each.

LeFlore wound up as the leading right-handed hitter in the American League. His .325 average was fifth behind four lefties.

Amateur cross-city run slated for Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES — the normally peaceful, quiet streets of downtown Los Angeles will be awakened Sunday, Nov. 13 with a gunshot fired by Mayor Tom Bradley as he starts thousands of runners surging up Olive Street towards the County Courthouse marking the start of the Los Angeles Athletic Club Mercury 10k Run.

Amateur runners will be leaving the club at Seventh and Olive streets at 9 a.m. on a course that will take them by the Biltmore Hotel, the County Courthouse, Music Center, Bonaventure Hotel and much of downtown.

While winding south on the 6.2 mile course, runners will pass the University of Southern California, Exposition Park and enter the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum for the finish.

Early entries include some of the country's finest distance runners, along with hordes of "advanced joggers," according to Superior Court Judge Jack Goertzen, chairman of the group spearheading the event.

Best known of the Los Angeles area entrants is Miki Gorman, a 42-year-old Japanese-American housewife who twice has been the top woman finisher in the Boston Marathon and most recently defended her women's title in this year's New York City Marathon with a winning time of 2 hours, 41 minutes and 10 seconds. Miki has won numerous other international women's events.

From the start at Seventh and Olive, the Mercury 10k Run will go north on Olive to First Street; west on First to Hope Street; south on Hope (which merges into Flower) to 33rd Street; west on 33rd to Figueroa; south on Figueroa to Santa Barbara Avenue; west on Santa Barbara to Menlo Avenue; north on Menlo to Coliseum Drive; and east on Coliseum Drive to the tunnel leading into the Coliseum.

Spectators wishing to view the end of the race will be admitted into the Coliseum without charge.

The winner's time in the race is expected to be 30 to 35 minutes. Last place finishers may take up to one hour.

As a special activity within the event, the National Athletic Health Institute (NAHI) is setting up monitoring stations at the finish line to perform "quick look" heart checks on all runners who wish to take part.

Runners interested in entering the Mercury 10k Run can obtain additional information by contacting the athletic office of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, (213) 625-2211, ext. 231.

A SMILING 'SHOE' — Willie Shoemaker displays a happy grin while talking with a fan prior to the start of a race at Santa Anita recently. 'The Shoe' has been racing professionally since 1949 and has had a banner campaign at S.A. this year.

Shoemaker at top of career at 46

Bill Shoemaker, at the age of 46, has brought eight horses to victory in $100,000-added stakes races this year. Winnings of his mounts in 1977 have reached $3.2 million.

Not bad for a guy who was 30 years old when Steve Cauthen was born. Career earnings of horses ridden by "The Shoe" have reached $64.3 million.

He made upwards of $2 million per year every year from 1956 through 1966, reaching $3 million for the first time in 1967, and again in 1975.

Cauthen, the riding sensation of eastern tracks the past year, recently surpassed $5 million in 1977 earnings by his horses. But the youngster has just two big stakes race victories so far — compared to Shoemaker's 127 victories in stakes races above the $100,000 level.

Two of Shoemaker's 1977 stakes victories have come on Forego, horse of the year in 1976 and a candidate again this year.

"I feel good right now," Shoemaker says, "I run a lot and play tennis, and I guess I'll keep riding until I don't feel like it any more."

His grey, thinning hair, and all-time status alongside such sports figures as Dempsey, Nicklaus, Tilden and Ruth are not the only things that set Shoemaker apart from the other jockeys at Santa Anita's Oak Tree meeting. Shoemaker rides only 4-5 mounts a day — compared to 5-7 for other leading jockeys — but a much higher percentage of his horses finish in the money.

Shoemaker and Darrel McHargue are competing for most victories in the month-long Oak Tree meeting that ends Monday.

At the much-longer Santa Anita meeting, Shoemaker was the leading jockey for 17 years consecutively until he suffered severe leg and pelvic injuries in accidents in 1968 and 1969.

He says there are no after effects of the near-crippling fracture of his left femur — considered the strongest bone in the body — which kept him out of action 13 months. Since then he has lowered the quantity of his riding, but not the quality.

Angels recall seven

ANAHEIM — The Angels reached the 40-man roster limit by purchasing the contracts of seven players, including six California residents, while outrighting the trio of players to Salt Lake City.

General Manager Harry Dalton announced the outright assignments of infielder Orlando Ramirez, righthander Pat Cristelli and outfielder Frankie George, all to Salt Lake City.

In addition, California will lose three players via the re-entry draft. The Angels have received notification outfielder Carlos May, a six-year player, has opted to become a free agent. Unsigned players Danny Briggs and Mario Guerrero also will be eligible for the November 4 draft.

Lansford, 20, hit .332 for the Diablos. His hit total included 18 home runs and 94 RBI's.

Kubski led the Texas League with 114 runs scored and 177 hits while fashioning a .324 average. Anderson was a .285 hitter with 18 homers and 73 RBI's. After being promoted from Salinas mid-way through the season, Rayford compiled a .295 average at El Paso.

Botting, 22, jumped from Salinas to El Paso by virtue of posting an 8-0 record with a 2.04 ERA. He was 5-7 in the Texas league.

Quintana, who has had brief trials with the Angels and Atlanta Braves, saved three games for Salt Lake City.

NFL roundup

Ray Guy to test Seahawks

By Associated Press

If you want to know about a baseball pitcher, ask the guy who has to swing against him.

If you want to know about a hockey goalie ask the guy who has to shoot against him.

And, if you want to know about a football punter, ask the guy who has to kick against him.

If you ask Bucky Dilts, who punts for the Denver Broncos, the best in his business is Oakland's Ray Guy, who'll be doing his thing this week against the Seattle Seahawks as the National Football League heads into the second half of its season.

Dilts watched Guy consistently pin the Broncos as Oakland handed Denver its first loss of the season last week and moved into a tie for first place in the American Conference West.

"Ray Guy is fantastic," said Dilts. "He discourages offenses with his punts. They hang up there 4.8 seconds or longer and they climb toward the third deck."

Guy averaged 49.1 yards for eight kicks against Denver and leads the league in his specialty. Dilts is not surprised. "He's the best!" the Denver kicker said.

Included in Guy's performance against the Broncos was a 72-yard kick, longest in the NFL this season. "We wanted to keep their backs to the wall and have them staring at 80 yards each time they got the ball," said John Madden, coach of the Raiders.

The Seahawks, coming off a 56-17 thumping of Buffalo, will have to deal with Guy's punts and the rest of the Raiders today while Denver faces Pittsburgh in a key AFC game that will affect the standings in the Central and West Divisions. The Steelers are one game back of Cleveland in the Central race with the Browns hosting Cincinnati, two games off the pace. Houston, also two behind in the AFC Central, is at home against Chicago.

Seattle set NFL highs in points and net yards (559) in destroying the Bills last week for the Seahawks' second victory of the season.

Washington plays at Baltimore Monday night.

The Cowboys are off to their best start ever and lead the NFC East by a comfortable three games.

Minnesota is two games up in the NFC Central and in the West, Los Angeles and Atlanta are tied for the top at 4-3.

The races are tighter in the AFC. Besides the Oakland-Denver tie in the West, just two games separate the four clubs in the Central. And in the East, Baltimore, 6-1, is one game in front of both New England and Miami, both 5-2 and tied for second place.

Colts announce Monday sellout

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts say next Monday's night's National Football League game against the Washington Redskins is sold out.

A spokeswoman for the Colts said Tuesday more than 60,000 tickets had been sold for the Memorial Stadium clash, and that the nationally televised game will be carried on TV stations in the Baltimore-Washington area.

Home games must be sold out at least 72 hours in advance for the local TV blackout to be lifted.

It will be the second consecutive sellout for the Colts. Last Sunday's 31-21 victory over Pittsburgh was played before a Memorial Stadium record crowd of 60,225.

Tee to Cup

'Support your pro' week

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

This week has been designated "Support Your PGA Professional Week" in Southern California. Any golfer taking a lesson from a PGA country club pro from Nov. 7-12 will receive two season tickets to the PGA Cup Matches, Nov. 17-20 at Mission Hills C.C. near Palm Springs. The tickets are valued at $16.

The fifth annual PGA Cup Matches, sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Company, consist of competition between United States and a combined team from Great Britain and Ireland

Americans have walked off with the matches since play started in 1973.

Members of the U.S. team are Larry Gilbert, Brandenburg, Ky.; Tim Collins, Greenville, S.C.; George Bellino, Canfield, Ohio; Bob Duden, Portland, Ore.; Bruce Summerhays, Palo Alto, Calif.; Jim Albus, Staten Island, N.Y.; George Lanning, Tacoma, Wash.; Bob Galloway, Rock Hill, S.C.; and Jim Ferriell, Milford, Ohio.

The Andy Williams San Diego Open is scheduled this winter to be held from Jan. 25-29 at Torrey Pines. Defending champ is reliable Tom Watson.

It always amazes me that groundskeepers are able to keep Southland courses well-manicured in the winter. Lately, I have visited three courses — Hesperia, Chino Creek, and Via Verde C.C. — and all are in expert condition.

Hesperia's greens these days are a bit bumpier and slower than formerly, but the course is in superb condition.

I hope to take a gander today at Rancho California near Temecula. The course is remarkably well-groomed all year long. I have never played Rancho when it wasn't a real joy.

Recently, we published a list of the top golf courses in the United States. I have been working on a list of the finest golf courses in the Pomona Valley, but I'm not sure that I'll ever release the list.

It seems to me that the golfer has an almost impossible time of it judging a course completely objectively. I can honestly say that when I'm playing well the course looks much more attractive than when I'm hacking around. Anyway, it's fun to look at courses and play expert.

I'm reminded that the La Verne Chamber of Commerce will hold the fall tournament on Friday, Nov. 18 at San Dimas Canyon Golf Course.

Tee-off times are scheduled from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. A $20 entry fee includes green fees, cart, awards and dinner. Extra dinner tickets can be purchased for $5.25. A batch of awards will be given for low gross, low net, and calloway winners.

Persons interested in learning more about the event can call 593-5265.

Deane Beman, commissioner, PGA tour, appears sold on the new Pepsi-Cola Mixed Team championship arrangement. Set up for Dec. 1-5 at Bardmoor C.C., Largo, Fla., the competition calls for a male and female pro to play as a team.

Beman says, "The new tournament provides a change of pace for our players. Golf is meant to be played for fun. I know our players will enjoy the tournament. The team concept of a man and a woman will make this championship a refreshing event."

The 19th edition of the Bob Hope Desert Classic will feature a record $273,000 in prize money.

A daily total of $10,000 will be awarded in the pro-am portion of the '78 Hope, which will be played Feb. 8-11 on all four Classic courses, Bermuda Dunes, Eldorado, Indian Wells, and La Quinta country clubs.

The pros will finish up the fifth day of the tournament at Bermuda Dunes.

Men's Club members at Via Verde C.C. will hold their Las Vegas Night on Wednesday from 8 until 11 p.m.

Arnold Scott, assistant professional at Red Hill C.C. since 1954, died recently. Scott served with four head professionals and was often praised for his "efficiency, dependability, cheerfulness and pleasing manner."

He was regarded as a great asset to Red Hill C.C. by members and employes. He will be missed.

The 1977 Southern California Open, will be moved to Apple Valley C.C. and will be held from Wednesday through Friday, Dec. 14-16.

The popular tournament was held last year at Via Verde C.C. and Glendora C.C. Entries for the $12,500 event is $75 for amateurs, $100 for PGA members, and $125 for non-members.

Entertainment and sports personalities will gather at Yorba Linda C.C. on Monday, Nov. 14 for the first annual Tommy John Cystic Fibrosis Celebrity Golf Classic.

All proceeds will aid the research programs of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

The public is invited to attend the event for a $2 donation to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. The tournament is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. in shotgun fashion.

Johnny Miller talking about his disappointing 1977.

"It has been a crazy year. But there comes a time when you have to realize that no job is easy. You have to work at it and I wasn't willing to do that awhile ago. It's a little like the guy playing the slot machine. When he's winning, it's so easy he gets the idea he can keep winning even if he doesn't put any money in the machine. It doesn't work that way."

Just before the start of the final round of the Southern Open, Jerry Pate received a phone call from his good friend, Coach Bear Bryant. The Bear wished him luck, and just like the Crimson Tide, Jerry rolled, winning by seven strokes.

Darlene Jones won the President's Cup recently at Mountain Meadows Golf Course in women's match play competition. Runnerup was Arlene Waltersheild.

Age doesn't bother Howe

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — There is a widely circulated report that Gordie Howe, the hockey player, is old. It has no basis in fact.

Yet it persists, simply because he was born some 49½ years ago, and is in his 30th campaign on ice.

Much is made of his age, particularly at this time of year, when his computer body rejects the idea of retirement as premature and he plunges ahead into another opening, another show.

Every fall, observers take note of the thinning, floppy grey-white hair which speaks of his years, recall that he was born when Herbert Hoover was president of the United States, and are variously amazed, amused, awed and-or envious. And always skeptical.

Well, forget the common ground rules. Gordie Howe hasn't yet acknowledged them. He is one of a nearly extinct breed of athlete who defies the human condition as a matter of course and simply overrules the calendar. The computer body is his yardstick, nothing else.

"When my body tells me it's time to quit, I'll quit," he says.

"I've had a few nights like that," he adds. "A few nights when it told me to slow down. But no matter how old your are, it proves one point and I've always been a proponent of this: You have to enjoy what you're doing. I still have fun playing hockey."

Some year, he'll be too old to play hockey. But meanwhile, performance will pass him, or flunk him out.

He's Mr. Hockey still. He's been Mr. Red Wing in the National Hockey League and Mr. Aero in the World Hockey Association. He's Mr. Whaler now. The Whalers and the WHA were turned back in their long, bitterly frustrating effort to become a part of the NHL, but the team and the league, thankfully, won the brushfire battle for Gordie and his two sons, Mark and Marty. They represent the foundation for new beginnings in the newer league, which has pledged to fortify itself with solid franchises and fight on.

Soccer doing a super selling job in United States

EDITORS' NOTE: There is little question that 1977 has been soccer's breakthrough year in the United States. Associated Press Special Correspondent Peter Arnett looked at the game's newly found success and found that old fashioned hard sell and enthusiastic women and children were part of the reason.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

Pele, the universally acclaimed king of soccer, has retired. But Martha Dinwitty, housewife and mother, and thousands of other soccer enthusiasts have only begun their love affair with the game.

Pele retired this year at age 36. Mrs. Dinwitty, around the same age, intends to stick with it and master her soccer skills, or at least outplay the two 50-year-old grandmothers on the defensive line of an opposing neighborhood team in suburban Dallas.

Mrs. Dinwitty's enthusiasm for kicking the checkered ball, despite bruised thighs and skinned shins, might be expected of a college kid, but she's the mother of two growing children.

Only a true believer would understand, and she doesn't have to look far to find them since there are 54 women's teams in her soccer league.

They are riding the crest of a wave that in half a dozen U.S. cities has seen professional soccer splash in from the backlots to become a major spectator sport.

In New York, the Cosmos have drawn sellout crowds of over 70,000 spectators. Strong local support has surfaced for other North American Soccer League teams such as the Tampa Bay Rowdies, the Minnesota Kicks, the Dallas Tornado, the Seattle Sounders and the San Jose Earthquakes.

Amateur soccer is also booming. Youth leagues will probably draw a million boys and girls this year, half as large as the enrollment for Little League baseball. There are now 429 college teams. And housewives such as Mrs. Dinwitty and their husbands in adult leagues number in the hundreds of thousands.

Soccer fans and players demonstrate a missionary-like certainty in their belief that America would finally catch up with the rest of the world and accept soccer as the No. 1 sport.

"We've been a stepchild too long," said John McKeon, the soccer coach at East Stroudsburg State College in Pennsylvania.

Too often in the past it was football that got the best college prospects, with rejected and second class players turning out for soccer, McKeon said.

The professional promoters in particular bear down on the underdog theme. "We have been downtrodden for so long now," said Francisco Marcos, chief promotions man for the Tampa Bay Rowdies. "I tell my people, in adversity you find strength in unity. Go out and sell, sell, sell."

The professionals have to sell themselves as well as the sport.

Soccer has been played for nearly six decades at New Haven, Conn. But only about 1,500 fans would turn out for games by the Bicentennials and the franchise was sold this year to Oakland.

An average of 6,000 attend professional games in Los Angeles even though 60,000 children are registered soccer players in Orange County alone.

The solid soccer successes in America have been in virgin territory where promoters have built up the sport, often in just a couple of years. The promoters also went to work in Dallas, Minnesota, Seattle and other west coast cities with success.

And it was the hard sell.

Marcos of the Tampa Bay Rowdies said he formed the Tampa Bay Area Soccer Association on May 18, 1975, soon after the club was created and recruited 617 youths into 60 teams. "We provided T shirts, shorts, socks. It was unique in professional sports in this country," Marcos said.

They went out into the community with films and demonstrations "like the Harlem Globetrotters. We asked them 'do you like soccer?' If they nodded we'd say sign here," Marcos said.

The Rowdies sold parents on soccer by showing that normalsized youths could play it. They also compared the injury rate to football and guaranteed that their children would play at least half each game "with a probable three minute possession of the ball," Marcos said.

Ten thousand youths have responded. "They have grown with us," said Marcos, whose Rowdies still completely control the league. Football is still popular in Tampa but one 16-school football league has turned almost entirely to soccer.

The Rowdies also launched an unprecedented promotional campaign, keyed by the contractual commitment of all its professional players to any necessary public appearances. "We told them, in England you train for two hours each morning, and play golf in the afternoon. In America, you are missionaries," Marcos said.

Rowdies star Rodney Marsh said: "We'd never do this back home in England," as he recounted numerous visits to supermarket openings, school soccer clinics, lunches and so on. Like other soccer stars interviewed, Marsh was unfailingly gracious and patient, obviously a student of the master himself, Pele.

The captive audience of youths and parents in Tampa have resulted in an average attendance of 20,000 per game.

"Sure we have an aggressive selling pitch," said Allan Cotterill, a vice president of the Fannies, the Rowdies' fan club. "But we have no apologies for it. Every kid can be as active as he wishes in soccer."

Ticket prices give the professional soccer teams an edge. At Tampa a family of four can see a Rowdies' game on a $10 family plan.

But beyond the promotion there is the game itself, described typically by Pele as, "a ballet, and women admire its beauty."

Having won the mommies and daddies and the kids in several major American cities, soccer has just one barrier left. It is not yet a Big Ten or Big Eight college sport.

Political timebomb is ticking away

Economic perils pose greater threat to 'national security'

Progress Bulletin
Finance
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, November 6, 1977

WASHINGTON (AP)- Too many countries spend huge sums on defense while ignoring economic factors that pose a potentially greater threat to their national security, a new study released Saturday says.

Entitled "Redefining National Security," the study says a political time bomb is ticking away against the majority of governments which tolerate continuing "excessive human claims," on the earth's principal biological systems — fisheries, forests, grasslands and croplands.

The study was written by Lester R. Brown, director of Worldwatch Institute, a nonprofit research organization. It was funded by the Charles F. Kettering Foundation.

Brown says depletion of nonrenewable energy supplies is but one of the dangers that lie ahead for the global economy.

He notes that biological systems provide all food and all the raw materials for industry except minerals and petrochemicals.

"In fishery after fishery, the catch now exceeds the long-term sustainable yield," Brown says. "The cutting of trees exceeds the regenerative capacity of forests almost everywhere.

"Grasslands are deteriorating on every continent as livestock populations increase along with human population. Croplands too are being damaged by erosion as population pressures mount. Failure to arrest this deterioration of biological systems threatens not only the security of individual nations but the survival of civilization as we know it."

Brown writes that the overwhelmingly military approach to national security is based on the assumption that the principal threat to security comes from other nations.

The recent experience of Egypt, to take one example, suggests that this is not the case, he says.

He says that the riots that followed official attempts earlier this year to raise food prices in Egypt came closer to toppling the government of President Anwar Sadat than has Israeli military power.

It was a food crisis and famine precipitated by ecological deterioration — and not an invading army— that ousted the centuries-old dynasty in Ethiopia in 1974, Brown says.

He also notes that the Polish government was badly shaken a year ago by riots when it sought to raise food prices closer to the world level.

Brown cites these examples to suggest that "global food insecurity and the associated instability in food prices have become a common source of political instability."

The global economy, he says, depends on the biological systems. "Anything that threatens their viability threatens the global economy. Any deterioration in these systems represents a deterioration in the human prospect."

During this decade, Brown says, food shortages have led to temporary rises in death rates in at least a dozen countries.

"Indeed, the lives lost to the increase in hunger may exceed the combat casualties in all the international conflicts of the past two decades," he says.

'Rent-a-gorilla'

Bodyguard industry is showing its muscle

PARIS (AP) — "Rent-A-Gorilla" firms are beating their chests in Paris, muscling in on the violence trend by offering male and female bodyguards for as little as $10 an hour.

Budo Brothers, a 3-year-old protection outfit, opened a women's branch called Budo Sisters early in 1977. A third firm, KO!, recently entered the field.

All offer employees skilled in a variety of martial arts and languages. Emphasis is also put on good grooming and athletic appearance.

"This is a profession like any other," Sully Desplan, director of Budo Brothers and Budo Sisters, said in an interview. "There's nothing secret or illegal about it. There's a problem of escalating crime and violence in the world, and the need for our service proves it.

"Businessmen, politicians, entertainers come to us when the police can't solve their protection problems. We're non-political, and we'll take clients from the left, right or center."

Desplan said budo is a Japanese word designating the ensemble of martial arts. He said he had 60 male and 15 female employees, and that fees range anywhere from $10 to $40 or up, "depending on the circumstances."

Desplan said business was booming but declined to give figures. Asked if his agents carried arms, he said, "only if the occasion calls for it."

One of the Budo Sisters, Catherine Pruvot, a 23-year-old secretary who speaks English and Spanish in addition to her native French, said she had joined the firm to supplement her income. Recent missions included guarding a businessman in Hamburg and a child in Paris.

Claudine Dory, a 23-year-old university student waiting for a job with an international organization as an interpreter in English, Italian, Spanish and French, said she too wanted extra money.

Reverse discrimination case confusing

Rigid racial 'quotas' exclusionary, unconstitutional, say most foes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Bakke's much-publicized "reverse discrimination" case now before the Supreme Court can be as confusing as it is important.

President Carter showed how confusing it can be in a letter to a national Jewish organization that wants Bakke to win his legal fight against a medical school admissions policy he says discriminates against whites by giving minority members unfair advantages.

Carter's letter thanked the American Jewish Committee for its strong backing of affirmative action programs aimed at giving preferential treatment to minorities to make up for past discrimination in education and employment.

The secret apparently is in understanding with just what forms of affirmative action the Carter administration is comfortable.

Carter's letter, made public recently at the Jewish group's convention in Atlanta, agrees with the AJC view that, in Carter's words, "rigid racial quotas are exclusionary and therefore unconstitutional."

Bakke, a white, 37-year-old engineer, was twice rejected for admission to a University of California medical school at Davis. He sued the school, charging that he was the victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke claimed that the med school's special admissions program reserving 16 of 100 openings in each entering class for disadvantaged minority students was a form of "reverse discrimination."

The Constitution's 14th Amendment guarantees "equal protection" or equal treatment for all persons.

The California Supreme Court agreed with Bakke, but the university appealed the state court's decision to the U.S. Supreme Court, which heard arguments in the case earlier this month.

Many civil rights leaders claim that a Bakke victory — even one fashioned on narrow legal grounds — could jeopardize the hundreds of affirmativ action programs in government, education and private industry across the nation.

In campaign for economic democracy

Hayden seeks to place public on land's 'corporate' boards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hayden, head of the California Campaign for Economic Democracy, has big plans for the group which seeks to place "public" members on corporate boards of directors.

But the onetime student activist, who won 37 percent of the vote in last year's Democratic primary for John Tunney's U.S. senate seat, says he is far less certain about plans for his own political future.

In a Los Angeles Times interview published today, Hayden said he hasn't decided whether to run next year for state controller, the state Board of Equalization or the state Senate, or not to run for anything but "to campaign for issues and to build (the) new organization."

Hayden admitted he would really like to run for the U.S. Senate again, perhaps when the term of Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, D.-Calif., expires.

Hayden, in Los Angeles for the opening of the California Campaign's new offices downtown, said he, his actress wife Jane Fonda, Rep. Ron Dellums, D.-Calif., and farm labor leader Cesar Chavez soon will send a joint letter "to the largest list of people in the state that we can afford" asking them to sign up for $15 annual memberships in the group.

"What they get in return for $15 is a newsletter, notices of local political activity, access to our summer camp that we're planning in Santa Barbara and so on," Hayden noted.

He spoke enthusiastically about the need he sees to "democratize" the nation's large corporations, and said he is thinking about proposals to allow the governor to name persons to corporate boards who have demonstrated a commitment to consumer affairs and product safety.

Greer Hydraulics Inc.

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Greer Hydraulics Inc. reported the highest first quarter in its history as earnings for the three months ended Sept. 30 rose 78.5 percent on a 24.5 percent increase in sales over a year ago.

Greer President A.A. Jacobellis said that net income for the three months rose to a record $293,636, or 26 cents a share, from net income of $164,534, or 15 cents, for the like period last year. Sales, meanwhile, rose to a record $4,714,586 from $3,785,991 a year ago.

Average number of shares outstanding was 1,131,358 for both periods.

Greer manufactures specialized hydraulic and pneumatic systems, pressure vessels and valves.

Proposed merger could have a major impact on 'finance' trade

The proposed merger of Allstate Savings and Loan Association, a subsidiary of Sears Roebuck Co., with Security Savings and Loan Association of Northern California, could have major impact on savings institutions as a whole, according to a study released by the Applied Financial Economics Center (AFEC) of Claremont Men's College.

Three factors make this outcome likely, the report states. The new company is expected to pioneer in the costly development of electronic fund transfers, regarded by many as the "money of the future." Further, by moving aggressively into the national capital market for funds and by opening up to savings associations the potentially lucrative field of multi-purpose consumer loans, Allstate's example could spur the industry to growth in new and profitable directions.

This scenario for the probable future implications of the Allstate merger is contained in a report funded by the Conference of Federal Savings and Loan Associations.

Prepared by a team of economists under the direction of James Meigs, director of AFEC and associate director John Rutledge, the 154-page report considers all the possible alternatives open to Allstate as a result of the merger and analyzes the full range of possible consequences.

The report lays to rest at the outset one of the concerns that prompted the study: namely, that Allstate would gain an unfair competitive advantage over other savings and loan institutions by opening new branches in every Sears retail store in California.

This is unlikely, the report argues, for two reasons: First, a branch application would have to be filed with the California Department of Savings and Loans for each store, an expensive and time-consuming process. Second, the experience of the industry strongly suggests that setting up branches in retail outlets is not cost effective.

"The market for new branches," states the report, "may be close to saturation in the next few years — the cost of deposit funds acquired through even a moderately successful new branch can be perilously close to the yield on mortgage loans. Expansion by this route would produce an ever declining net-worth-to-assets ratio."

The report sees little threat to the future of the savings associations in the merger itself. It states the merger does not violate any obvious antitrust guidelines, and would produce a firm smaller than several already existing California savings and loan associations.

If Allstate's management followed strategies typical of the rest of the industry, the most that could be gained would be the relatively minor effect of brand name recognition on deposit growth.

But would Allstate follow such well-worn paths?

Not according to John Rutledge, senior author of the report. "The proposed merger is only important in so far as it forms part of a larger game plan. And

Naked mini computers to be sold for the first time

IRVINE, Calif. (BW) — Computer Automation's Naked Mini computers will be sold in retail stores for the first time this month through a new computer store operation of Tandy Corp., Fort Worth, Tex., operators of the national Radio Shack chain.

The two firms said they have entered into an agreement whereby Tandy will sell Computer Automation's low-priced minicomputers directly to the public through new retail outlets of the recently organized Tandy Computer division.

The Naked Mini computers will make their public debut in the first Tandy Computer Store, scheduled to open in Fort Worth this month, said George Dashiell, vice president and general manager of Computer Automation's Naked Mini division, and John Ratliff, head of the new Tandy division.

Tandy expects this to be the forerunner of a chain of separate (from Radio Shack) stores it will build to offer a full line of data processing products, Ratliff said.

The minicomputers will be sold over the counter in small business-oriented systems packaged by Tandy or as stand-alone units that professionals and sophisticated hobbyists will incorporate into their own systems, said Ratliff. The Computer Automation products will also be listed in Tandy's catalogue for the mail-order trade.

Ratliff said Tandy's emphasis on fully packaged minicomputers and systems aimed at small business and professional users will distinguish their stores from hobbyist shops offering kits and components to home computer buffs. He said that Tandy Already offers microcomputers to hobbyists through its Radio Shack stores.

"Our analysis of the overall marketplace indicates that our new stores will fulfill the small businessman's needs for low-priced minicomputer systems that will accommodate his specific applications requrements," he said.

The system packaged by Tandy will include Computer Automation's distributed input/output systems — using "intelligent" cables that enable the computers to work with virtually any peripheral device — as well as floppy disk controllers, operating systems and Fortran and Basic languages.

Applications programs for the small business systems will be supplied by Tandy, which also will provide customer service.

The Naked Mini LSI 4/10 computers to be offered by Tandy are general-purpose, 16-bit minicomputers with 4,000, 8,000 or 12,000 words of memory, expandable to 64,000 words.

"The Tandy agreement is the same as we have with our large-volume OEM customers, who either incorporate the Naked Mini into systems for resale or for their own use," Dashiell explained. "Tandy is, in essence, doing the same thing as our traditional customer base except that they are selling into the retail market.

(The Naked Mini computer is so-called because it was originally conceived as a low-cost computer on a circuit board that could easily be designed into a system as a component. Naked Mini computers are also sold fully packaged with chassis, power supply and control panel.)

Tandy views its new venture as an opportunity to occupy a "vast, untapped market" that exists between the level of the do-it-yourself hobbyists and that of the established business systems user, Ratliff said.

He feels that the demonstrated retail strengths of Tandy and the price-performance characteristics of the Computer Automation products represent a substantial force in penetrating that market.

Tandy, with some 6,000 Radio Shack outlets, recently posted year-end sales in excess of $949 million. Computer Automation, which has delivered more than 20,000 computers worldwide, had fiscal 1977 sales of $43 million.

Israelis sharing security tactics

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — El Al, Israel's national airline says it is sharing with at least 20 foreign air carriers the knowledge it has gained over the years on anti-hijacking tactics.

Its officials say that with the recent spate of hijackings they expect more foreign airlines to contact them for security advice.

One official said that while there is no formal course of instruction "we share our knowledge and security measures."

"I think it's common knowledge that we are one of the best in this field," he added.

El Al President Mordechai Ben-Ari is scheduled to lecture on security to 120 airline executives at an International Air Transport Association (IATA) meeting in Madrid on Nov. 8. Officials say he will repeat his call for international cooperation on air terrorism.

Although there have been several attempts to hijack El Al planes, the only successful operation was in 1968 when Palestinians hijacked an El Al to Algeria.

The airline's security system is mostly secret but plain clothes sky marshals are said to ride shotgun on every flight.

During one hijack attempt on an El Al plane to London in September 1970, sky marshals shot a terrorist and wounded his female companion, Leila Khaled, in a gunfight aboard the plane.

According to Israeli army figures, of the 208 civilians killed in terrorist attacks against airliners both in the air and on the ground between 1968 and the start of 1977, only seven of the casualties died during attacks on El Al planes.

A large part of El Al's overall security relies on its stringent security procedures at Ben-Gurion Airport and at its other terminals at foreign airports.

Passengers to and from Israel who use El Al have to be at the airport at least two hours before flight departures to go through multiple security checks.

Airline experts emphasize that ground security "is the most important aspect" of the hijack problem.

At Ben-Gurion each passenger leaving the country is questioned by a trained officer. Passengers are asked whether they packed their own bags or if anyone has given them packages to take abroad. Any suspicious person is taken away for further questioning.

Besides being subjected to body searches, El Al passengers walk through metal detector devices and their hand luggage is searched.

At Ben-Gurion Airport, where terrorists killed 26 passengers inside the arrival lounge in 1972, a motorized unit of border police meets each of the 25 or so daily flights that land in Israel.

Every incoming passenger is checked against a list and passengers with Arab passports are taken to a separate location for questioning.

Merger impact is studied—

As an alternative to branching, Allstate will probably seek new funds in the national capital market, where its familiar name and the backing of Sears will provide access to both commercial paper and mortgage-backed bond markets at favorable rates. Allstate may then be expected to grow at a faster-than-average rate without incurring the expense of new branches.

Such a real competitive advantage will force the larger savings and loans to turn to the same source for funds, the report predicts. In that event, smaller associations, which will not qualify for the favorable rates available to the larger firms, may be caught in a squeeze. The report suggests that federal regulators will have to decide if this course is a desirable one.

Against a backdrop of Sears Roebuck Co.'s record of vigorous and imaginative leadership, the report suggests a probable script for the next development in Allstate's expansion.

Because of the dramatic rise in real estate values in recent years, many California homeowners now have substantial equity in their homes. While this money earns them no interest, they have at the same time to pay interest rates of from 12 to 20 percent annually on consumer and installment debts.

Finding the key to unlock this sizeable horde of consumer wealth is ultimately what Sears has in mind, the report conjectures. Simply, the plan would be to use cheap money raised by Allstate in the national capital market to make loans to Sears customers, using their built-up equity in homes as collateral for the purchase of such major items as appliances, building materials, and home remodeling services.

Although interest rates on the refinanced mortgage would be higher than conventional mortgage rates, they would be substantially lower than the rates customer now pay when they use bank credit cards. Thus both the homeowner and Allstate would benefit, the former from lower interest rates, the latter from higher earnings and lower risk. Sears, too, would profit from increased sales of durable goods and home improvement services.

"If this happens," the report states, "we expect the other firms in the industry to quickly follow suit, offering inexpensive refinancing services to their loan customers."

The final step in the game plan imagined for Allstate would be the development and implementation of a fully automated credit-transfer system for California.

Allstate would place unmanned credit-transfer terminals in each Sears retail store. Funds could be transferred, at the customer's request, from his account (at Allstate or some other participating institution) to the Sears account at Allstate. Sears retail stores would benefit from these terminals by the reduced cost of processing transactions. They could keep less cash on hand and run less risk than with payment by check. Allstate would benefit by holding Sears funds on deposit and by receiving service fees from the Sears retail operation.

PORPOISE

. . . the valley's newest furniture store, held grand opening ceremonies Saturday and Sunday, October 29 and 30, with special store opening prices.

Located at 1705 West Garvey Blvd., former site of the Department of Motor Vehicles, the Covina store carries a complete line of flotation sleep systems and innerspring mattresses as well as solid wood, hand crafted bedroom, living room, and dining room furniture. According to store manager Gary Baylis, who also manages the original PORPOISE store in Pomona, "PORPOISE carries nationally known brands of contemporary as well as conventional furniture for today's varied lifestyles. The ultra comfortable bedroom is fast becoming the most important, the most lived-in room in the house, where one can totally relax."

"Our efforts at PORPOISE are to give our customers the widest possible choice of comfortable sleep systems and fine furniture."

FOOTHILL NATIONAL BANK TO RELOCATE UPLAND OFFICE

Foothill National Bank announced today that it would be relocating its Upland Office to permanent quarters on Mountain Avenue just north of Arrow Highway. According to Wallace D. Gott, Chairman of the Board of Foothill National Bank.

The new two-story facility will be approximately 12,000 square feet, with six drive-up lanes.

Construction is expected to start next week (Nov. 1, 1977) with occupancy slated for summer 1978. The developer of the project is Lewis Development Co. an affiliate of Lewis Homes, Upland. The general contractor is Edwards Construction Co., Pomona. Herbert Kaiser and associates of Los Angeles is the architect.

The bank will be the first tenant in a new shopping center being built by Lewis Development Co. at the northwest corner of Mountain and Arrow. Foothill National Bank is a locally owned independent bank with assests in excess of $16 million. The bank's Upland office was established in 1974 and is currently located at 915 West Foothill Boulevard.

Camera angles: war photography

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

The International Center of Photography (ICP), New York City's only museum devoted solely to photography, started its fall-winter lecture-and-study program with a serious session on a grim subject: War Photography. Its first Sunday night "Interchange" discussion meeting — a nine-week series sponsored by Minolta — focused on two newly published books of war photos plus the personal recollections of ex-combat photographers whose adventures were reinforced by slides of memorable experiences.

The two books in the spotlight are: "The Russian War: 1941-1945" with an introduction by Harrison Salisbury, former New York Times correspondent in Moscow, a Dutton publication ($12.95); and "Life Goes to War" edited by David E. Scherman, a Time-Life Television Book from Little, Brown & Co., Boston ($19.95).

Cornell Capa, director of ICP, introduced John Macrae III, American editor of "The Russian War." He reported seeing the original edition of the book in Czechoslovakia and was moved to have it published in the United States. It contains 128 graphic examples of combat photojournalism from the cameras of 22 Russian photographers, a body of work that has not been seen in the West till now. It makes a powerful exhibition on display at ICP.

Unlike most American combat correspondents who were journalists, the Russian photographers were soldiers who often alternated between firing their guns and shooting with their cameras. They were involved in the fields of action, participating in the early defeats and severe deprivations that were suffered during the siege of Leningrad and the battle for Moscow before the eventual victories that led to the capture of Berlin.

Inevitably, some outstanding Russian photos bore striking similarities to some of our historic masterpieces. A 1942 photo by Russian photographer Max Alpert of a regimental commander urging his men into action, one arm raised and the other arm extended, has been compared to Robert Capa's classic 1936 image of a Spanish Loyalist soldier, with arms outstretched, at the moment of death. Another remarkable coincidence took place in 1945. Yevgani Khaldei's picture of a Red Army soldier waving the Soviet flag over the fallen Reichstag in Berlin was taken in May. It is the Russian equivalent of the famous photo made by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal on Feb. 23rd, showing Marines raising the American flag over Iwo Jima, a picture that won the 1945 Pulitzer Prize and every other photojournalistic award.

The ICP audience saw a slide show selection of the Russian war photography and also heard from a former Russian tank commander who often ferried photographers in their battle coverage. He said that in the early years of the German-Russian war when the tide of battle was against them, censorship prevailed which prevented publication of photos which showed death and destruction of the Soviet countryside. Later, to boost morale, inspirational photos like those by Alpert and Khaldei were widwidely distributed in the Soviet Union.

It was noted that "The Russian War" was not published in the Soviet Union. Two Czech editors, Daniela Mrazkova and Vladimir Remes selected the photos and the book was first published in Prague. It is a powerful pictorial tribute to the stamina of the Russian people and the courage and ability of the Russian photographers.

"Life Goes to War" is an American view of World War II from its beginnings in the Spanish Civil War in 1936 until it ended nine years later with the Japanese surrender ceremony aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay. It is panoramic in its view, encyclopedic in its scope and shows a world at war through incidents and individuals at the areas of conflict and also at the homefronts.

David Scherman, editor of "Life Goes to War," was himself a combat photographer from 1941 to 1947. Ralph Morse, Life's youngest war correspondent, covered Gen. Patton's campaign in Europe; was the only civilian photographer who recorded the German surrender to Eisenhower; and he covered DeGaulle's triumphant entry into Paris. He also landed with the Marines at Guadalcanal and took part in Col. Doolittle's Shangri-La raid on Tokyo.

Slim Aarons enlivened the proceedings with his adventures as combat photographer for YANK magazine in Europe, Africa, Asia and the Middle East. W. Eugene Smith, world-famous master of the photo essay was eloquent but brief with his conviction of war's inhumanity and futility. He was at Saipan and Iwo Jima and was wounded seriously later at Okinawa by a shell fragment.

John Phillips covered Tito's partisans in Yugoslavia for Life and then continued shooting from behind the Iron Curtain after the war. His coverage in 1948 of the destruction of the Jewish quarter in Jerusalem was continued 27 years later with photos of Israeli survivors. The result: a brilliant book, "A Will to Survive" which has also become a globe-circling exhibition.

Life correspondents Bill Walton and Bernard Hoffman recalled being dropped behind enemy lines. Walton, over-equipped, threw away two cameras he was carrying for another photographer. Hoffman was with Merrill's Marauders in Burma and came through with thorough coverage and without a scratch.

It is generally agreed a combat photographer must be very courageous but some opinions vary. "Soldiers have to take orders," they say. "A combat photographer is a civilian and he has a choice. He does not have to go. He must be nuts!"

Elephant trunk is savored banquet

HONG KONG (AP) — A dozen select Japanese guests began savoring such delicacies as elephant trunk, bear paw, sturgeon intestines and deer tail today as they began a two-day, $20,000 re-enactment of an ancient Chinese imperial banquet.

Missing from the menu are such specialties of the Ching and Manchu dynasties as monkey's brain, gorilla lips, camel humps and peacock tongues.

The banquet is being eaten in a Hong Kong restaurant while the Tokyo Broadcasting System films it for a television documentary on Chinese cuisine to be shown in Japan Nov. 13.

Restaurant manager Lau Chor Pun said he's been preparing for the program for three months, assembling $8,000 worth of food, getting in special gold-plated tableware, redecorating one floor of his place with antique furniture, silk curtains and scrolls, and hiring an eight-man band to play classical Chinese music.

One eye-opening entree — the bear paws — will be served in a gilt dish atop six kinds of birds, including a sparrow, pheasant and quail, to symbolize the imperial "hand that rules the mountains and rivers."

The imperial banquet is said to have originated about 700 years ago with the Emperor Tsi Tzu of the Sung dynasty who treated his friends, ministers and generals to lavish feasts that lasted days.

The modern, two-day version is being served in four segments.

The first, lasting more than three hours, was called the Jade Fall Feast. It is modeled after the banquet given by an emperor to welcome noble guests.

Next comes the Dragon Door Feast, once used to entertain prime ministers and lords. The third banquet is the Golden Flower Feast, in honor of scholars who passed the palace examination. Last comes the Beiling Feast at which generals and warlords dined.

Seattle air museum will feature 'early' planes

SEATTLE (AP) — Carl Gustafson worked on some of the first airplanes that rolled out of the Boeing Co.'s "Red Barn" almost 50 years ago. Now, he's helping restore the Red Barn as part of a $10-million aircraft museum.

The bespectacled, fair-haired Gustafson still dons his work clothes to create an airplane display or build a model control tower for the museum. He helped dismantle portions of the Red Barn for moving.

The Pacific Northwest Aviation Historical Foundation is planning the Red Barn Air Park for the southwest corner of Boeing Field, site of the first powered flight in the Puget Sound area by Charles Hamilton in 1910. Opening is set for early 1979.

Howard Lovering, project manager for the foundation, said King County was negotiating to buy the Boeing Field parcel for $700,000. The 5½ acres are occupied by a topless bar and a manufacturing firm.

"For the aviation buff, we hope to have just about everything," Lovering said.

Museum plans include a 70,000-square-foot modular building attached to the 20,000-square-foot Red Barn. It would include an observation deck and restaurant.

King County is supporting the project as part of an airport improvement program. The museum is being funded by private donations and public money.

The foundation now operates the Museum of Flight at Seattle Center. The group has been collecting aviation artifacts for the museum and now maintains a collection of about 20 aircraft in various stages of restoration.

One plane was retrieved from a garbage dump in 1960 at Anchorage, Alaska. The 1928 Boeing 80-A Trimotor biplane led to the birth of the foundation. Harl Brackin, director of the Seattle Center Museum of Flight, said the group was formed as a non-profit organization to raise funds for the project, begun by two Alaskans.

Brackin said the 80-A, with engines in the nose and on each wing, introduced stewardess service to commercial air travel.

"The number 80 played a magic tune with this plane," Brackin said. "It was called the 80; it cost $80,000; and the wingspan is 80 feet." Cost for restoring the plane to airworthiness is $800,000.

The 80-A is a major restoration job, Brackin says. "We'll pretty much have to start from scratch. It was in good shape with fabric still on the wings, but moving and time have caused deterioration."

The foundation still flies its 1933 Boeing 247D. That plane introduced multi-engine, allmetal airplanes to air travel.

Not all of the museum's planes are antiques. The Northrop YF-5A Freedom Fighter is still in use by the United States Air Force and NATO forces. The foundation has the prototype.

A missile and several sailplanes, including one that traveled both ways across the Atlantic, are now museum exhibits. Boeing's Space Shuttle mock-up is a sit-in exhibit for children at the Seattle Center Museum.

Brackin said most of the exhibits would be moved to the Red Barn museum.

The two-story, red-and-white building, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, was barged two miles up the Duwamis River to Boeing Field in 1975, after it was threatened by the expansion at its original location.

The building is now on county land next to the proposed museum site.

"Over there used to be the production room. There used to be a wall here," he remembered. The building interior changed with new projects.

Greece records 'unusual' weather

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece this past summer lived up to its touristic slogan of the "Land of Sunshine," clocking many more sunshine hours than usual and making the season one of the hottest in the last 50 years.

By contrast, western Europe recorded one of its darkest and wettest summers.

Antonis Klisiotis, meteorologist of the Athens weather bureau, said that over the 92-day summer quarter of June, July and August, sunshine hours were up at almost all recording points in the country. Rainfall, at the same time, was down to an all-time low.

He said "an extraordinary combination of atmospheric changes" was responsible.

The weatherman said Athens during the summer recorded 1,069 sunshine hours, up 19 hours from its average. Ierapetra in the southernmost Aegean island of Crete recorded the highest figure of 1,136 hours, up 32 hours from its average.

In both cases, typical of the center and south of the country, it meant about 12 hours of uninterrupted sunshine per day.

Sole exception to the trend was northwestern Greece, the nearest part to the western European landmass. The city of Ioannina, for example, recorded 860 hours of sunshine, or 9.35 hours daily over the 92-day period, down 45 hours from its average.

"The general lack of rainfall," the report added, "made the summer one of the driest in years."

Taking the entire country, it said that during the 92 summer days there was one day of general rain, eight days of scattered rain, and 18 days of local rains, mainly in the north.

For the remaining 65 days there was "not a drop" recorded at the country's 112 weather stations.

Last year, to the contrary, there was some kind of rain recorded every single day in July.

Typical of western Europe's summer was Belgium's announced "darkest summer since 1888."

Carter's deputy is loyal to the boss

Federal management and budget office still in hands of Georgian

ATLANTA (AP) — Bert Lance has made his exit from the Washington scene but his old department, the federal Office of Management and Budget, is still in the hands of a Georgian.

Jim McIntyre, a 36-year-old native of Vidalia, is running the key federal agency as deputy director, and there has been speculation that President Carter will name him director.

It would not be the first time McIntyre served as Carter's budget chief. He ran the Georgia Office of Planning and Budget during Carter's tenure as governor of the state, while Lance was serving as head of the Georgia highway department.

"I'm not campaigning for the job," McIntyre said in a recent telephone interview.

"I'm not trying to be another Bert Lance. There's no one who can replace Bert. I'm trying to be Jim McIntyre and do the best I know how. The future of the directorship is entirely up to the president," he said.

Like many of the other Georgians serving in the Carter administration, McIntyre is loyal to the boss. He puts in long hours and is a member of the old Carter team that ran state affairs in the Georgia Capitol for four years and then moved into the White House.

Short and somewhat bookish looking, McIntyre does not possess the outgoing personality and booming voice of a Bert Lance. He is an intense man who can occasionally relax by exchanging barbed comments with those he knows well.

"He is level headed, competent and an excellent administrator" said one former coworker at the Georgia Capitol, where McIntyre was still head of the budget department under Carter's successor, Gov, George Busbee, when he was offered the job in Washington.

In presenting Carter's and then Busbee's budget proposals to an often critical legislature, McIntyre "never forgot he was the governor's man. He never went soft on a position," said the coworker.

"He wasn't loved by the legislature, but respected. He was not the type to get into fights. He handled himself in controversy without getting into personal disputes."

Now McIntyre is running the federal budget agency, concentrating on Carter's budget for the 1979 fiscal year and on reorganization. As with the budget, it is not the first time McIntyre has worked for Carter on reshuffling government agencies.

When Carter set about reorganizing Georgia's state government, he assembled a team of aggressive young planners, accountants and lawyers. McIntyre, a lawyer, served as a legal advisor and legislationwriter for state reorganization.

A graduate of Young Harris College and the University of Georgia, McIntyre's first job was with the Institute of Law and Government at the University. Later he became general counsel for the Georgia Municipal Association.

In 1970 McIntyre was named deputy state revenue commissioner and in late 1972 became director of the state Office of Planning and Budget.

The obvious difference between what he had been doing for Carter-the-governor and what he is doing for Carter-the-President is that the issues involved are much more complex and the monetary figures are far more staggering.

"The federal budget is very much an instrument of fiscal policy, and budgetary decisions have a real impact on our economy. I'm not sure that was true to the same extent in Georgia," McIntyre commented.

"Issues are extremely complex. A number of alternatives have to be carefully thought through, particularly policy implications."

Even with the complexity, he said, "I'm enjoying it. I'm having a good time."

And, he said, he's too busy to make future plans.

Spurred by a search for 'roots'

Retrieving sunken logs is a profitable business

CLOQUET, Minn. (AP) — Joe Porcelli, a 31-year-old Korean-American, claims he's been searching for roots since he was 5 years old. And after coming to the United States 23 years ago he may finally have found them at the bottom of the St. Louis River in northern Minnesota.

Porcelli, after serving as an underwater demolition instructor for the Green Berets in Vietnam and working for an ocean salvage company, came to Minnesota to pursue a marine engineering degree at the University. He now runs his own company retrieving sunken logs from river bottoms.

Millions of dollars worth of logs are there for the taking and he aims to get his share, declares Porcelli, who says, "I've been on my own since I was 5 and I've been groping for roots. Now I have the world by the tail.

"If I had 20 crews and worked for the rest of my life, I couldn't get all the logs out of Minnesota's waters," Porcelli claims. "But my biggest problem is convincing people that the logs are a viable and valuable product.

"I guess I'm ecology-minded too," he adds. "Each log pulled out of the water represents one less tree that has to be cut, and helps clean the water."

Porcelli began diving at the age of 11, three years after he left Korea and was adopted by an Italian family in South Carolina. He earned a degree in biology at the University of South Carolina and then became a member of the Green Berets.

After his discharge, Porcelli traveled around the world as his company's chief diver, but decided to venture to Minnesota, where he not only worked on his marine engineering degree, but met his wife.

He got into the logging business a few years after helping with some underwater blasting in the St. Louis River when a stranger kept asking for the sunken logs they cleared out. Porcelli checked into this and figured there was some $50-million-worth of logs on the Minnesota river bottom.

The logs are not only plentiful, but are still of good quality, even though some are more than 100 years old.

"I learned that 10 to 15 percent of all the logs that were floated down rivers sank," he said, "as long as the logs are submerged, they are not exposed to air and the water temperature does not reach 76 degrees, which is needed for the proliferation of fungus that destroys wood.

"The major reason a log goes bad is deterioration," he continued. "Air and the proper temperature are needed to cause this."

Porcelli had trouble convincing bankers that financing a business such as log salvation was worthwhile and finally secured a loan through the Small Business Administration. It also took him a year to get the proper state permit.

But eventually he did receive the permit and was able to begin business. He purchased a 22-foot, jet-powered work boat, a bulldozer, trucks, diving equipment and two small fishing boats, and began training a crew.

In less than three months, Porcelli and his crew have brought to the surface enough logs to produce 500,000 board feet of lumber. A 16-foot-long log which yields about 100 board feet is worth approximately $25.

The work is hard and long, consuming 12 to 16 hours a day, but Porcelli has never been happier.

"I'm doing exactly what I want to do; not sitting in an office," he noted. "It's good healthy work and an honest day's work and I think we're doing something good for the environment."

TM devotees conquer gravity?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The transcendental meditation movement has spent 20 years establishing credibility. Now some followers believe it is being threatened by a new claim. A claim which devotees are willing to discuss but not document. That they defy gravity.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

SOUTH FALLSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — They talk about smooth liftoffs and bumpy landings as pilot trainees, stewardesses and hang-glider addicts might.

But this is at the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, a handsome campus of the transcendental meditation movement, and "they" are advanced disciples who claim they can fly — levitate — with mind power as the sole propellant.

"We are in the beginning stages of flying," says John Konhaus, acting director of the TM movement in the United States. "It comes in stages. At first it looks like they're hopping like frogs. Then they become lighter and lighter as growth of consciousness develops."

Some devoted followers think the movement's credibility will be badly strained by the levitation claims. There's skepticism within TM.

Joseph and Devanie Wagner are meditators. She says, "I have no doubt that I will leave the ground." Her husband, a systems analyst for a research firm, says the whole business is a hoax.

Mrs. Wagner hasn't seen the flying but has heard it. "I saw a lot of them take pillows and foam rubber, and I stuck around by the door. I heard a lot of knocking and thudding."

The TM levitators assert they can rise one or two feet from the full lotus, a position with the left ankle on top of the right thigh and vice versa, and then move forward three, six, maybe 10 feet.

Could a skilled gymnast perform the feat? "No way," says Dick Mulvihill, director of the National Academy of Gymnasts in Eugene, Ore. "With the full lotus, there's no way to gain thrust."

In addition to the beginning, or hopping stages, TMers talk of reports about initiates actually hovering with greater mastery over gravity.

"At this stage, we have most control in taking off," says flier Gale Merman, secretary to magician Doug Henning. "Landings tend to be rough."

Says Allen Solof, a daily flier and one of 450 TM executive governors in the United States: "There is a great deal of group consciousness. If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up. It's like popcorn. Once it goes, they all start going."

Konhaus runs the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment near this Catskills community. The guests usually are serious professional men and women. The men wear three-piece suits, the women afternoon apparel or party dresses. The atmosphere is serene, the meals vegetarian and those who smoke must do so outside.

Visitors are welcome to see the flying rooms — one for men and one for women. The floors are covered with foam rubber, and there's more foam rubber stacked in the hallways.

Konhaus says he believes the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement who lives in Switzerland, eventually will allow a demonstration that will persuade the skeptic.

"We don't want to create a circus atmosphere," says Konhaus.

If you want to learn to levitate, as some early TM ads beckoned, bring money.

First, you enroll in preparatory classes from four to eight weeks, depending upon one's stage of meditation. That's Phase I and costs $245 a week, including room and board. Phase II is four two-week courses at $375 a week.

You don't get your money back if you don't fly.

Miss Chun spent $2,000 this summer at South Fallsburg and thought it was worth every penny.

regarding TM advertising has been filed. A student at the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, says he was told his course would take four weeks. Then he was told it would take eight.

"They promised levitation, and then halfway through they said come up with another $1,500," says Steve Rozman, an associate professor and chairman of the social science division at Tougaloo College near Jackson, Miss.

He complained to the Iowa attorney general's office and was blacklisted, he says. "They wanted me to operate on a show-my-faith basis. They told me I didn't have the proper attitude."

Julian Garrett, assistant attorney general in charge of consumer protection, says his office is investigating the TM claims but progress is slow. "We're inclined to think this is a very questionable claim, but it's a little difficult to get students to talk about it."

Konhaus says the advertising since has been toned down. "We're like any business. We use our advertising to attract the public." Though flying is a by-product, it does make people take notice ... maybe even sign up.

Patricia Carrington, psychologist, meditator and author of "Freedom in Meditation," wishes the movement would give a proper demonstration or quit talking about levitation.

"If you're serious about something, you must permit a controlled observation for the scientific community," says Dr. Carrington. "The TM movement has been a very conservative one up to this point. They did a world of good in spreading the word about the benefits of meditation. This is an about-switch.

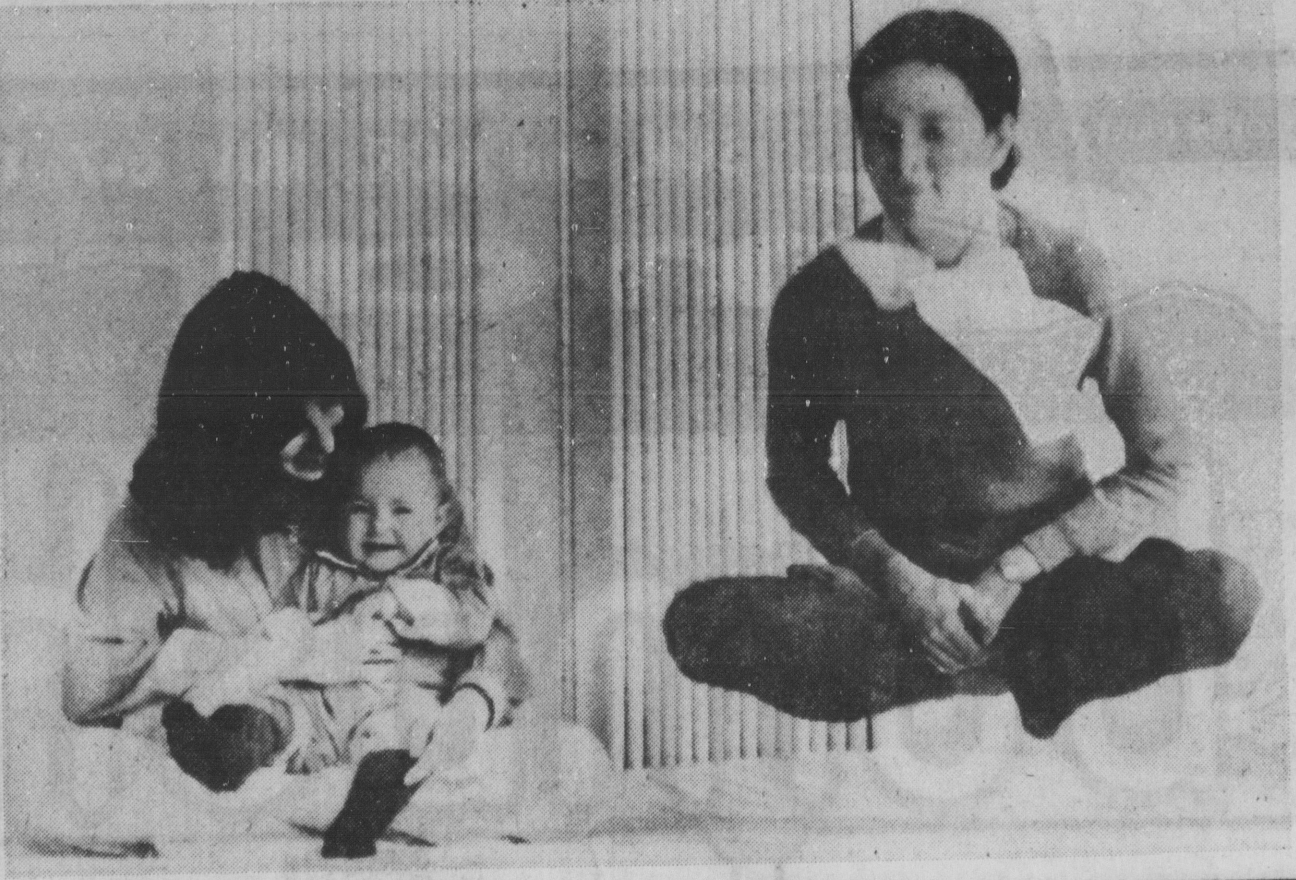
"Even Uri Geller allows himself to be studied. I am just bewildered by these claims."

Actually, the levitators did "show" once — last May at Iowa's MIU, which used to be Parsons College before the college went out of business.

Twenty-two persons — two of them nonmeditators — were invited to the demonstration conducted by four young men. It got mixed reviews. Some of the meditators thought they saw levitation. Others thought they saw some hopping around that they figured a good athlete might be able to duplicate.

Dr. Herbert Spiegel, a Manhattan psychiatrist who teaches at Columbia University and is an expert on hypnosis, feels self-hypnosis might be the answer. The people who describe their flights believe they are flying.

Konhaus contends that physical laws have been disproven or suspended before, but Spiegel argues that "the law of gravity applies to everyone, regardless of creed, race, color and TM."



Bye, bye (?) gravity . . .

This photograph, provided by the Transcendental Meditation movement, shows what they say is a levitator, right, in "flight." Advanced disciples of TM claim they are at the beginning stages of flying, and that some followers at TM's campus in South Fallsburg, N.Y., the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, are able to hover.

You can hunt wild boar

Ohio hunting preserve offers exotic wild game

ILESBORO, Ohio (AP) — You can hunt wild boar, Spanish goat or Barbado ram in a little corner of Ohio.

Keith Fox, a one-time soap salesman in Columbus, and his wife make it possible. They moved five years ago some 55 miles from Columbus to a picturesque spot in Hocking County. Since then they have made the hunting of such exotic animals possible for upwards of 200 persons.

"At first we really didn't know if we would like it, but we were willing to give it a try," said Joyce Fox.

Today, the couple — both in their mid-30s — sell the dream of bagging your own exotic wild game on their 500-acre spread, called the Hocking Valley Hunting Preserve, off Ohio Route 93, 10 miles south of Logan.

"We transplanted the boars from Tennessee, Georgia and Florida," Fox said. He said hunters traveled even farther, from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Michigan. But most come from Ohio cities.

From wherever, they pay a pretty penny if they are successful.

Although he has 420 acres under fence, Fox said that didn't make hunting easy.

"The boars hide in the hollows, and they're real smart," he said. "Sometimes you'll see two in half an hour, and sometimes you won't see one for two days."

The thick, brushy terrain is an ideal habitat for boars. But the brush is a problem for summer hunters because it makes tracking and seeing the prey more difficult, Fox said.

"It's a tough business. You have to work and it's always hard work," he added.

Fox said the real challenge to hunters was getting close enough to a 200-pound boar for a shot. Nearly 95 percent of the hunters are persistent enough to bring home some wild bacon.

Hunters must supply their own rifles, hand guns or bows and arrows. Fox said high-powered equipment is a necessity.

He emphasizes safety precautions for all hunters and stresses target practice before the hunt for novices. To date, there hasn't been an accident with a weapon.

"There's a real challenge to it," Fox said of the hunt. "The boar has the advantage. It's tough, unpredictable and fantastic."

Wagon 'plant' circles market

By LINDĔL HUTSON
Associated Press Writer

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Vern Barnett gives the impression he'd like to pull the covered wagons in a circle around his small factory here and try to isolate it from the modern world.

"I wish we could all be living back 100 years instead of the way we're having to live now," said Barnett, 62. "It's too fast. If we'd all slow down, we'd be better off."

His plant is called Arkansas Village and although its concrete buildings are modern, the equipment inside is old. The finished product is shiny and new, though from a bygone era.

His is probably the biggest plant in the country devoted exclusively to turning out wagons, carriages and other horse-drawn vehicles.

"You'd be surprised at the number of people who buy these things," said Barnett. "We sell all over the world. The buggy and surrey business is really picking up.

"I don't know what's happened, but the plant's making its own way. That's really all I cared about when I got into it. It was just something to play with, but now the darn thing's turned out to be a business."

The plant produces an array of vehicles ranging from a $1,300 pony-sized wagon to a $14,000 stagecoach.

Barnett and his son, Charles, 40, own and operate the factory. It was opened in 1966 when the elder Barnett acquired the assets of Arkla Village, which had a similar carriage-making operation near Hope in south Arkansas.

Arkla Village had purchased equipment from several small plants as the wagon business faded nationwide.

"We bought out the old Hoops Bros.-Darlington factory a few years ago in West Chester, Pa., said Charles. "They were the last wagon wheel factory in the United States. We had always bought our wheels from them, so when they went out of business we had to do something to get our wheels."

It was the Barnett plant that turned out the 61 vehicles used in the Bicentennial wagon train that crossed the country last year.

The inside of Barnett's plant, which has about 15 employes, is a collection of drills, presses, saws and piles of lumber. Barnett's vehicles are mostly wood.

In one corner, a stack of wheel hubs, part of the acquisition of an old plant, climbs nearly to the ceiling. Another corner holds a variety of unused wagon seats made around the turn of the century.

Some of the workers "grew up with wagons" and would "rather work than sit back and draw their pensions," Charles Barnett said.

Vern Barnett said the work fascinates him. "I can go back there and stay all day and just forget the outside world. I guess I can see now that I've lived too fast these 62 years. I can't see anything, especially for young people, better than something like this — a horse and buggy."

Lamps get red light

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota has banned decorative outdoor gas lamps, as a means of conserving natural gas.

Although widely promoted by utility firms a few years ago, the lamps are now viewed as a waste of natural gas needed for heating homes.

The ban was ordered by the 1976 state legislature but was postponed until Oct. 1, 1977, giving time for homeowners to convert their lamps to electricity.

Homeowners who don't comply can be fined up to $500 and given up to 90 days in jail, but there were no early reports of prosecutions.

The new law allows homeowners over 65 and certain other persons to seek variances, allowing them to keep their lamps in operation.

The ban also applies to any commercial use of decorative gas lamps.

A haven for almost all kinds of wrecks

LEON, Va. (AP) — You have to hand it to Leon and Gloria and the boys. As Gloria said, "We built this from nothing."

What they built from nothing is beyond doubt one of the most glorious junkyards in the land. It is a 60-acre junkyard, 60 rusting acres of wrecked cars. Not just wrecked cars, but wrecked trucks, wrecked buses, fire engines, hearses, you name it, this junkyard has it, or part of it.

"I couldn't begin to say how many wrecks we have," Leon Thompson Jr. said. "I know that when we got rid of 2,000 of them a few months ago, you couldn't tell any were missing."

"We're not anxious to get rid of them," said Gloria Thompson, Leon's mother. "That's not the idea. In fact, my husband is out buying more right now."

That is because the Thompsons are in the used auto parts business. To do that, it is necessary for them to accumulate all these cast-away hulks, the midden of the mobile society. Indeed, Gloria Thompson scolded her son for calling it a junkyard.

But junkyard is what it is. As an eyesore it benefits from its setting.

You come upon it while driving across the rolling Virginia hills, lovely in their fading autumn plumage, gentle green hills where fat cattle graze and horses stand dumbly behind white-washed fences, every bend in the road another scene from a Sweet Lassy feed catalog.

Then you see it. Not all of it, because some of it is beyond the next ridge, and the next, but enough of it to realize.

This is no run-of-the-mill junkyard. This is a monument to ugliness, a work of art.

"Look at this," Gloria Thompson said. "It will give you an idea of what we have."

Probably somebody just took it from an airplane and came around and gave it to him."

Pathways separate the vast acres of wrecks so they look almost like planted fields. "My father just put out 50 head of cattle back there,'" Leon Thompson Jr. said. "They'll help keep the grass down." Nothing like tidiness.

Mother and son explained how the family built up the business, or rather heaped it up.

Leon Thompson worked for years as a carpenter, but cars were his hobby. "He always had one or two around, working on them," his wife said. "Then this piece of property became available, so he bought it and gradually went into the parts business. We still do a little farming, over near Lynchburg, but this is the main business. It keeps all of us busy, me, Leon Jr. and Tim. Leon Jr. is 23, Tim is 18. Tim only works when he is not in school"

Leon Jr. explained further.

"My father would buy cars, work on them, and sell them. When you get one you can't sell, you've got the beginning of a salvage business. I don't think he intended it to become what it is. I guess he was lucky.

"Of course there are some auto parts we don't have. You can't have everything. But every car made has its weakness. It might be the alternator in this model, the starter in another, and so forth. You get to know them. You try to buy wrecks that have those good selling parts. Sooner or later somebody will be in to buy it."

"When people come in for a part and we have what they want, they're always so excited," his mother said. "It's a good feeling."

So the parts hang around the lot, waiting to make someone happy: a heap of carburetors here, a mountain of hubcaps there, and wrecks everywhere, even lining the driveway up to the Thompson's house which is a distance from the shed.

But what about that old fire engine? You wouldn't think there would be many calls for old fire engine parts.

"Oh, that. I don't know why he bought it," Gloria Thompson said.

"I do," said her son. "He bought it because he didn't have one."

Upkeep counts in home renting

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Some homeowners fail to consider depreciation when they decide to offer their homes for rent. An owner must keep a good sum available for home repairs and emergency problems — big things like water pumps, boilers and water tanks. A hurricane also can do a lot of damage to roofs. But often it is little things that add up to a big cash outlay.

One family had been renting their former residence for a decade as they lived in another area of the country. When a vacancy coincided with their own vacation period, they decided to move back for a few months and refurbish the house.

It became an expensive fixup, clean-up, paint-up, even though they did a lot of the work. Through the years they kept up with appliance problems, but they assumed that tenants were keeping the place maintained. In reality many inconveniences were being tolerated, and maintenance had fallen behind. Some tenants fear a rent increase if they ask for service or new equipment.

To begin with, there was a $5,500 paint job for the 5-bedroom house, indoors and outdoors. Because no tenant had put up the storm windows which had been in a closet through the years, the windows had taken "quite a beating" and a lot of puttying and trim work had to be done, an expensive, time-consuming job. "And why in the world wouldn't tenants use storm windows in these days of high-cost energy?" asked the owner. It may not have been laziness, it may well have been ignorance.

The kitchen needed a major scrubbing, especially the ceiling which was heavily coated with grease, and three coats of paint were needed to cover the dark green walls, even after several washdowns. A bath wall needed a tile job because tiles had fallen off during the years and had not been replaced. Dogs may have had free reign in the house and several floors needed to be scraped and refinished. Weeds had come up around bricks on the large patio and a big job was required in that area using weed killer and realigning bricks.

As this owner pointed out, "You can't do a half-way job if you own a house. You must either do repairs regularly and keep everything in condition or you must be prepared to spend larger sums when you get around to general deterioration." That family opts for a regular checkup when a lease is renewed.

Owners of resort houses may have such problems compounded. A variety of tenants throughout a season can make a home particularly vulnerable to disrepair and even abuse. Some people are untidy, but others simply cannot cope wih simple household equipment. Owners should have directions for the operation of each thing pasted on the appliance itself.

In one house at the end of a renting season, there was a non-working self-cleaning oven; a range that didn't bake unless you were clued to turn the handle slightly to the right; the dishwasher knob had fallen off and needed to be replaced; a plastic door shelf in the refrigerator looked as if it had been smashed with a mallet, and its freezer section had a back panel which didn't quite meet its side panel.

Some problems may have been due merely to faulty equipment, one tenant said. But some problems may well have been due to a succession of tenants who simply did not know how things worked or should be used. A trash compactor was a challenge that no one had accepted — it was unused.

In that house, too, windows were propped open with pieces of wood and tenants were threatened with finger injury when they removed props and windows crashed down. Only the window glass took the brunt — many of the small, old panes had been smashed.

Could bury U.S.

It is estimated that there is enough salt in the world's oceans to bury the United States a mile deep, says National Geographic.

Importance of play

How important is play in our lives? Here's a chance to test your views on this subject:

1. Serious personal involvement usually improves any game, especially if lovers, or husband and wife, team as partners.
True ( ) False ( )

2. Men and women have different views of what play is.
True ( ) False ( )

3. Children should learn that in all play there are rigid rules.
True ( ) False ( )

4. Psychotherapy can help people learn how to play better.
True ( ) False ( )

5. Sports, especially in college, are an avenue to success for many.
True ( ) False ( )

6. As much as possible, parents should direct which sports their children play and how much time is devoted to them.
True ( ) False ( )

7. Some athletes feel guilty and afraid when they win.
True ( ) False ( )

8. To instill in a child a desire to win at all costs can be harmful.
True ( ) False ( )

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE: Deep personal involvement often invades a game, making it difficult for everyone. The greatest cause of stress when playing with partners is a sense of guilt and responsibility which destroys playing technique and can poison the atmosphere.

2. TRUE. This is changing, however, because more women are playing team sports in grade and high school. According to many experts, this will improve their chances in the working world if they choose business as a profession. Dr. Robert Shomer believes one of the problems in marriage is man's and woman's different conceptions about what play is.

3. FALSE. Children at every age should enjoy some play that is free, wide-ranging, unfettered and that helps them learn about their own capacities. This kind of creative play is just as important as the kind that tests their skills against those of others.

4. TRUE. Serious and successful psychotherapy has been the key to restoring the confidence and security of many professional athletes. Psychotherapy also helps those who avoid all play to discover why. Play is fundamental in everyone's life. The inability to play, or to enjoy play, usually indicates other problems.

5. FALSE. Studies indicate that college athletes may be big men or women on campus, but they don't fare any better in the job world than non-athlete fellow students. These studies raise questions about whether college athletes wouldn't do better later in life if they spent more time on academic subjects and less on athletics. It apparently is a myth that atletics is a steppingstone to success.

6. FALSE. Dissatisfied with their own roles, parents may try to change them vicariously through their children. They may push them into sports in which they, themselves, wanted to excel. They also can give a boy a feeling that he's not good enough and should have been a girl, or that a girl should have been a boy. Parents should encourage their children, but should try to help them fond their own way in play as in other areas of life.

7. TRUE. Often players demonstrate inhibition and guilt because they haven't resolved their problems about aggression. This can get in the way of their game and in the way of their life, as well.

8. TRUE. People who feel they must win are self-destroyers, according to French psychologist and linguist Dr. Jacques-Olivier Grandjouan. To instill an I-must-win-at-any-cost attitude in a child is to dehumanize him, not in a game, but in life.

Seminar scheduled this week

An introductory Assertiveness Training Seminar for Women is scheduled Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Upland High School in the staff lounge, 565 W. 11th St., Upland.

Jeanne Hamilton, a college instructor and director of the Women's Center at Chaffey College, will conduct the seminar.

The Women's Issues committee of Ontario-Upland Brand of American Association of University Women is sponsoring the event as a community service.

The seminar is open to the public at no cost.

ROSEMARY DONOVAN AND PLATES

Program on plates scheduled by club

"Collectibles" is the title of the program Mrs. Rosemary Donovan will present for the Wednesday Afternoon Club of San Dimas Wednesday at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Stanley Plummer, 416 N. San Dimas Ave., San Dimas.

Luncheon hostesses will be Mmes. W. F. Hathaway, Gordon Oliver, Harold G. Wright and Eric DeMoulin.

Mrs. Donovan, owner of Rosemary's Plate Rail in San Dimas, will discuss and display limited editions of fine plates, crystal, lithographs and bells.

As a commemorative of the treasures of King Tut's tomb to be displayed next February at the Los Angeles County Art Museum, Mrs. Donovan will feature a fine, handblown crystal King Tut plate, a crystal bell and a crystal thimble.

Her program will highlight new 1977 plate editions of "She Walks in Beauty," "Rainy Days," and two plates from the Don Ruffin series.

Mrs. Loren Wendt, Mrs. Robert Jensen and Mrs. Thomas Gore are announcing the programs for the remainder of the year.

A dine-out meeting is planned Dec. 14 for members and husbands. The program will be presented by a Barbershop Quartet.

On Jan. 11 the program will be "Achievements of American Women" with member participation. The Rev. John Hewitt of Arcadia Presbyterian Church will show slides and speak on the Holy Land on Feb. 8.

Loren Wendt will present "Magic" on March 8 and on April 12, a music program and luncheon will be held at Cal Poly as guest day.

Club members have voted philanthropic contributions for the 1977-78 club year to the Recording for the Blind, the San Dimas Christmas Basket fund, McKinley Boys Home and the Order of Merit. Special memorial funds were made in honor of deceased members, Mrs. G. F. Harbin and Mrs. Mary Rowbotham.

At-home sewing

Good results can be achieved with permanent press fabric or home sewing if a few simple guidelines are followed, points out the Soap and Detergent Association.

First, check pattern envelope to be sure a permanent press fabric is suitable. Choose a style with straight lines and minimum seams and details. Avoid frills and fullness. Cotton-covered polyester thread is desirable; it "gives" with the fabric. Preshrink zipper, tape and any interfacings used. To prevent seam puckering when garment is laundered, relax the tension on the sewing machine and guide fabric through very gently, without forcing or pulling. Ease zipper in to reduce chance of puckering. Steam press seams with an iron, testing first with a scrap of material for amount of heat which can be applied. For care after use, wash the garment with other permanent press clothes. When tumble drying, promptly remove the item as soon as the appliance stops, to prevent wrinkling.

Luncheon scheduled Tuesday

Claremont United Methodist Women will meet in the Round Building of the church Tuesday at 10 a.m. The meeting will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the organization.

During the session new members who have joined the unit during the last year will be honored. Mrs. Ruth Fiske will direct a short memorial service and pledge service.

Child care will be available upon request by calling Mrs. James Lightfoot, 621-2103.

Claremont club to hear vocalist

The program for the Woman's Club of Claremont luncheon at noon, Wednesday, in the clubhouse will be presented by Adrienne Biggi. A mezzo-soprano, she will entertain with music in colorful costumes and with imaginative props. She will be accompanied by the widely known pianist, Jean Waste.

A native Californian, Miss Biggi majored in music at Bakersfield College. Her appearances in numerous musical comedies and light operas have included "Brigadoon," "Naughty Marietta," "The Mikado," and "South Pacific."

Mrs. Lewis Craswell is chairman for the luncheon, and reservations are to be made with Mrs. Azalea George, 624-7495.

Question is: who pays what?

Of all the problems involved in planning that perfect wedding, one of the knottiest can be: who pays for what?

Although custom is rapidly falling by the wayside in these times of upheaval, it's a good idea to be aware of traditional rules regarding financial responsibility for wedding expenses, if only for use as guidelines.

For instance, the bride's wedding dress, probably one of the first expenses involved after the engagement ring, is purchased by the bride's family. (The groom-to-be is responsible for the engagement ring, of course.) Her trousseau is also purchased by her family, as are the wedding invitations and announcements.

The bride's family is virtually responsible for the wedding itself, being expected to pick up the tab for rental of the church, fees for the organist, flowers and carpet for the church, not to mention the entire cost of the reception.

The groom's family, on the other hand, gets off lightly with paying for the rehearsal dinner, if they wish. If not, guess who gets to pay the bill: the bride's family, again.

The bride herself is expected to assume some expenses: gifts for her attendants, the groom's wedding ring and gift, plus accommodations for her out-of-town attendants.

The groom is responsible for the wedding ring, the marriage license and clergyman's fee, plus flowers for his mother and her mother, as well as boutonnieres for the men in the wedding party. He also pays for the bride's bouquet and gifts for the bride, best man and ushers.

If he wishes, the groom will pay for a bachelor dinner, and of course, he is expected to pay for the wedding trip.

The attendants' obligations extend to their own clothes for the wedding, plus any travel expenses that they may have.

The families of the bride and groom are not expected to pay for any travel expenses incurred by wedding guests, nor are the bride and groom.

Fortunately, the rules are no longer hard and fast regarding the many expenses involved in a wedding. The bride often has been working prior to her wedding and is able to assume some of the costs for her family, and it is not unusual for the groom's family to offer to share some of the expenses with the bride's family.

Common sense, coupled with consideration, can help all concerned over those financial bumps on the way to a beautiful wedding.

Miss Darlene M. Scharf of Pomona and Stephen M. Spencer of Pomona were married in St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Pomona.

The daughter of the Donald B. Scharfs of Pomona and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Spencer were wed in an afternoon ceremony by the Rev. Peter Dennis.

Honor attendant was Miss Lynda J. Knipping of Pomona. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Becky Moro, San Dimas; Miss Leslie Pott, West Covina; Miss Carol Spencer, Pomona; Mrs. Tammy Tucker, Pomona; Mrs. Lupe Spencer, Upland; and Miss Robyn Gordon, Pomona. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Lynn Scharf and Miss Nancy Spencer of Pomona.

Jay Mingus of Pomona was the best man and ushers were Tony Moro, San Dimas; Joel Fahres, Pomona, John Reilly, Upland; John Spencer, Upland; Gary Lindberg, San Dimas; and Don Scharf, Pomona.

Flower girls were Kassey Amundson and Jenny Russikoff.

The newlyweds have established a home in La Verne.

MRS. STEPHEN SPENCER

DeSanto-Gunderson

Miss Deborah Ann DiSanta of Chino and Ricahrd Gunderson of Costa Mesa are engaged.

The bride-elect, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sabitino DiSanta of Chino, was graduated from Pomona High School. She is employed by Electro Services in Fullerton.

The future bridegroom, son of Maj. and Mrs. Eldon Gunderson of Irvine was graduated from University of California UC Irvine. He is employed by Interactive Computer Systems in Costa Mesa.

A Jan 14 wedding is planned.

Gary-Wright

Miss Marilynn Patricia Wright of Glendora and William Gary Jr., Claremont, were married recently in Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Claremont.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wright of Glendora and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gary were wed by Monsignor William Barry.

Mrs. Nannette Mansell of Glendora was matron of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Cindy Zedak of Glendora.

Standing as best man was Hernando Hennings of Claremont and groomsman was Dave Dominguez of Montclair.

A reception for the couple will be held in the parish hall in December.

The newlyweds have established a home in Upland.

'Thank you' notes deemed essential

After the bride has "oohed" and "aahed" over her many gifts, she will want to thank her family and friends in as charming a manner as possible.

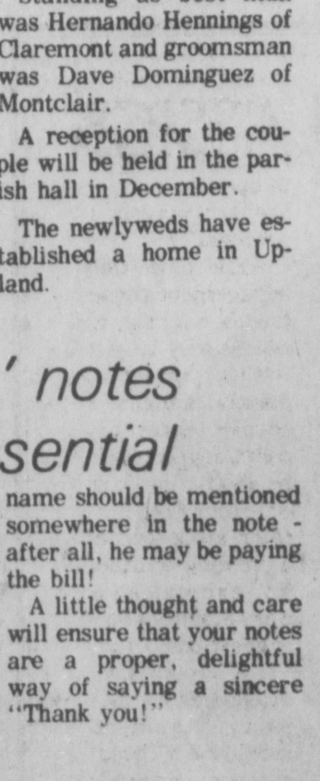
"Thank you" notes are the traditional way to take care of this pleasant duty.

Bridal consultants suggest that the bride write her thanks as each gift arrives, to avoid both confusion and hours of writing later on. If this is not possible, a record of the gifts, with the names of the senders, whould be kept.

When writing your note, refer specifically to the gift and how you and the bridegroom plan to use it. If you are acknowledging a check, mention what you have purchased or plan to purchase with the money.

Unless you know the gift-giver well, include your surname with your signature. When writing to a couple, notes are traditionally addressed to the wife but the husband's name should be mentioned somewhere in the note - after all, he may be paying the bill!

A little thought and care will ensure that your notes are a proper, delightful way of saying a sincere "Thank you!"



Lawrence-McDonell

Newly wed Mr. and Mrs. John Patrick McDonell have established a home in Del Mar following their marriage at St. Monica's Catholic Church, Santa Monica.

The former Miss Lynda Ann Lawrence is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis A. Lawrence of Upland. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. McDonell of Woodland Hills.

The couple left the garden reception at the home of Mrs. Suzanne Joyce in Pacific Palisades for a wedding trip to Maui, Hawaii.

MRS. JOHN McDONELL

Selecting apparel for rites

Throughout the year, many people are faced with the perplexing problem of what to wear to a wedding.

Most men will shrug and assume that a nice dress suit will be appropriate for a formal and semi-formal wedding. Unless black tie or other dress is specified on the invitation, a man is correct in wearing a suit to most weddings if he is a guest. However, he may still be required to rent the traditional gray cutaway coat and striped trousers if he is asked to be an usher at a formal daytime wedding. Or, he may be asked to wear the black tuxedo with tails, a formal tux or dinner jacket for a formal dinner wedding.

More contemporary formal weddings feature the groom, best man and attendants in pastel tuxedos and ruffled shirts for spring and summer weddings while dark Edwardian or Windsor style jackets are worn during the winter. A casual suit, sports jacket or blazer is accepted at informal daytime weddings.

Women attendants have it easier since the bride chooses gowns for her attendants. Formal and semiformal daytime and evening weddings feature bridesmaids in long gowns.

Women guests can wear long or short dresses to evening and daytime weddings.

Women are not expected to wear hats or gloves to formal weddings; however, they may be worn if so desired. White and black clothes may be worn to weddings; however, black should be reserved for evening weddings. Bare, halter or thin strapped dresses should be worn with a jacket or shawl during the wedding ceremony.

While traditional weddings will always be popular, many young couples are planning less formal weddings which take place in a private home, country setting or in a park. When weather permits, a wedding may be held at lakeside, in the mountains or by the seashore. Guests should dress according to the location and the time of year for informal weddings held outdoors.

Bridal shower survives

Wedding customs have changed with today's lifestyles, but one of the nicest and most useful traditions to survive is the bridal shower. Shower gifts are a meaningful "dowry" for the young couple, helping with the major expense of establishing a home.

Both the necessities and small luxuries that make a house a home are appropriate gifts. Today's bride-to-be will appreciate many of the traditional gifts of linen, pottery, glassware and crafted items that her grandmother received.

Gifts that are functional as well as decorative are doubly welcome. One idea for shower or wedding is the carpet sweeper.

Boasting a long tradition of its own, the sweeper dates back to 1876 when the first model was created to clean up sticky sawdust in a crockery shop.

A time-saving, energy-saving present for the bride is a thoughtful gift that will be appreciated through many anniversaries.

On tipping

Who gets what at the end of a meal? According to an article on tipping in the November 15 Family Circle, you can count on adding the following percentages to your restaurant check: 15 percent is the norm for restaurants, but unusual service or an elegant atmosphere may merit a gratuity of 20 percent. Headwaiters don t have to be tipped unless there are special arrangements and then $2-$5 is suggested. The magazine also recommends adding 15 percent to the wine bill for the wine steward and giving the bartender 15 percent of the bar bill.

Davises honored on 25th year

Mr. and Mrs. George Davis of Pomona celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary last week at a reception given by family members for 50 guests.

The couple has three sons, Donald Kleen, George and Robert Davis, all of Pomona, and one daughter, Mary Lou Davis of Monterey Park. There are 11 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The Davises were married Oct. 31, 1952, at Wickenburg, Ariz. Mr. Davis came to this area from Crane, Mo., in 1923 and Mrs. Davis came to the valley from Phoenix, Ariz., in 1945.

Mr. Davis was employed by Loud Machine Shop for 19 years before retiring.

Dyers celebrate 25th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Glenn Dyer of Upland celebrated their silver wedding anniversary recently at a surprise party held in Fullerton by their sons, Richard Alan Dyer and Gary Jai Dyer and Mrs. Dyer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins of La Verne.

There were 50 people waiting to greet the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Dyer were married Oct. 27, 1952, in Gary, Ind.

At the same party, Mr. and Mrs. Berl Ranenberg announced the engagement of their daughter, Jan, to Richard Dyer, son of the honored couple. Their marriage will take place March 11.

Mr. Dyer is a native Pomonan and principal at Serrano Junior High School in Montclair. Mrs. Dyer owns and operates Uncle Otto's Boutique in Claremont.

Mayo-Baum

Sandra Lynne Baum and Wade Hampton Mayo were married in a double-ring ceremony performed by Rabbi Hilel Cohn, Congregation Emanu El, San Bernardino.

The couple was attended by Lisa Gorton of San Diego, maid of honor, an Clay Mayo, brother of the bridegroom from El Paso, Tex. In keeping with tradition, both sets of parents stood with the bridal pair.

The ceremony was followed by a garden reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Baum, Redlands. The bridegroom's parents, who attended the rites, are Mr. and Mrs. John Shelby Mayo of El Paso.

A graduate of Redlands High School, the bride received her B. S. degree and secondary teaching credential from UC Riverside in 1975. She teaches mathematics at Ontario High School in Ontario.

Mr. Mayo graduated from the University of Texas, El Paso, with a master of science degree in physics and holds a master's degree in electrical engineering from USC. He is employed as a senior research engineer at General Dynamics Pomona Division.

MRS. WADE MAYO

Ramos-Mejia

STELLA RAMOS

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ramos of Pomona announce the engagement of their daughter, Stella, to James J. Mejia of Montclair.

The bride-to-be is employed by Mt. San Antonio College as a tutorial supervisor, and also at Disneyland as a sales clerk. She is also attending Cal Poly Pomona. She is a 1972 graduate of Pomona Catholic Girls High School and graduated from Mt. San Antonio College in 1975.

Mr. Mejia, son of Claudio Mejia of Diamond Bar, and Mrs. Ann O'Toole of Montclair is employed by the Pomona Fire Department. He is a graduate of Damien High School and attended MSAC where he majored in fire science.

The couple will be married Jan. 14 at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Pomona.

Handcrafted glass often bride's choice

Brides have been receiving gifts of sparkling handcrafted American glass for years—for more than 200 years. Today's bride, circa 1977, can have that same sparkling glass so deeply rooted in America's past in reproductions of Early American designs or totally modern pieces.

Whatever the bride's style—traditional and Early American, sleek and modern, or an ecclectic mix of both — a gift of American glass is a treasure trove reflecting America's past as well as making a bold statement for today's entertaining styles.

It was our forefathers' artistry and skill that shaped the history of American glass starting in 1608 when these settlers landed at Jamestown and built the first glass factory. This 17th century glass house, as it is historically called, was constructed by the Glass Crafts of America Association.

According to Glass Crafts, handcrafted American glass that dates back to the beginning of the 19th century is today's collectible because many of these pieces available in gift and department stores are created from molds designed in the 1870s.

There is lacy Sandwich glass brilliantly colored in ruby, olive and amber; intriguing milk glass pieces—bowls edged with dancing sailors and ring and petal designs or dishes covered with hens and rabbits; slag glass in swirling purples or brown made at the end of day by glass workers; and iridescent carnival glass so named because it was given away at local carnivals.

The original pitchers, punch bowls, candlesticks, goblets, compotes and plates created from these famous types of glass command high prices by collectors, but the reproductions, ideal as gifts for brides, are moderately priced from $5 to $35.

The uniqueness of handcrafted American glass means that it has been blown or pressed by hand, be it antique crystal stemware, a pitcher, terrarium or candy dish. The handblown method probably started in Egypt and American glassmakers are still creating wine glasses, decanters and compotes with the same care and craftsmanship practiced centuries ago.

These bueatifully blown pieces, so much a part of young lifestyles, are created with an iron blow pipe in the hands of a skilled glassblower assisted by a gatherer. As with the reproductions, modern pieces are moderately priced and readily available.

About 1825, American ingenuity created a way to shape designs by hand pressing molten glass into a mold with an iron former. Hand pressed glass has softly rounded outlines, often in eye-catching decorative patterns such as moon and star, daisy and button, bull's eye and New England pineapple. In vibrant shades of ruby, olive, amber and bright blue, hand pressed glass was originally intended as a substitute for the very expensive cut glass of the day, but these arresting patterns made it highly sought after.

The artistry of American glass lives on. From original pieces that command high prices by collectors, to the reproductions sought after by lovers of Americana, to clean lined wine glasses and decanters so much a part of today's entertaining, American handcrafted glass adds beauty and charm to any home.

Attendants' gifts take careful thought

Next to the bride and groom, the most important "members of the wedding" are the favorite relatives and closest friends the bride and groom choose to make up their wedding party, reports the Jewelry Industry council.

And for such a special occasion, the bride and groom express their sentiments and appreciation with a warm thank-you note and a gift. The bride chooses mememtos for her maid of honor, bridesmaids, and flower girl. The groom expresses his thanks to his best man, ushers, and page with suitable gifts also.

What to give to accompany the thank-you note from the wedded couple needn't be a problem, the Council advises, reminding the young couple that jewelry stores carry a wide selection of items specifically suited for weddingparty gifts.

A bride can select a strand of lovely cultured pearls, or a birthstone ring for her maid of honor. Matching pin and earrings make another ideal gift suggestion, as do fashion watches or pins in gold or silver. As for the bridesmaids, it is traditional to choose the same gift for each, and that might be a charm bracelet with a heart charm to commemorate the occasion, earrings, gold-filled bracelets or stone pins. The flower girl will delight in a sterling silver barrette, a gold-filled locket or baby bangle bracelet.

The groom — who may like his bride to help him select gifts for his attendants — could give his best man an initial ring or birthstone ring, karat-gold or sterling silver tie bar, cuff links or tie tac, or an engraved lighter, or even an engraved pen and pencil set.

The groom might choose such wedding mementos for his ushers as money clips, initialed silver key chains, belt buckles initialed or engraved, or engraved ident bracelets and gold-filled pendants. As with the bridesmaids, the same gift is usually given all the ushers. The groom's page might be given a brush and comb set or religious jewelry.

Gifts from the groom to his ushers and page are usually made at the rehearsal dinner or bachelor dinner, while the bride gives her presents at the wedding rehearsal dinner or maids' luncheon or trousseau tea, or just before leaving for the ceremony, the Jewelry Industry Council notes.

Groom has gift for bride

While much of the wedding spotlight focuses on the bride, it does take two, and the groom does come in for his share of gift-giving and receiving.

Perhaps the gift with the greatest sentimental value is the gift the groom gives to his soon-to-be wife when she accepts his marriage proposal.

While most think of the engagement present as the traditional ring, it does not necessarily have to be so.

With conventions constantly changing and most couples eager to do their own thing, this gift can also be another piece of jewelry or some other beautiful thing she's fond of. Maybe a painting or lithograph, or an exquisite piece of porcelain would be a suggestion.

The groom also gifts his attendants in the wedding party. Again, this gift should be a thoughtful and personal expression with a more elaborate choice for the best man and identical gifts for the ushers.

Popular gift ideas for the attendants include small silver objects like lighters or pocketknives or leather accessories. An extra special thought might be a shaver.

Of course, the most important gift the groom gives is the wedding ring. While this suffices as a wedding present, he can choose to give her another special token of affection, again, usually a piece of jewelry, but there is no hard and fast rule. Whatever the groom feels she would like in most cases is the best choice.

Bihler-Keeth

Miss Helen Jean Keeth of Pittsburgh, Pa., formerly of La Verne, and Wayne A. Bihler of Pittsburgh were married in an afternoon ceremony at First Brethren Church in La Verne.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Keeth of La Verne and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Bihler of Pittsburgh, who were present at the wedding, were wed by the Rev. Orville A. Lorenz of Claremont.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Janet Bohart of Thousand Oaks and Mr. Bihler was his son's best man. A cousin of the bride, Miss Jami Childress of Santa Maria, circulated the guest book.

Ushers were Fay H. Copeland, uncle of the bride of Covina, and David Belcher of La Verne.

Following the ceremony a dinner and reception were held at the church reception hall.

When the couple returned from a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands, they established a home in Pittsburgh.

MRS. WAYNE BIHLER

Tier cake originated in France

We can thank the French for the tiered cake that is customary at weddings today. Originally, small cakes were piled on a table at weddings and the bride and groom would kiss over the stack of cakes, trying not to knock them over. A Frenchman got the idea of icing all the small cakes into one large one.

Origin of honeymoon

Throughout Europe in the Middle Ages, mead, a fermented drink made partially of malt and honey was imbibed. On the occasion of a wedding, mead was drunk for a full-moon's time, that is, for a month after the actual ceremony. This time was then called the "honey moon."

Shaw and Roth

Rich potential, poor performance

By CAROL FELSENTHAL
American Library Assn.

Two talented writers have new novels out this fall — both of which are overwritten stories full of overworked characters and themes.

Irwin Shaw's "Beggarman, Thief" is a sequel to "Rich Man, Poor Man," the novel that sold six million copies and was adapted into a successful ABC mini-series.

In a note to the reader, Shaw makes it clear that there is no connection between this sequel and the television sequel, Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II, which ABC ran last season in order to cash in on the stupendous success of Book I. Under the terms of his contract, Shaw was powerless to prevent ABC's writers from taking the Jordache family fate into their own hands.

While "Beggarman, Thief" will undoubtedly maintain Shaw's reputation as a best-selling writer, it won't do much for his reputation as a crack storyteller. The Jordaches seem tired and so does the plot.

In fact, the only people who may find the sequel satisfying are those who wept unashamedly in front of their TV sets when Rudy was shot to death at the end of the television version. The book has a completely different — and happier — denouement.

The sequel, which opens in 1968 with Tommy's burial at sea, lacks the qualities that made "Rich Man, Poor Man" such an absorbing tale — the sprawl of three decades and three generations, Rudolph, Tommy and Gretchen Jordache's valiant struggle to survive and surmount their dreary, violent upbringing in a small Hudson River town.

Furthermore, Tommy, "Rich Man, Poor Man's" most compelling character, is dead. Rudy has changed so drastically — from a man devoted to helping himself to a man devoted to helping others — that one suspects Shaw's memory of his original in 1970) has grown hazy.

But the crippling weakness of "Beggarman, Thief" is that it focuses on the younger generation of Jordaches — Billy (Gretchen's son) and Wesley (Tommy's son). The cousins are flat characters — pale reflections of their parents.

Depending on the acuity of your memory, you may find Shaw's devices for reminding you of what happened in "Rich Man, Poor Man" annoying or helpful. But you'll almost certainly find them clumsy. After a while, Rudy's regular reminiscing rankles. And Wesley's literal search for his dead father by crossing the country talking to Tommy's friends and enemies often results in tedious rehashes of "Rich Man, Poor Man."

"Beggerman, Thief" ends with Rudolph's and Gretchen's futures fixed, while Billy's and Wesley's are still floundering. And the lives of the youngest Jordaches — Tommy's son, born within months of his father's murder, and Rudolph's daughter — are totally unexplored.

Obviously, there's potential for a sequel to the sequel, but not much promise in the possibility. After "Beggarman Thief," it's hard to care what happens to the Jordaches.

Philip Roth's new novel, "The Professor of Desire," is also a sequel — well, actually, it's an antecedent since it focuses on the early years of David Kepesh, last seen as the hero of "The Breast," the bizarre story of a man of mountainous sexual appetites who is finally — and literally — transformed into a mountainous mammary.

In a recent interview, Roth said that he'd tried to write a sequel to "The Breast" but gave up because he couldn't tolerate contemplating his character's imprisonment. So instead he wrote "The Professor of Desire" in which David is still your average, guilt-ridden, neurotic, suffering Jewish professor.

So what else is new? Kepesh is Roth's standard antihero — Alexander Portnoy of "Portnoy's Complaint" and Peter Tarnopol of "My Life as a Man" revisited. Kepesh suffers the same eternal struggle between lofty ambitions and low lusts; between being a professor of comparative literature and a professor of desire.

Growing up in his parents' Borscht Belt hotel (Kepesh's Hungarian Royale) David assiduously studies and collects stamps, but his real passion is for Herbie Bratasky, the hotel's "social director, bandleader, crooner, comic and emcee" whose claim to fame is his terrific talent for mimicking the whole range of bathroom noises.

At Syracuse University, David alternates between playing the role of class Casanova and class intellectual. In London on a Fulbright scholarship, he wavers between devoting himself to kinky sex with Birgetta and Elisabeth, two exotic Swedes, and to his research on "The Excessive Use of the Kenning in the Latter Half of the Twelfth Century in Iceland." Back home, he goes through a miserable marriage followed by a magnificent affair. In other words, life is either sheer delight or sheer disaster. Dr. Klinger, Kepesh's analyst, responds to David's contention — 'I should have gone all the way and become Birgetta's pimp. I'd be a happier, healthier member of society.'. — with "Yes? You would rather be a pimp than an associate professor?"

True, you've heard it all before, but it's never sounded so good. Roth's prose is genuinely funny, frequently moving, and he has the best ear for dialogue this side of George Bernard Shaw. Best of all, Roth's Jewish mothers (and fathers) are finally characters — not caricatures; quite an accomplishment for the creator of Sophie Portnoy.

THE COUNTRYSIDE IN CHINO—LEWIS HOMES DEVELOPMENT

Although still several weeks away from its formal opening, more than one-third of The Countryside's single-family residences have already been spoken for by buyers, it was reported by Lewis Homes.

"The only way we can account for this heavy advance selling is The Countryside's pleasant, rural-like environment and its relatively low price scale compared with homes of like value in similarly attractive locations," said the building company's vice president of marketing Randall W. Lewis.

The community centers on Carbon Canyon Road, one block west of Pipe Line Avenue in Chino. Lewis noted that its convenient commuting distance is attracting Orange County home seekers.

"Everything from cedar shake roofs to microwave ovens" is the boast that Lewis Homes makes for its Countryside residences. Purchase price is scaled from $64,000 to $85,000, with possession obtainable on VA or conventional terms.

The homes are designed in one-story and two-story elevations as well as split-level stylings. Floor plans range from 1,416 to 2,223 square feet in addition to two- or three-car garages.

Double front doors, ceramic tile entries, cathedral ceilings and hand-crafted wood-burning fireplaces are decor features noted.

Selection is made from a variety of floor plan arrangements with three or four bedrooms, family room, breakfast nook or eating counter and a private master suite bath as well as a second family bathroom. Some plans incorporate an additional half-bath.

The Countryside is reached by taking San Bernardino Freeway 10 or Pomona Freeway 60 to the Corona Freeway 71. The route continues south on 71 to Pipe Line Avenue in Chino, south on Pipe Line to Carbon Canyon Road and west (right) to the sales information center.

Home prices rise twice as fast as other goods, services

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average sales price of single-family homes in Los Angeles has risen at twice the rate of other goods and services in the area since 1975, says the Community Analysis Bureau.

In a report released this week the bureau said that while home prices rose about 14 percent from the first half of 1975 to the same period last year, the price of other consumer commodities rose only 6.8 percent.

In 1975, the average single-family home was priced at $44,800, with last year's price jumping to $51,100, the report said. It added the figures compare to a 1965 average of $27,800.

The bureau also concluded that home prices increased most rapidly during 1975-76 in areas including the Harbor and San Fernando Valley. Last year, the bureau said, the average price of Harbor and Valley houses was $42,000 and $48,000, respectively.

On the other hand, areas where house values have declined since 1970 were Highland Park, North Hollywood, Van Nuys, Sylmar, Echo Park, Westlake, West Adams, Palms, Westchester and Leimert Park, the bureau added.

Seminar-workshop slated

Can't sell because the tax man will get you? Attorney Marvin Starr will present solutions to this and numerous other familiar tax related real estate problems during his nationally popular seminar-workshop on "Tax Free Exchanging and Installment Sales."

The two-day event will be held Nov. 11 and 12, 1977 at the Scottish Rite Masonic Hall in San Diego, and runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. The workshop is designed for real estate practitioners, escrow officers, estate planners and investors, and covers the definitions, rules, explanations, court cases, exceptions and transaction mechanics of Tax-Free Exchanging and Installment Sales. A special section on the new Tax Act is also included.

Attorney Marvin Starr is well known in California, being a featured speaker at the California Association of Realtors annual statewide convention, the legal counsel for several Bay Area Real Estate Boards and Title Companies, and is a favorite lecturer at real estate conferences and seminars, and Universities. He is senior partner in the Oakland law firm of Miller, Starr & Regalia which specializes in real estate law and taxation, as well as co-author of the widely-referenced three volume text "The Current Law of California Real Estate."

The course is one of several in the seminar/workshop series currently being offered throughout the country by Professional Educational Foundation of Leucadia, California.

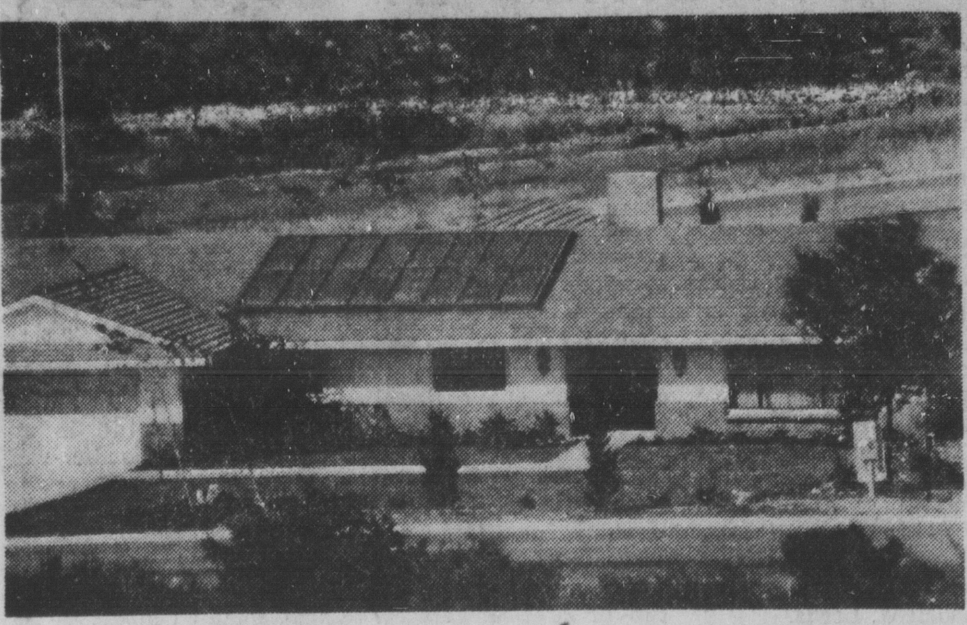
First solar house on display



FIRST SOLAR HOUSE — Opening to the public this weekend at San Diego Country Estates is the first solar house in San Diego County, using air instead of water for space heating.

The first solar house in San Diego County using air rather than water for space heating will open for public inspection this weekend at San Diego Country Estates, 39 miles northeast of San Diego.

Called Casa del Sol, this trend-making 2,547-square-foot furnished home is a Solar Energy Demonstration Project of San Diego Country Estates and San Diego Gas & Electric Company, partially funded by a grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Bill Watt, co-developer of San Diego Country Estates, said that Casa del Sol is the second solar demonstration house at the Estates, where property owners are offered the incentive of a $1,000 reduction in the cost of homesites if they build solar-heated homes.

"Our first solar house uses a water system for space heating, as do several other solar-heated homes at the Estates," Watt said. "Casa del Sol, with its new hot air solar system, is a step forward in solar technology and will give us the opportunity to compare both types of systems."

The air solar system in the $135,000 Casa del Sol was designed and installed by Solaron Corporation of Denver, Colo., through their San Diego distributor Southwest Supply Company. SDG&E, consultants in the installation, will monitor the $11,500 system for two years after the house is occupied to evaluate the performance.

"Our projections indicate that the system will result in tremendous savings in space heating and domestic water heating cost," John Hamrick, vice president of marketing for SDG&E, said.

The solar system will bear 70-80 percent of the annual energy load, with an energy saving electric heat pump available for use during rare periods of extended cloudiness," he said.

Casa del Sol's solar system uses 312 square feet of solar collector panels incorporated in the roof design, and a hot rock storage bed located in an equipment room on the corner of the house.

Air in the collector panels is warmed by the sun and fan-blown either to the interior of the house, if needed, or to the hot rock bed for storage. The degree of heat circulating in the house is thermostatically controlled, just as in any other forced air system. Warm air from the collector panels also is used to heat domestic hot water.

According to SDG&E engineers, the hot air system appears to have several advantages over solar water systems. The air system is not subject to freezing or corrosion. In addition, the air system draws air directly from the interior of th house and back again, thus eliminating the need for that heat exchanger required in water systems.

Located on a large corner lot with mountain and countryside views, the one-story residence presents an attractive exterior of white polyester-fiberglass shake siding with earth-tone polyester-fiberglass shake roof and brick trim.

The non-flamable polyester-fiberglass shakes are a new energy-saving, fire and wind resistant product called CeDurShake. They wiegh 70 lbs. per 100 suqare feet compared to 350 lbs. for natural cedar shakes, and provide a strong blanket of insulating foam. Double-pane windows also help to conserve energy.

San Diego Country Estates may be reached from San Diego via Interstate 8 and Highway 67 to Ramona, following signs to the community; and from Los Angeles via the San Diego Freeway to Highway 78, east to Ramona and south to San Vicente Road.

She has been associated with Wheeler Steffen Garrison in Claremont since 1974 and has been active in real estate in the Pomona Valley area since 1964. Kay was honored as associate of the year by Wheeler Steffen Garrison in 1976 and has been named associate of the month for 5 months in 1977.

She was also presented the sales award by the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors for having the Greatest Number of Listings Sold

She and her husband Bill have resided in Claremont since 1950.

Apartment Association meet set

The regular monthly meeting of the Apartment Association Mt. Baldy Area, will be held at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, at Pitzer Auditorium in the Pomona Valley Community Hospital 1798 N. Garey Ave., Pomona.

Speaker will be Marsha Meek Banks, CPA from Upland. Mrs. Banks will speak on "tax shelters, what to do before the end of the year, the tax status of exchanges and sales of income property and the trend of tax legislation and its effect on the apartment industry.

After coffee break, Victor Tessier will conduct the informative problem clinic.

'Urbanite' groundbreaking slated

RIVERSIDE — Final arrangements are underway for groundbreaking ceremonies at the site of 'The Urbaniet' — a group of new single family and duplex homes for low-to-moderate income families. The event is scheduled to take place on Nov. 10 at 4 p.m.

Officials of the city government and the Riverside Redevelopment Agency will be joining members of the community in kicking off the final phase of the city's acclaimed neighborhood restoration program in the Eastside Redevelopment Project.

"This is a groundbreaking in a two-fold sense," Joshua White, President of Biddle/White Housing and Development Corporation commented. "With the Urbanite project we are also breaking new ground in bringing additional decent quality, reasonably priced housing to a long neglected segment of the population."

'The Urbanite' project marks a new milestone in the redevelopment of Riverside's Eastside area, in which government and private enterprise are joining forces to revitalize older neighborhoods.

"One of our primary redevelopment objectives is to stimulate private investment and reinvestment in underdeveloped areas of the city," stated Douglas Shackelton, Executive Director of the Redevelopment Agency in Riverside. "We have succeeded in doing this with the Urbanite project and look forward to more participation on the part of private enterprise."

Apartment construction studied

Negotiations for nearly 100 apartments and condominiums throughout San Gabriel Valley are now under way by the new Development Division at Herbert Hawkins Realtors. Property for an additional 90 units in Chino has just been purchased, according to Thelma Schultheis, assistant to the president.

Several projects have passed the feasability study phase and four are in the design stage at J.H. Hedrick Company, San Gabriel builders. Among the properties in escrow are land for 12 apartments in El Monte, 12 condominiums on Ontario, 45 apartments in Duarte, 18 condominiums in Covina and 12 condominiums in West Covina.

Last summer Herbert Hawkins Realtors entered into a joint venture association with Hedrick Company to build and sell income units. This new Development Division is located in the Hawkins corporate headquarters, 5770 N. Rosemead, Temple City.

Milos cited as top earner

John Milos of Herbert Hawkins' Temple City sales office was named top earner among the firm's San Gabriel Valley offices for the third quarter. Awards were presented at a Quarterly Awards Breakfast held at Griswold's in Claremont. Over 400 sales associates attended.

The Alhambra sales office received an award as top producing office among all 100 Hawkins sales offices as well as in the Western division of Region I with sales of $15½ million for the quarter. The Glendora office was named top producer in the Eastern Division, Region I, with quarterly sales of $5½ million.

Hawkins scores record year

In a record-breaking year at Herbert Hawkins Realtors, sales from 100 branch offices in California totaled more than $½ billion by the end of the third quarter.

As of October 1, total sales volume was reported at $551,422,582, including cooperative sales, according to a spokesman at the firm's corporate headquarters in Temple City. Sales for the month of September alone were $54,904,523.

The Alhambra office again topped the company roster in September with sales over $4 million, said sales manager Jim Papararo. Other branches listed among the firm's top ten for September were North Arcadia, the Granada Hills office on San Fernando Mission Blvd., Temple City, Glendora, Arcadia, Altadena, Pasadena, Upland and Covina.

We're kicking off the Grand Opening of our 3rd and final phase.

It's a fact of life that a good new home for the middle income buyer is hard to come by. For exactly that reason, M. J. Brock & Sons has built the very affordable Centennial Homes in La Verne.

Each carefully created home has all the features growing families want and need. Things like efficient forced-air heating, carpeting in selected areas, butcher-block laminate counter tops, sliding glass doors, laundry service areas, and smoke detectors.

The single-story homes have three and four bedrooms, and one to two-and-a-half baths, depending on the model. The garages are attached, with room for two cars.

Homes are on large lots averaging 7,200 square feet.

"It's the great big lot that got me. Mine's more than a half-acre – others are even bigger, some smaller. I have that wide open country feeling here and yet, I'm less than two minutes from the Pomona Freeway to Orange County. I've got a boat and camper space behind the 3-car garage – (out of sight!) and we're starting the pool next week. There's plenty of value packed into this community!"

"Beautiful quality - that's what I've got. Ceramic tile in the entry. In my kitchen, General Electric range and ovens, dishwasher, disposal and even a compactor! The family room is great with the fireplace, family breakfast bar and all the big outdoors shows through the wide glass sliding doors. And in the back, dad and the kids want a pool, I want a jacuzzi – there's room enough for just about anything! Another thing: the builder set up a guaranteed sale of our other home!"

"Now, I can have my horse, and he can have his big corral and stable. And we can ride out the back gate right into the super trail system, then all around to our own Saddlewood Equestrian Center. It's a great meeting place for friends. There's a training ring, washdown and a trailer turn-around when 'Star' and I go to the horse shows."

"If I'm not playing ball at the park or with my family barbecueing at Saddlewood's picnic grounds right next to the Equestrian Center, well, then I'm playing out back. Even with the horse, the camper, the boat and soon we'll add the pool there is more yard left than we had altogether at the old house all the kids love it!"

Saddlewood located on the western-most side of Chino is extra close to the Corona Freeway, within a mile of the Pomona Freeway, 6 miles from the Riverside Freeway and a "million miles" from the crowded up-tight feeling of so many other developments.

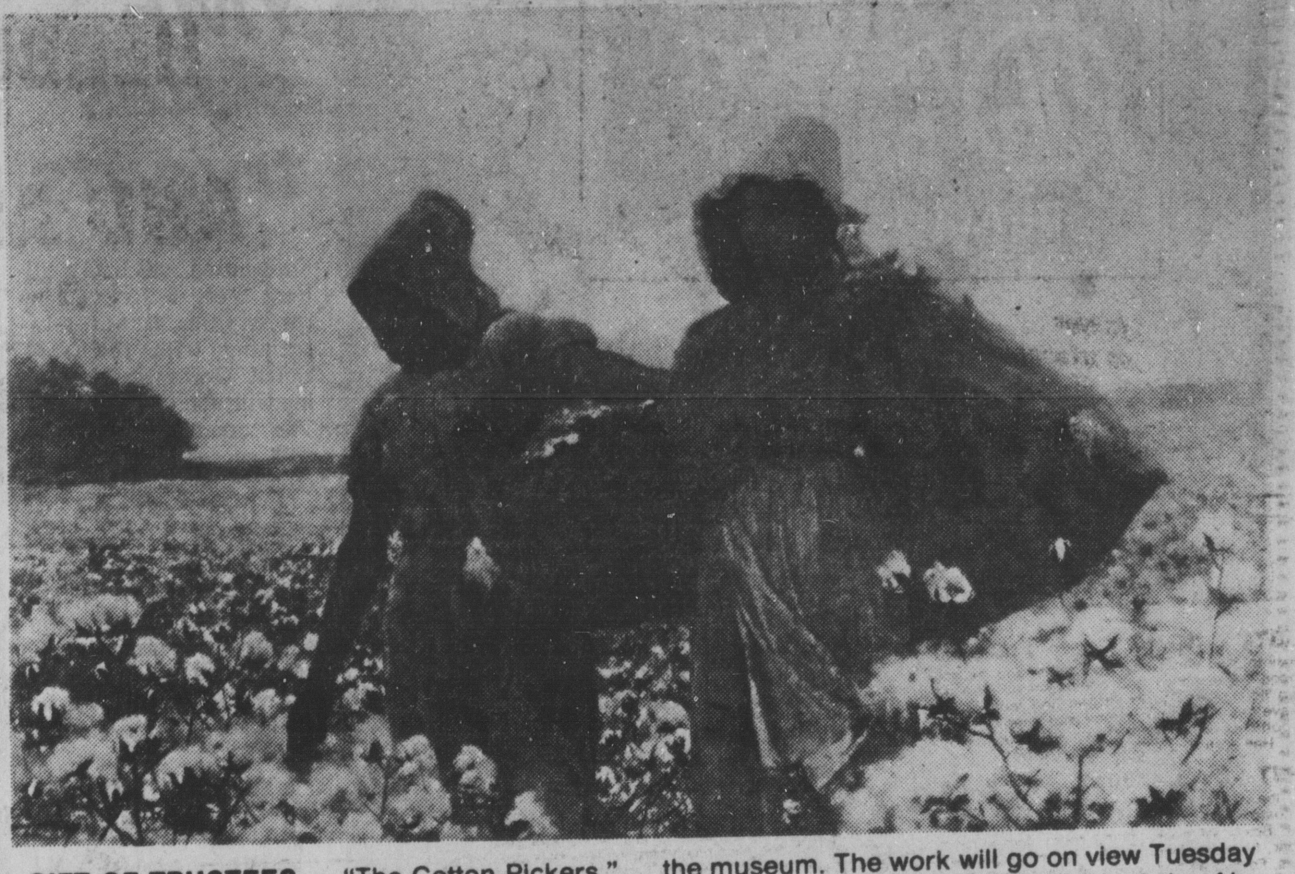
Guild to hear artist

Artist Mike Wienkauf will demonstrate landscape painting at a meeting of the Diamond Bar Artists Guild at Chaparral Intermediate School, 1405 S. Spruce Tree Drive, Diamond Bar, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Wienkauf's art career started at age nine when he completed his first oil painting. Since then he has spent years studying with William Alexander, while teaching English and coaching football at Canyon High School in Orange County.

Wienkauf and his paintings can be seen every Sunday at Griswold's in Claremont, and he also shows and coordinates the art shows at Edwards Mansion in San Bernardino. He still finds time in his busy schedule to teach classes and workshops throughout the San Gabriel Valley.

The demonstration will use the "magic white" technique originated by Alexander.



GIFT OF TRUSTEES — "The Cotton Pickers," an oil by Winslow Homer, has been presented to the county Museum of Art by 15 trustees of the museum. The work will go on view Tuesday in the Recent Acquisitions Gallery of the Ahmanson Gallery. Admission is free.

MUSIC — ART — DRAMA

At Pomona College

Dr. Seuss exhibit

An exhibition of 130 original drawings and watercolors by Dr. Seuss (Theodore Geisel) will open Friday at Montgomery Art Gallery, Pomona College. Admission is free. sion is free.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Galleries of the Claremont Colleges and the George G. Stone Library of the Claremont Graduate School. It is on loan from the UCLA library.

Among the drawings will be examples from the books "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins," "The King's Stilts," "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," "On Beyond Zebra," "McElligot's Pool," "Happy Birthday," "Thidwick the Big-hearted Moose," "The Cat in the Hat Returns" and "Yertle the Turtle." All of the drawings for the book "Horton Hatches the Egg" will be on display. There will also be examples of mock-up books which preceded the printed volumes and four examples of books printed in braille with raised illustrations by other artists.

Also included will be some of Dr. Seuss's work for advertising, including examples from the Flit campaign ("Quick Henry the Flit!") and examples of drawings for political cartoons he made during the second World War.

There will be two unusual features of the exhibition. First, there will be several series of drawings which show the evolution of images from the first rough pencil sketches to the highly finished drawings from which the reproductions in the books were made. There will also be several examples of different images for a project, only one of which was finally chosen. For example, there will be six different cover designs for "Dr. Seuss's ABC," each with different lettering.

Secondly, there will be a section to show how four-color reproductions are made, using examples for the cover of "Happy Birthday." There will be the initial drawing, the finished watercolor and the separations for each of the four colors (red, yellow, blue and black) as well as a trial proof and the final cover.

The exhibition will be on display until Dec. 21. The Gallery is open 1-5 p.m., daily, including Saturdays and Sundays, and Wednesday 7-9 p.m. It will be closed Thanksgiving Day.

A children's party to celebrate the exhibition, "The Wonderful World of Dr. Seuss," will be held Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

After seeing Seuss's drawings with their parents, children will be able to draw imaginary animals or whatever strikes their fancy, inventing names to go with them. These drawings will be pinned up in the gallery and later will be sent to Dr. Seuss.

Gallery slates art exhibition

An exhibition of oils and watercolors by Hollywood artist William R. Gatewood will open with a reception at the Edward-Dean Museum of Decorative Arts in Cherry Valley at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The public is invited.

A former resident of Ontario, Gatewood graduated from San Jose State University and earned a bachelor of fine arts and a master of fine arts degree at Otis Art Institute. He received the Elsie De Wolfe Scholarship Award.

Gatewood taught in Mannheim, Germany, while serving with the U. S. Army and now teaches at San Fernando Valley College and the Palos Verdes Art Center.

Gatewood has had shows in Beverly Hills, Scottsdale, Ariz., New York City and Seattle, and his works are in numerous private and corporate collections throughout the country.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

S & L shows oils

Oil paintings by Ferne Doll are on exhibition through Nov. 30 in the Lobby Gallery of Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association, 399 N. Garey Ave., Pomona.

Mrs. Doll has been painting for 11 years, taking art instruction in Detroit, Oklahoma City, Dallas and California. Some of her instructors have been Laura Campbell, Kwok Wai Lau, Althea McLaren, Jan Muse Crummer, Helen Reed, Thelma Smith and Nona Taylor. The exhibit is made up of still lifes, florals and landscapes.

S.F. Ballet due at Bridges

The San Francisco Ballet, the oldest classical ballet company in the United States, will appear at the Claremont Colleges' Bridges Auditorium Nov. 18 at 8 p.m.

The company is building a repertoire to include works representative of all the great living choreographers and seeks to develop local creative talent, performing new works created by its own artists.

It began in 1933 as the San Francisco Opera Ballet, providing dancers for San Francisco Opera performances. In the same year, the San Francisco Ballet School was founded as a permanent source of well-trained talent for the company. It was the first American dance company to tour the Far East in 1957, and the first to perform the full-length "Nutcracker" in the United States in 1944.

Directors of the company are Lew Christensen and Michael Smuin. Says Smiun, "The San Francisco Ballet is entering a Golden Age. It now has the creative force, leadership and talent to become a company of international status — a company that will set trends, not follow them."

The program includes "Concerto Barocco," choreographer, George Balanchine; "Airs De Ballet," choreographer, Lew Christensen; "Gershwin-A Suite of Dances," choreographer, Robert Gladstein, and the Southern California premiere of "Media," choreographed by Michael Smuin.

Tickets are available at the central box office and Mutual ticket agencies. Student and group rates are available.

Local artist honored

Jerry Stevenson, art teacher at Alta Loma High School, has had one of his pieces of sculpture accepted for exhibit in the San Bernardino County Museum in Redlands. It is a life-size head in clay, called Cynthia and will be judged by William A. Smith, an artist from Pineville, Pa.

The exhibit will be open to the public until Nov. 27 during usual museum hours.

Stevenson has studied at Otis Art Institute, where he learned this medium of sculpture. His recent additional work has been done with Betty Davenport Ford.

Soyer art on display

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-eight drawings and watercolors and five oils by artist Raphael Soyer are on display at the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution, through Nov. 27.

Hemet artist to talk

Artist/teacher Kolan Peterson will give a talk and demonstration at a meeting of the Associated Artists at the Ontario Public Library, 215 E. C St., at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Peterson resides in Hemet where he maintains his studio and instructs watercolor classes.

Peterson's serious approach to watercolor began 10 years ago under the instruction of Robert Bannister of Moreno and Robert Landry of San Diego. His paintings are featured at Chriswood Gallery in Rancho California where he has won several awards in invitational outdoor shows

The San Bernardino Traditional Artists also selected one of his works for the Purchase Prize in 1975. He is a member of the American Masters Society, a group of professional artists who have as a goal the perfection of skill in their craft. This group recently hosted shows at the San Bernardino Hilton and the Edward-Dean Museum.

SURE IS, UNCLE COSMO... MAYBE WE SHOULD LIGHT A FIRE
THAT WOULD BE NICE, BUT I'M NOT VERY GOOD AT BUILDING FIRES.
BUT I MAY HAVE SOMETHING IN MY LIBRARY THAT MIGHT BE USEFUL...
AH, YES... HERE IT IS.
A HANDBOOK ON WILDERNESS SURVIVAL.... SEE IF THAT WILL HELP YOU BUILD A FIRE.
YEP... THAT'S GOT IT STARTED, NOW HAND ME A COUPLE OF VOLUMES OF THE ENCYCLOPEDIA..

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Sturdy denim marble bags can be made by cutting off the legs of old jeans. Leave the hem in and sew up the other end and then run a shoelace through the hem. They are really quite nice. — M.S.

DEAR POLLY --- Paper towels are getting so expensive, so we use cut-up clean brown paper bags for draining bacon and other fried foods. This is an excellent way to recycle paper grocery bags. --- M.D.W.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY --- My cat sometimes chases birds. As this bothered me, I slipped a little jingle bell on a thin piece of elastic thread around her neck, so now the birds can hear her coming. This is better than a collar with a bell. There is no danger of her getting caught on something and choking. The elastic thread will break from her weight. --- CHRIS

DEAR POLLY --- When I make iced tea for those who like lemon and sugar in it, I add a lemonade fruit drink to suit my taste. --- MRS. H.S.

(Polly's Note: When making a big pitcher of iced tea I find it easy to add one undiluted can of frozen lemonade.)

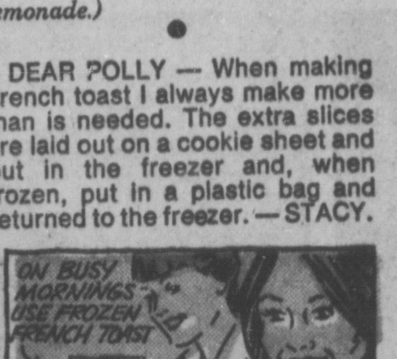
DEAR POLLY — When making French toast I always make more than is needed. The extra slices are laid out on a cookie sheet and put in the freezer and, when frozen, put in a plastic bag and returned to the freezer. — STACY.



ON BUSY MORNINGS USE FROZEN FRENCH TOAST

DEAR POLLY — I have been saving choice samples of my childern's school work since kindergarden, as well as programs and momentoes of special events they took part in. These are kept in a special box for each and when they graduate from high school I plan to present each one with his box for a keepsake. — JOAN.

DEAR POLLY --- Instead of using liquid fabric softener when washing nylon hose, we rub on one of those fabric softener sheets and also do this on our hair when it is full of static electricity after washing. -- LILISE

DEAR POLLY --- My neighbor has many outside chores, so during the cold weather he fills a plastic detergent bottle with very hot water and carries it in his hip pocket while working outside. When his hands get very cold he takes out the little hot water bottle and rubs his hands over it. Thought some might like to remember this for the coming winter. --- MRS. M.E.

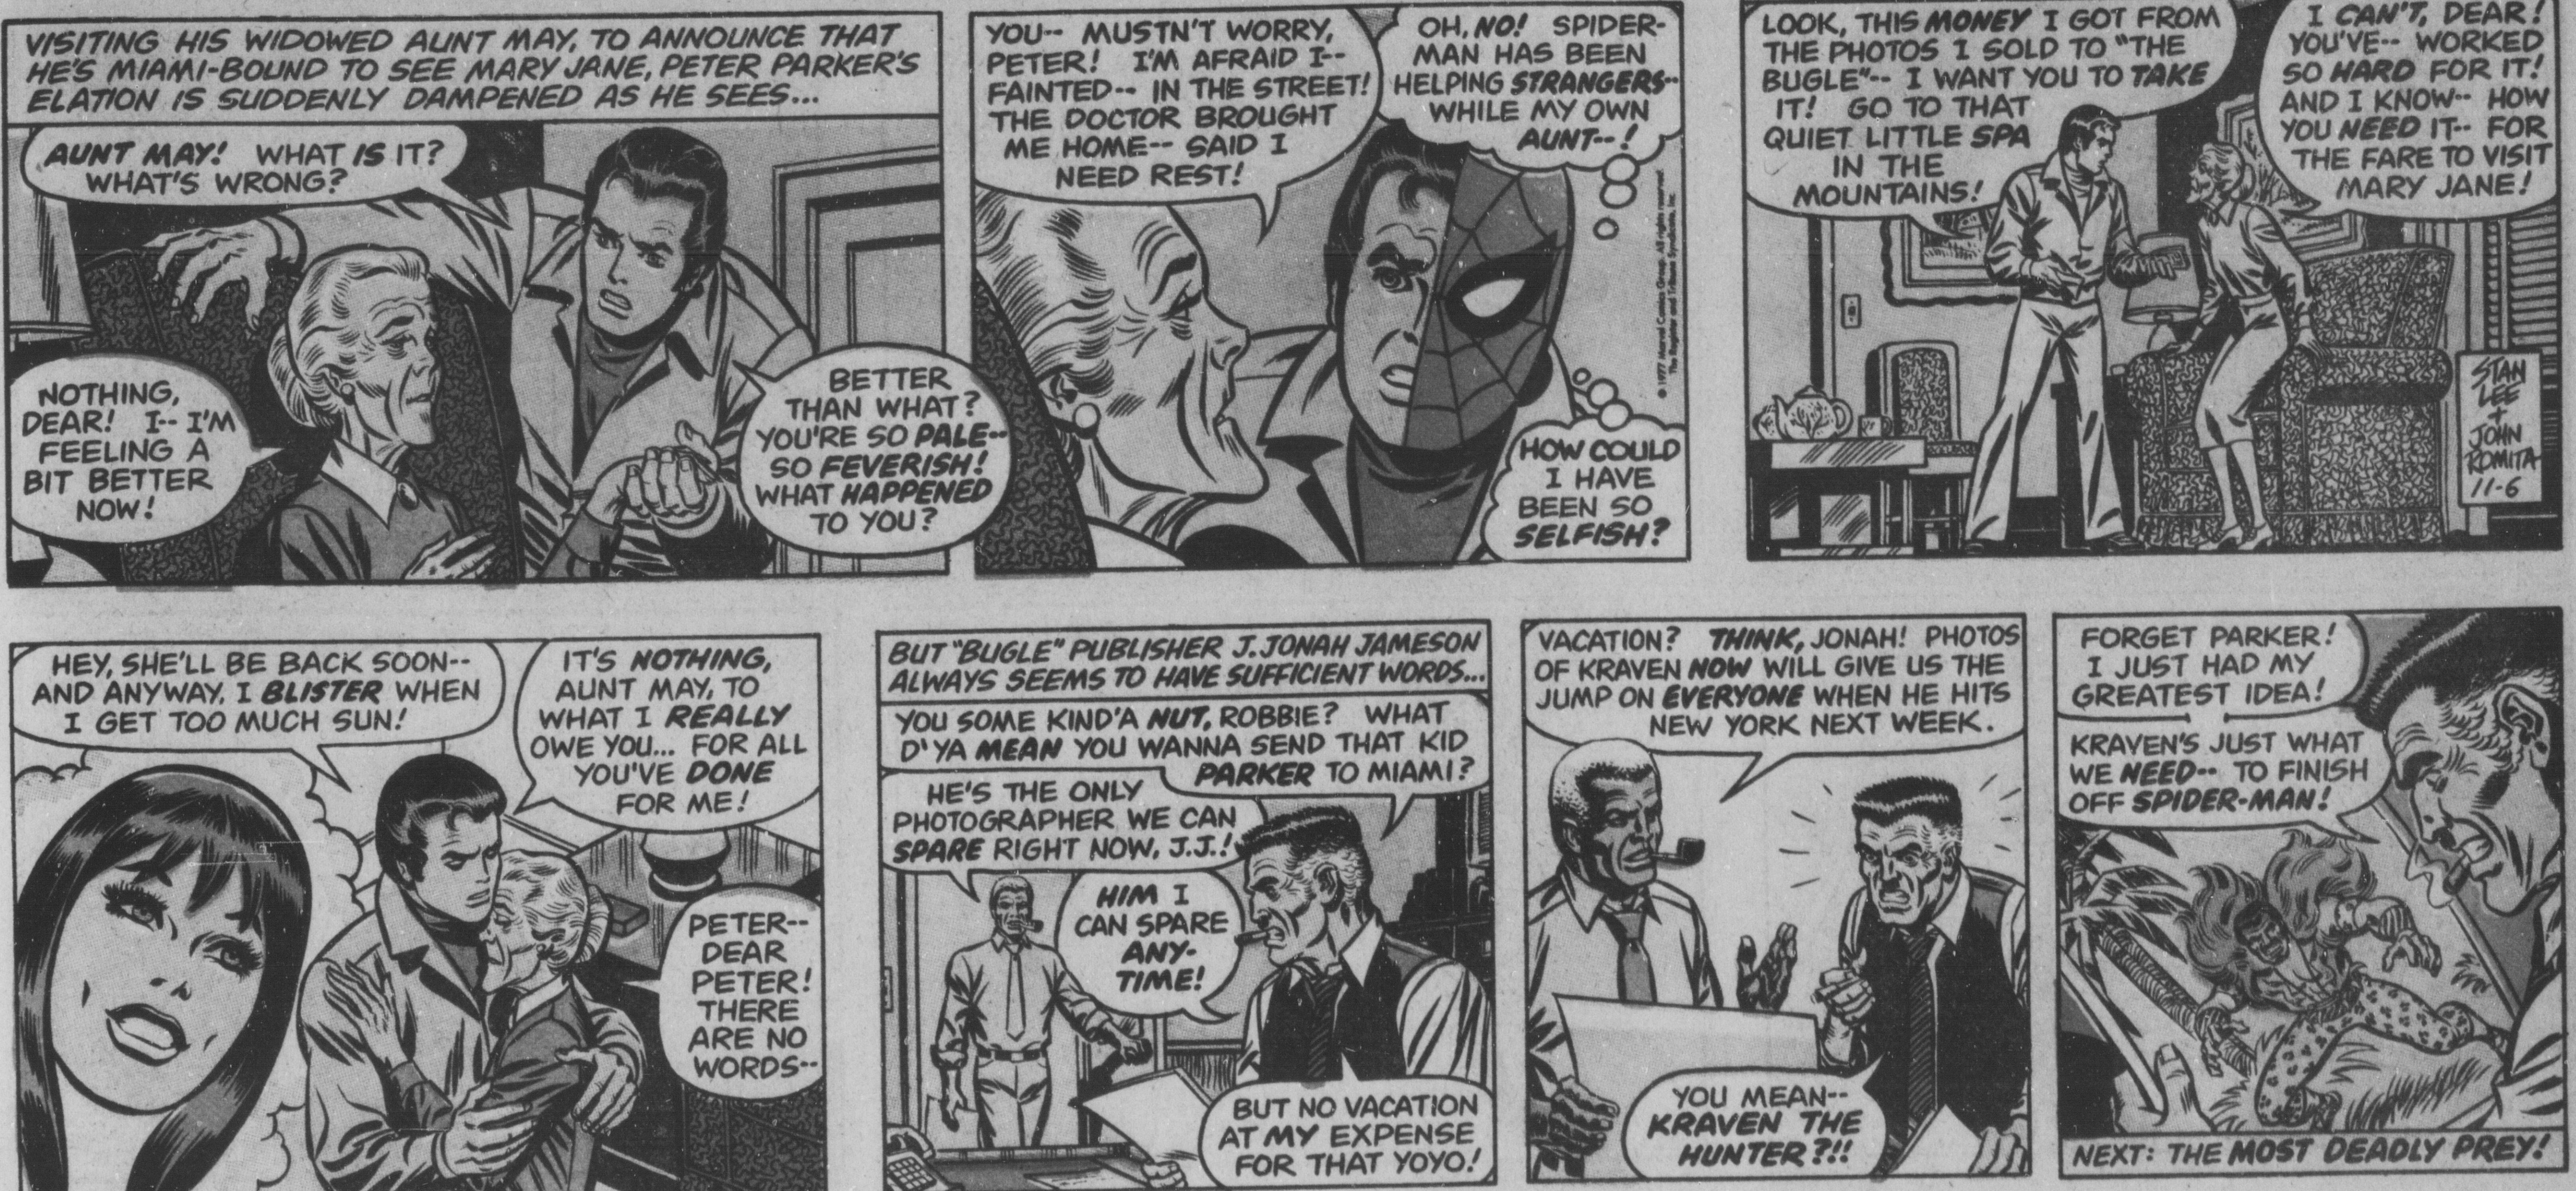
the AMAZING SPIDER-MAN®

By Stan Lee and John Romita



VISITING HIS WIDOWED AUNT MAY, TO ANNOUNCE THAT HE'S MIAMI-BOUND TO SEE MARY JANE, PETER PARKER'S ELATION IS SUDDENLY DAMPENED AS HE SEES...
AUNT MAY! WHAT IS IT? WHAT'S WRONG?
NOTHING, DEAR! I-- I'M FEELING A BIT BETTER NOW!
BETTER THAN WHAT? YOU'RE SO PALE-- SO FEVERISH! WHAT HAPPENED TO YOU?
YOU-- MUSTN'T WORRY, PETER! I'M AFRAID I-- FAINTED-- IN THE STREET! THE DOCTOR BROUGHT ME HOME-- SAID I NEED REST!
OH, NO! SPIDER-MAN HAS BEEN HELPING STRANGERS-- WHILE MY OWN AUNT--!
HOW COULD I HAVE BEEN SO SELFISH?

LOOK, THIS MONEY I GOT FROM THE PHOTOS I SOLD TO "THE BUGLE"-- I WANT YOU TO TAKE IT! GO TO THAT QUIET LITTLE SPA IN THE MOUNTAINS!
I CAN'T, DEAR! YOU'VE-- WORKED SO HARD FOR IT! AND I KNOW-- HOW YOU NEED IT-- FOR THE FARE TO VISIT MARY JANE!
STAN LEE + JOHN ROMITA 11-6
HEY, SHE'LL BE BACK SOON-- AND ANYWAY, I BLISTER WHEN I GET TOO MUCH SUN!
IT'S NOTHING, AUNT MAY, TO WHAT I REALLY OWE YOU... FOR ALL YOU'VE DONE FOR ME!
PETER-- DEAR PETER! THERE ARE NO WORDS--
BUT "BUGLE" PUBLISHER J. JONAH JAMESON ALWAYS SEEMS TO HAVE SUFFICIENT WORDS...
YOU SOME KIND'A NUT, ROBBIE? WHAT D'YA MEAN YOU WANNA SEND THAT KID PARKER TO MIAMI?
HE'S THE ONLY PHOTOGRAPHER WE CAN SPARE RIGHT NOW, J.J.!
HIM I CAN SPARE ANY-TIME!
BUT NO VACATION AT MY EXPENSE FOR THAT YOYO!
VACATION? THINK, JONAH! PHOTOS OF KRAVEN NOW WILL GIVE US THE JUMP ON EVERYONE WHEN HE HITS NEW YORK NEXT WEEK.
YOU MEAN-- KRAVEN THE HUNTER?!!
FORGET PARKER! I JUST HAD MY GREATEST IDEA!
KRAVEN'S JUST WHAT WE NEED-- TO FINISH OFF SPIDER-MAN!

VURTRICIA BROOKS OF GASTONIA, NC, ASKS:
"DO GOATS EAT TIN CANS?"
GOATS WILL TRY TO EAT PRACTICALLY ANYTHING, BUT IT ISN'T TRUE THAT THEY EAT TIN CANS. A GOAT WILL LICK OR CHEW ANYTHING THAT CONTAINS MINERALS. THE NEXT TIME YOU SEE A GOAT RUMMAGING AROUND A PILE OF CANS, TAKE NOTICE AND YOU WILL SEE THAT IT IS ONLY LICKING THE LABELS OFF THE CANS TO OBTAIN THE GLUE ON THE BACKS, AS WELL AS LICKING THE CAN FOR ANY FOOD IT MAY CONTAIN.

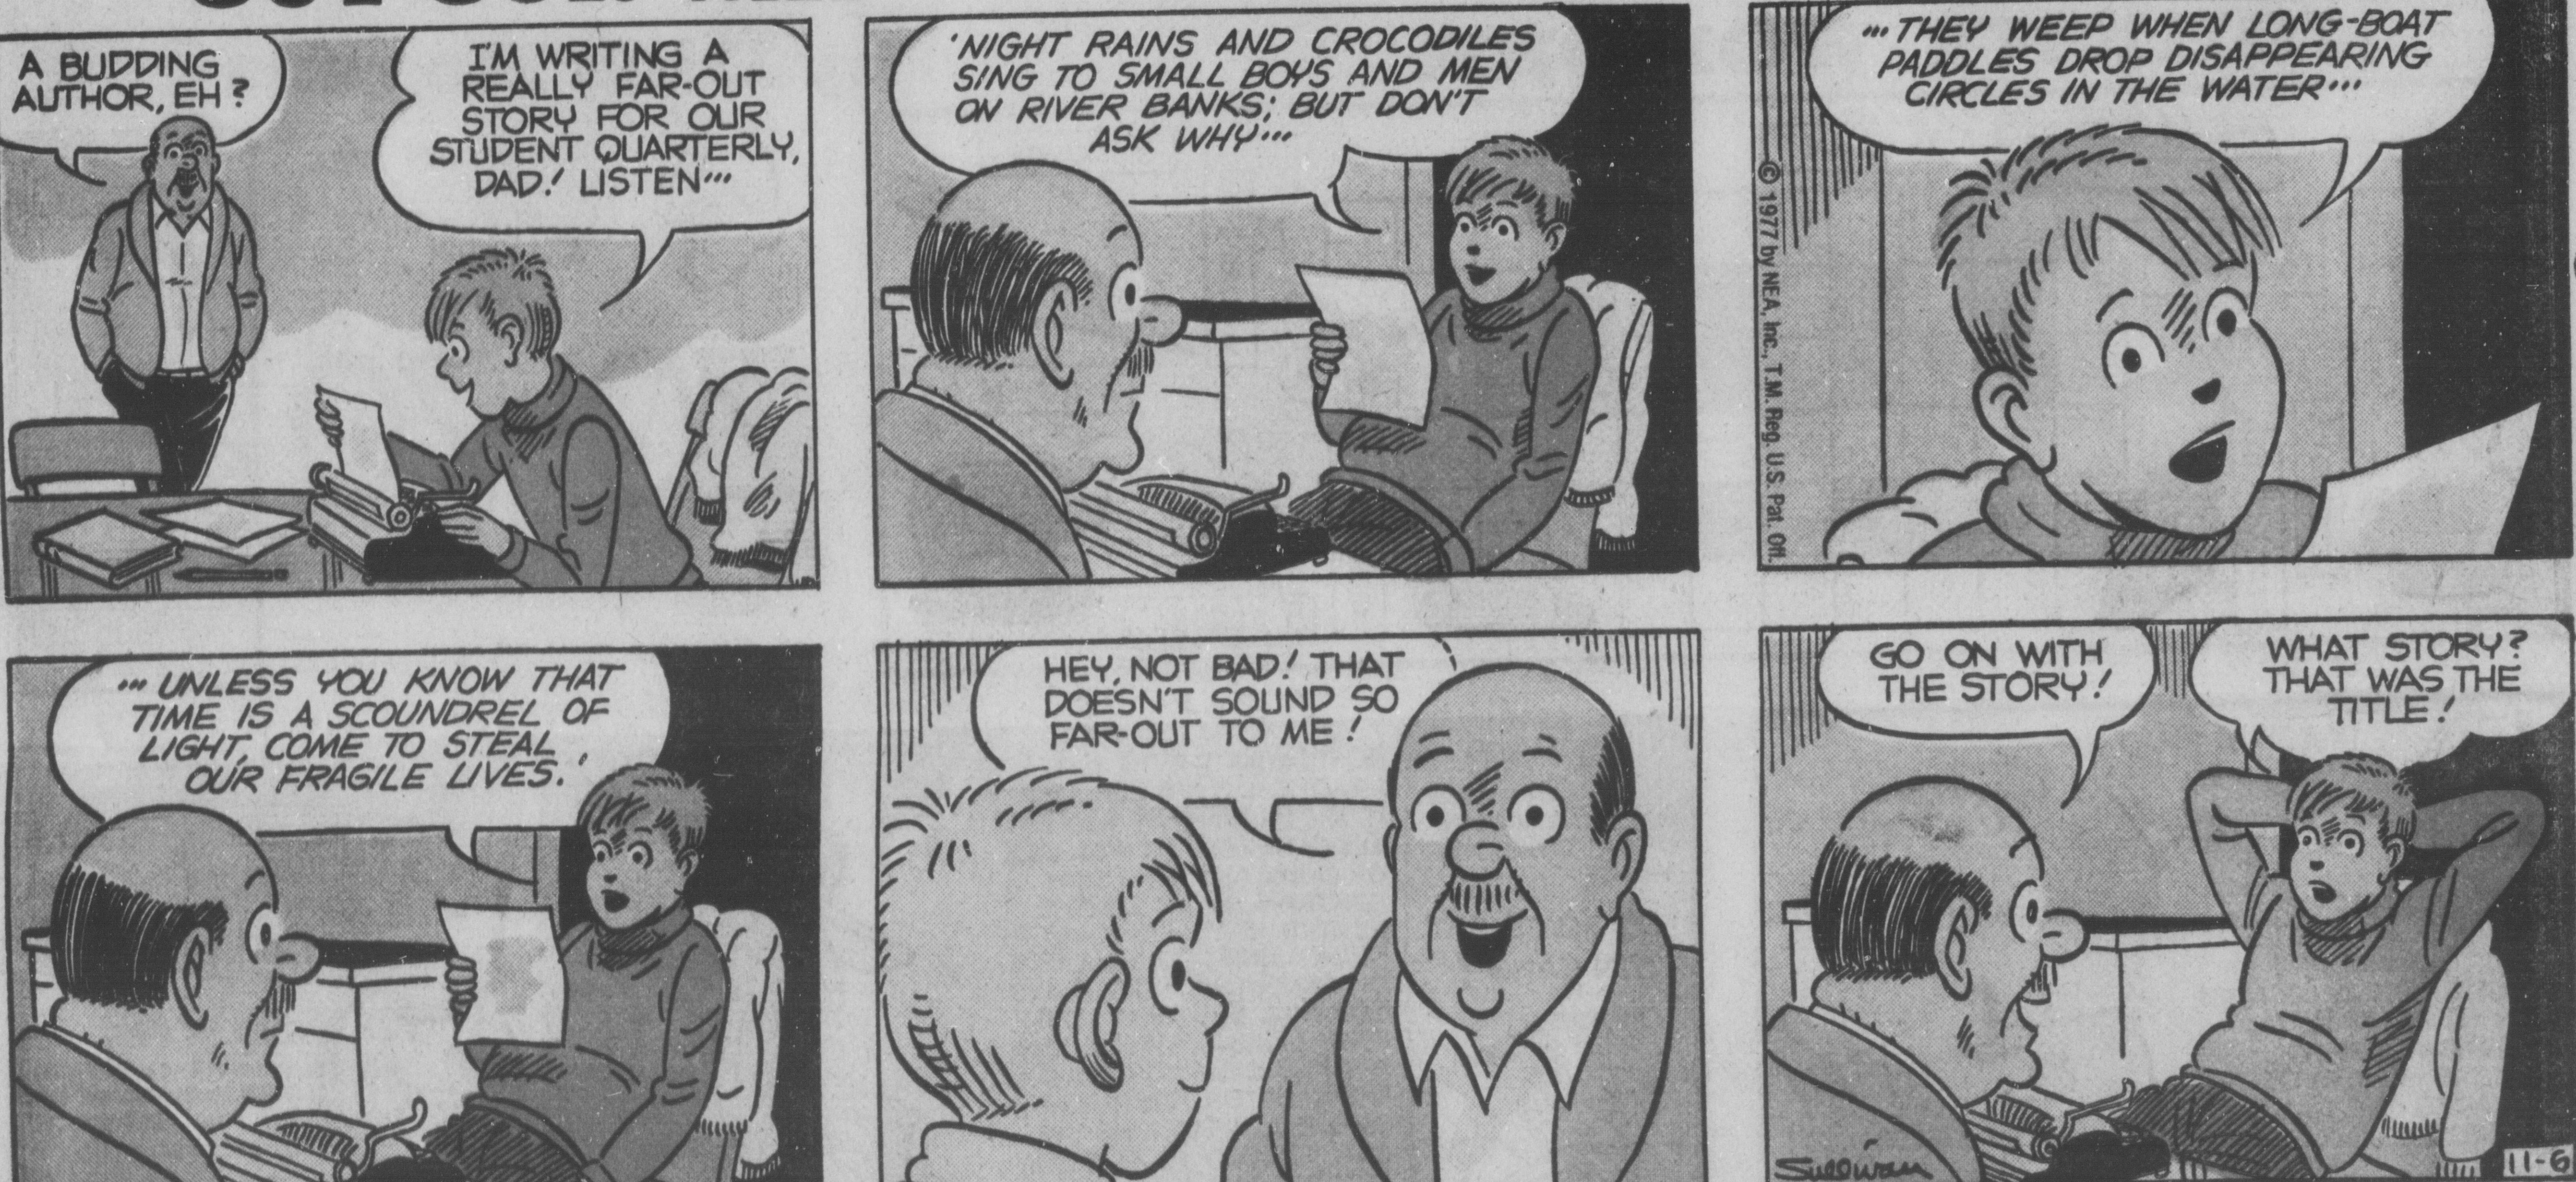
OUT OUR WAY

The Willets

by Ed Sullivan



A BUDDING AUTHOR, EH?
I'M WRITING A REALLY FAR-OUT STORY FOR OUR STUDENT QUARTERLY, DAD! LISTEN...
'NIGHT RAINS AND CROCODILES SING TO SMALL BOYS AND MEN ON RIVER BANKS; BUT DON'T ASK WHY...
...THEY WEEP WHEN LONG-BOAT PADDLES DROP DISAPPEARING CIRCLES IN THE WATER...
...UNLESS YOU KNOW THAT TIME IS A SCOUNDREL OF LIGHT, COME TO STEAL OUR FRAGILE LIVES.'
HEY, NOT BAD! THAT DOESN'T SOUND SO FAR-OUT TO ME!
GO ON WITH THE STORY!
WHAT STORY? THAT WAS THE TITLE!

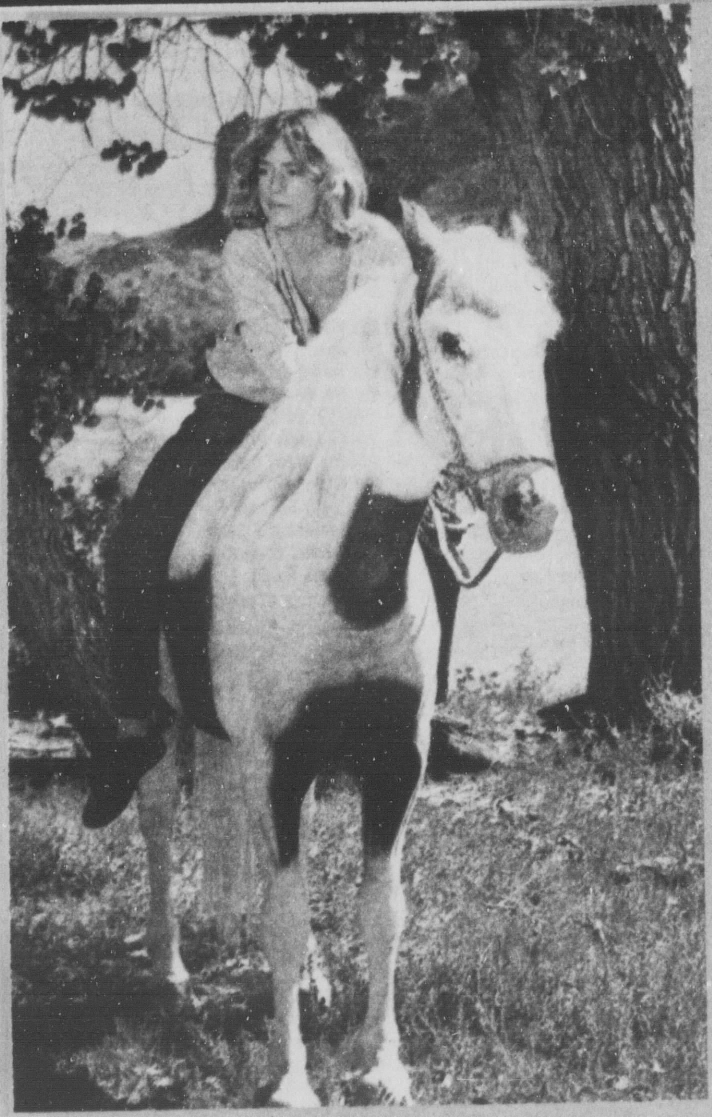
"SERVING THE POMONA & SAN GABRIEL VALLEYS FOR 15 YEARS"



TEEN-AGE PONY EXPRESS RIDER

Leif Garrett, current teen-age singing sensation, stars as a 15-year-old Pony Express rider who must outrun Indians, then battle fatigue, rough trails and the elements to carry the mail from the Nebraska Territory to the West Coast, in "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion," airing on NBC Sunday (7-9PM).

An NBC program development project, the action-adventure movie was filmed on location at sites in New Mexico, including the San Ildefonso Indian reservation.

Fifteen-year-old Peter (Garrett) lives on a trading post operated by his family in the Nebraska Territory in 1861. His father, Jethro, is a stern, embittered but honest man who feels Peter's mother is over-protective of him.

After an unsavory character named Lefty Slade leaves a foal at the trading post in payment for a horseshoeing job, Peter raises the animal and eventually breaks him for riding.

Peter learns that the Pony Express is seeking accomplished young riders for a difficult and hazardous new route to California and he wins a job after demonstrating his horsemanship.

DIRTY WORK IN ANCIENT ROME

The political and personal intrigue, corruption and lust that toppled the glory of vainglorious Rome unfolds on Masterpiece Theatre when "I, Claudius" begins Sunday at 9PM on KCET, Channel 28.

Based on Robert Graves' best-selling novels about dirty work in ancient Rome, the Mobil-funded PBS series lavishly depicts the society of the all-powerful Claudians, the family whose business was ruling the world. In their egomaniacal pursuit of power at any price, they underestimated Claudius—a dribbling lame spastic whose mind, they assumed, was as deficient as his disease-riddled body.

Starring is Derek Jacobi as Claudius. Sian Phillips portrays Livia, the breathtakingly beautiful, murdering Mother of Rome. John Hurt is the mad Caligula; Margaret Tyzack is Claudius' mother, Antonia. Sheila White, Brian Blessed, George Baker, Patrick Stewart and Stratford Johns also star.

ADULT COMEDY SERIES

Soap, the bright, new half-hour continuing adult character comedy airing on ABC, Tuesdays at 9:30PM, follows the lives of two sisters, Jessica Tate and Mary Campbell, whose zany families have more than their share of problems and secrets.

Chester Tate, the father, is a pompous business man with a roving eye. His wife, Jessica, is an eternal optimist and for her, life would be perfect if it were only set to music. Jessica and Chester are the parents of three children: two daughters, Corinne and Eunice, and a son, Billy.

The girls have decidedly different personalities. Corinne is vivacious and has a zest for life while her sister, Eunice, is more of a traditionalist and quite conservative. Billy, 14, is a bright teen-ager struggling through the problems of adolescence. Living with the Tates is Jessica's father, the Major, who still is fighting World War II. Working for the family is their servant, Benson, who has been with his employers for a number of years. Benson knows everything about everyone. His tart remarks about the Tates and the Campbells add a not of hilarity to their situations.

And, residing on the opposite side of town, are the Campbells: Mary, Jessica's sister; Burt, her husband; and sons, Jodie and Danny. Mary's life is a little more organized than Jessica's. However, life hasn't been too good to Mary, a woman determined to overcome her many adversities. Her husband, Burt, is a hard-working man who loves Mary very much. Although he does not make as much money as Chester Tate and will never be "upper crust," the Campbells, too, have their share of secrets and problems. Burt's biggest concern is accepting his stepsons, Jodie and Danny. Burt finds it hard to acceptJodie's special life style, and the fact that Danny is involved with the mob.

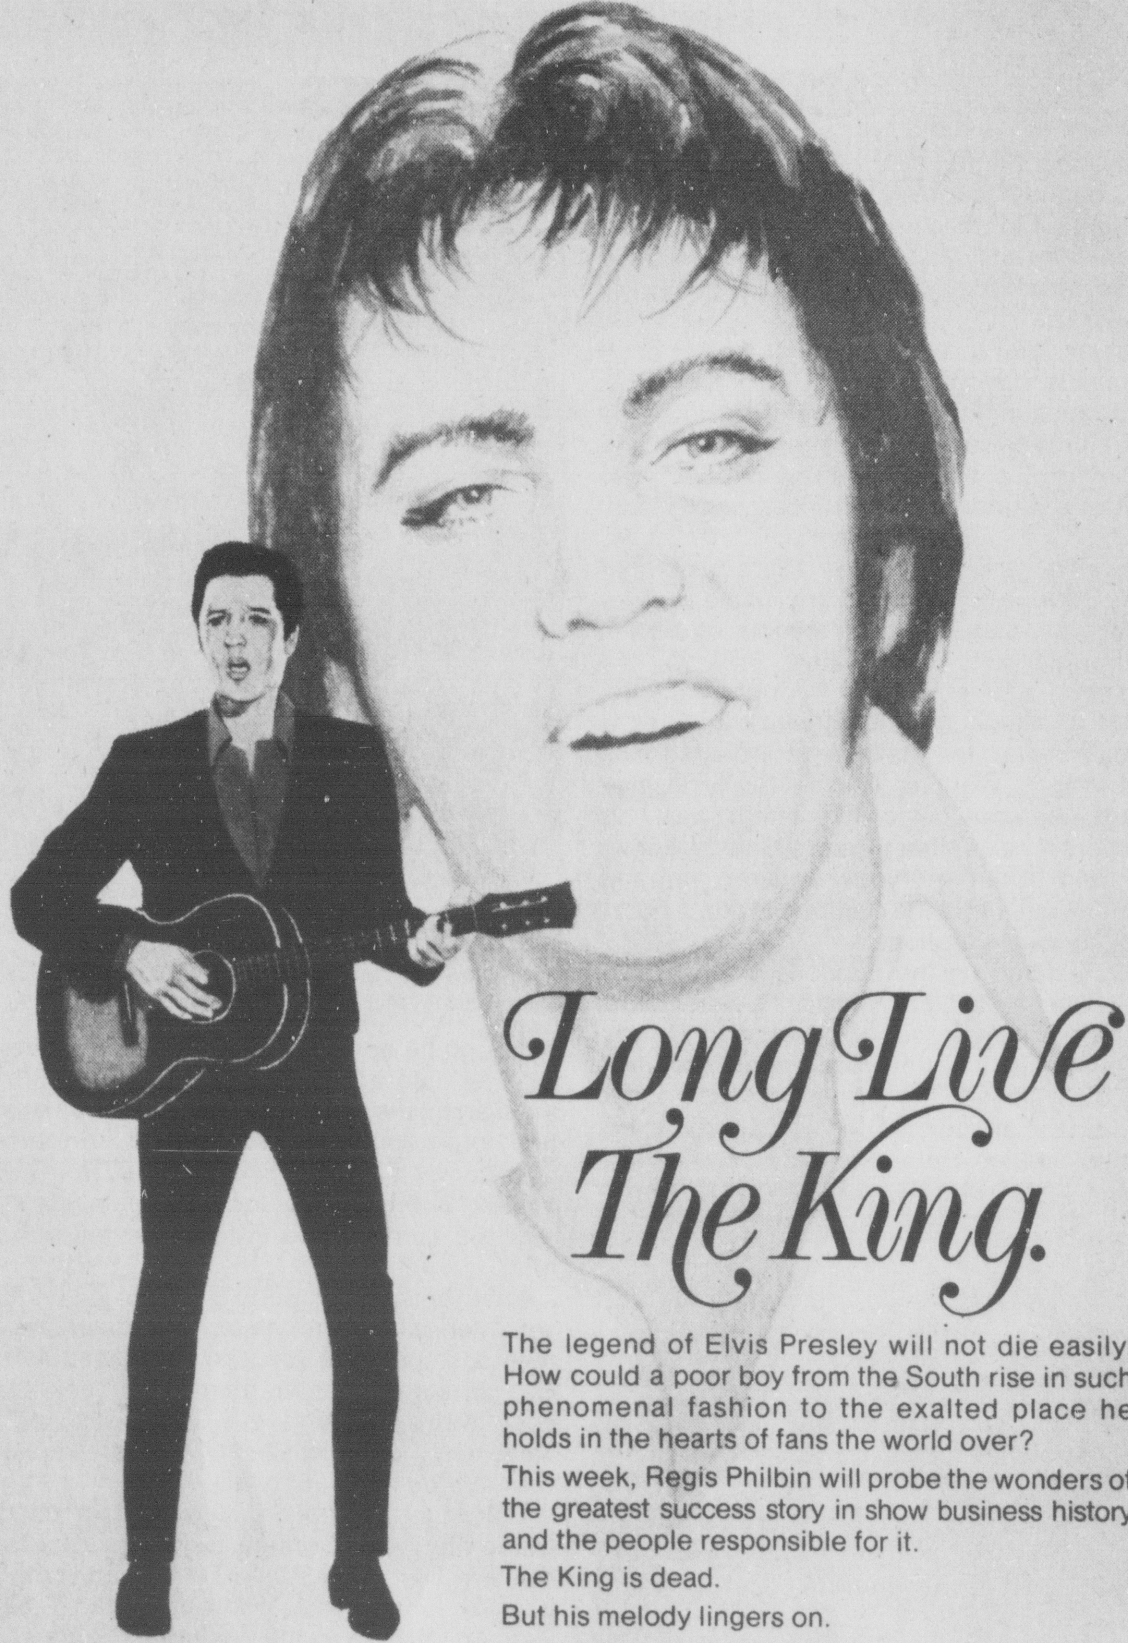
Each episode of Soap consists of multiple, yet interlocking storylines that delineate the relationships of the Tates and the Campbells (as well as some of their friends) as they unfold each week. Through the Campbells and the Tates, many of today's social concerns are dealt with in a comedic manner.

Starring in Soap are Jimmy Baio as Billy, Diana Canova as Corinne, Billy Crystal as Jodie, Cathryn Damon as Mary, Robert Guillaume as Benson, Katherine Helmond as Jessica, Richard Libertini as the Godfather, Robert Mandan as Chester, Richard Mulligan as Burt, Arthur Peterson as the Major, Kathryn Reynolds as Claire, Jennifer Salt as Eunice, Robert Urich as Peter and Ted Wass as Danny.

The series was created and written by Susan Harris, who also produces. Executive producers are Tony Thomas and Paul Junger Witt. Jay Sandrich is the director. Filmed before a studio audience, Soap is a Witt/Thomas/Harris Production.



Long Live The King.

The legend of Elvis Presley will not die easily. How could a poor boy from the South rise in such phenomenal fashion to the exalted place he holds in the hearts of fans the world over?

This week, Regis Philbin will probe the wonders of the greatest success story in show business history and the people responsible for it.

The King is dead.

But his melody lingers on.

A nine-hour drama which probes a lifestyle of contrasts as the approach to family, busine and relationships with rivals reflect the complex nature of life in the underworld. Tonight shows how young Vito Corleone (DeNiro), who witnesses the slaying of his mother by a powerful Sicilian landowner, arrives in New York in 1918, marries and gets a legitimate job but loses it due to mob pressure. Determined to avenge the wrong done him, he takes the first steps on the path of ruthlessness that will make him the domineering, respected neighborhood Don. HOW SHELLEY DUVALL
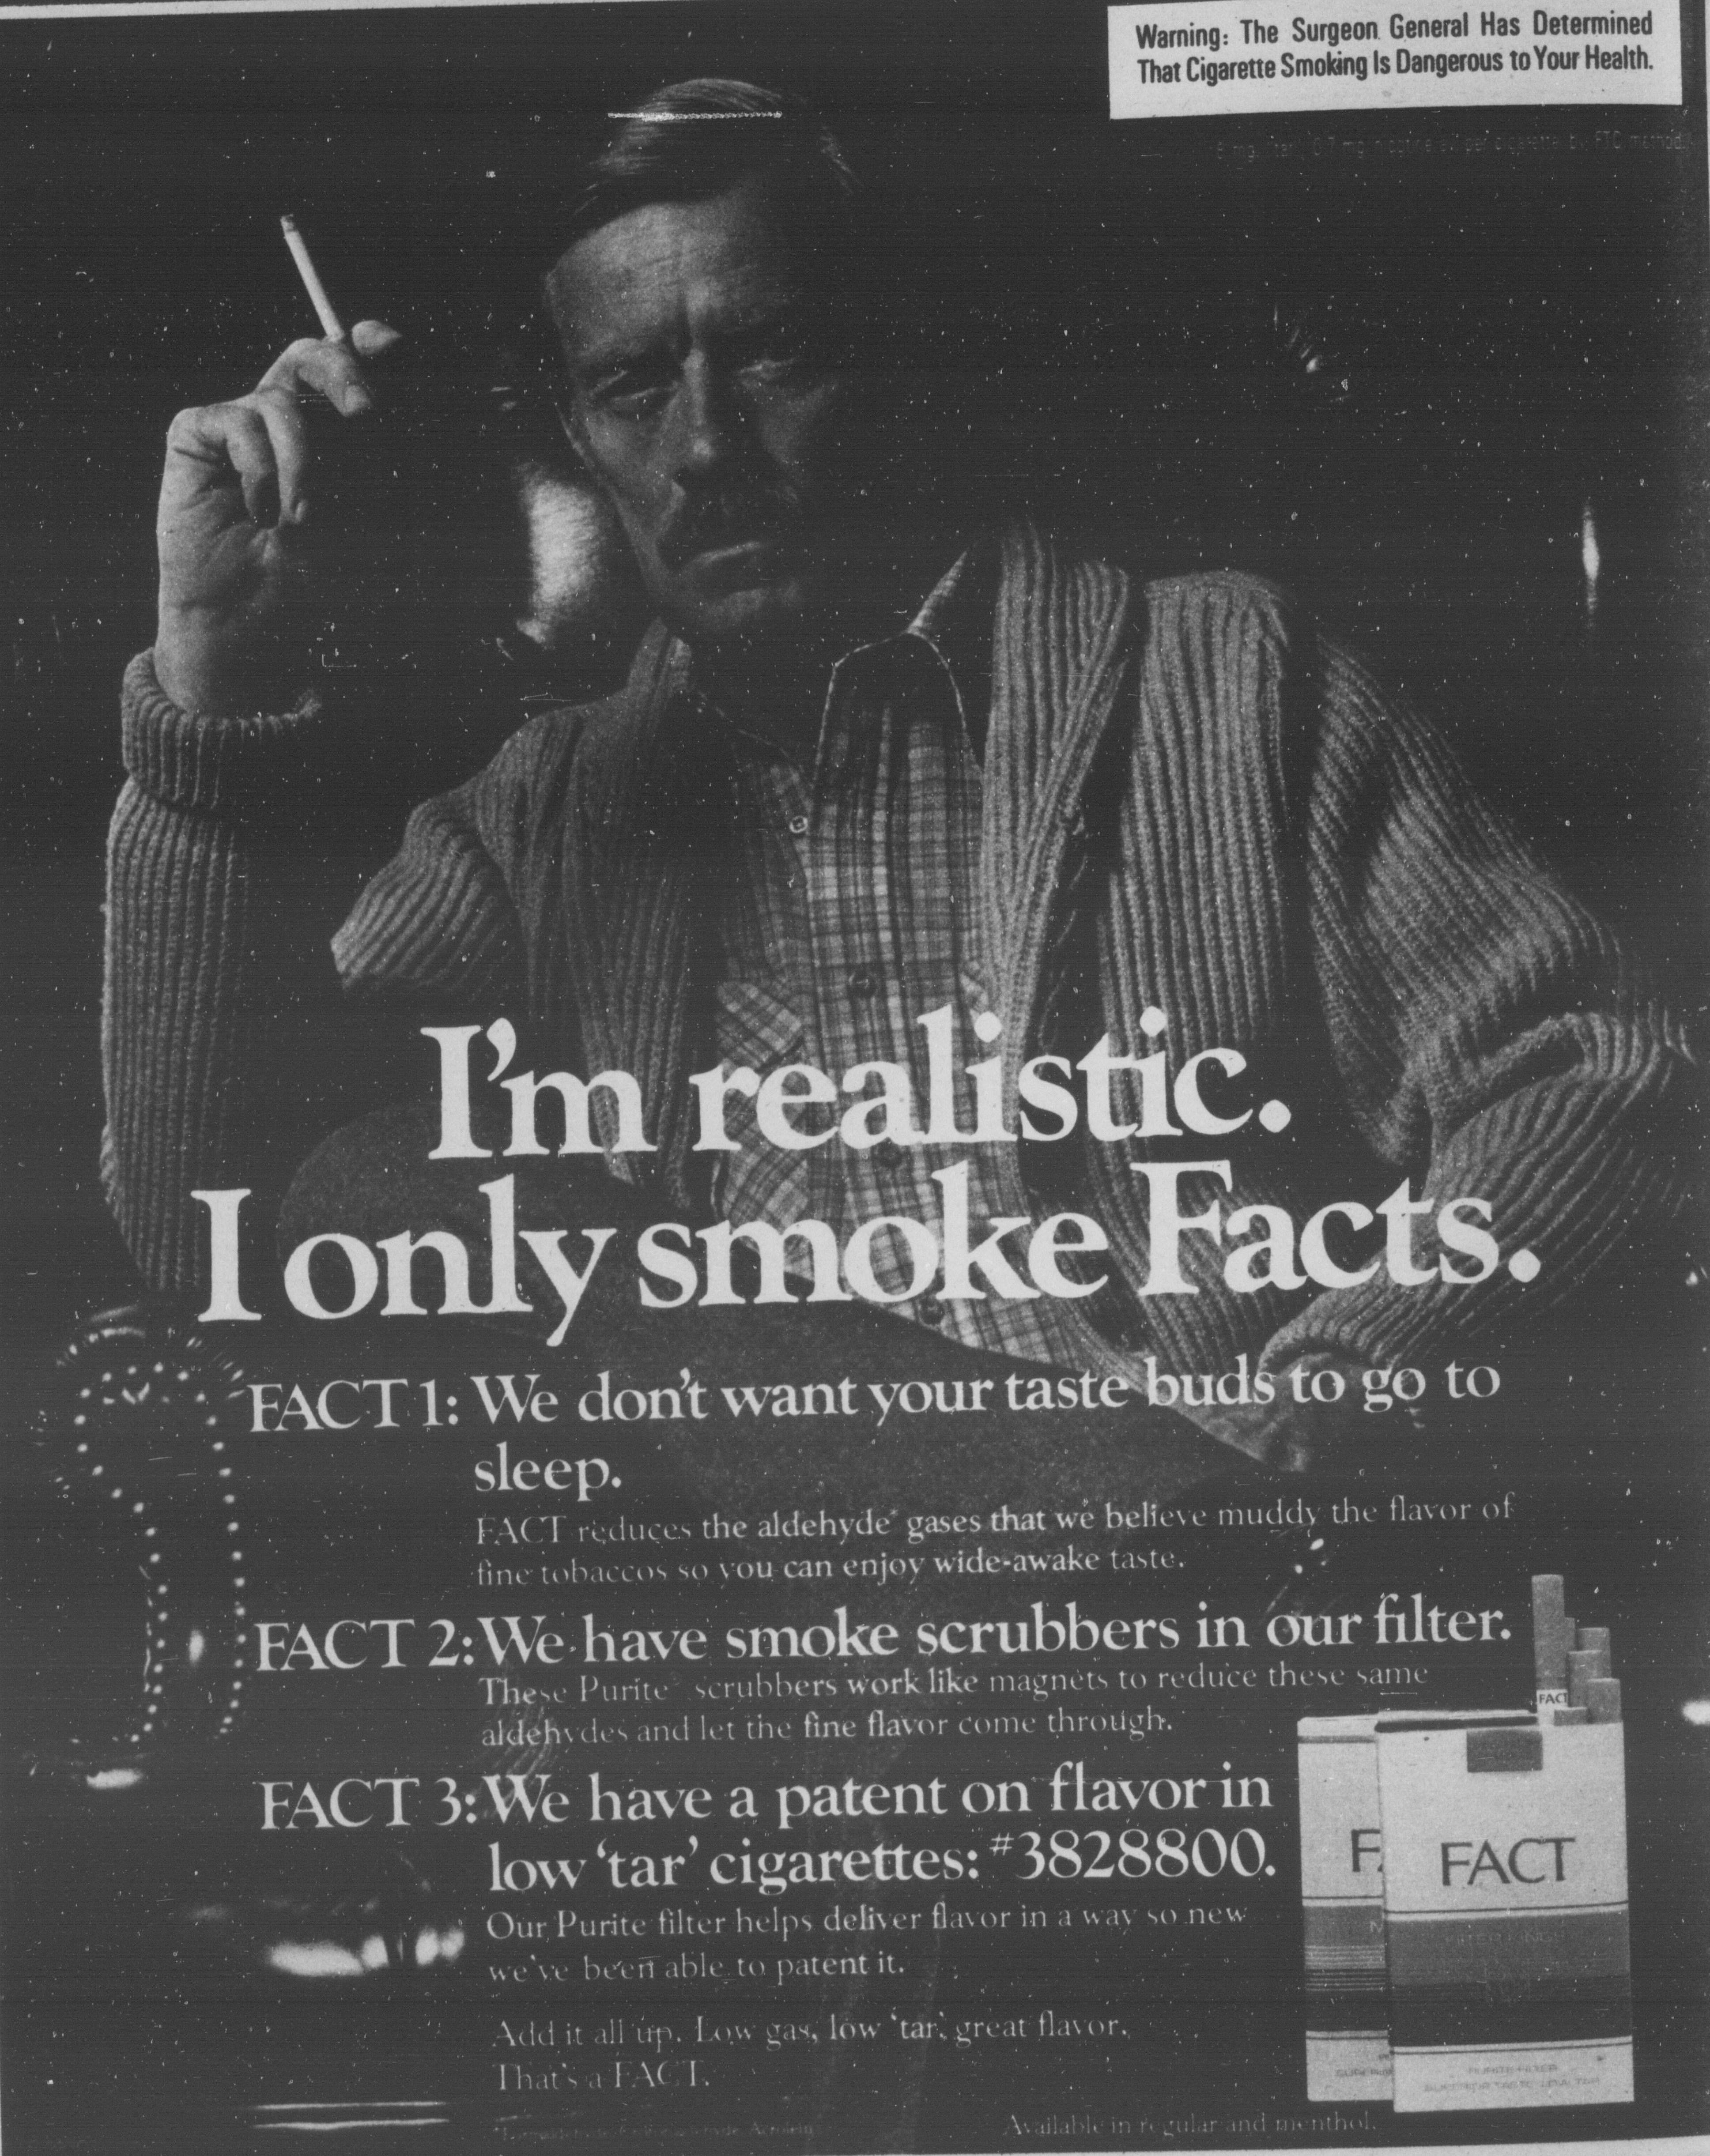
BECAME A MOVIE STAR

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

8 mg. 'tar', 0.7 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC method.



I'm realistic. I only smoke Facts.

FACT 1: We don't want your taste buds to go to sleep.

FACT reduces the aldehyde* gases that we believe muddy the flavor of fine tobaccos so you can enjoy wide-awake taste.

FACT 2: We have smoke scrubbers in our filter.

These Purite scrubbers work like magnets to reduce these same aldehydes and let the fine flavor come through.

FACT 3: We have a patent on flavor in low 'tar' cigarettes: #3828800.

Our Purite filter helps deliver flavor in a way so new we've been able to patent it.

Add it all up. Low gas, low 'tar', great flavor. That's a FACT.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR PETE ROZELLE, commissioner, NFL

What will happen to the football field when we go over to the metric system? —June Smith, Bridgeton, N.J.

● We contend, and those who are coordinating the change to the metric system agree, that football should be exempt and the game should remain measured in yards. Football, more than other team sports, is based heavily on measurement — first and 10, third and three, etc. And to convert each football field from 100 yards to the longer 100 meters would be impossible because of space limitations in many stadiums.

FOR MICHELLE PHILLIPS, star of Valentino

Which of today's movie stars will be remembered by the next generation, the way Valentino is today? —O.L., Twin Falls, Idaho

● I don't think anyone will be. I don't want to slight Robert Redford, Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman or any other outstanding actor of this period, but it seems unlikely to me that 50 years hence, a major motion picture will be made on the life of any star of today. They're just not made of the same enduring stuff that Valentino, Gable, Bogart, et al were made of.

FOR JOHNNY MATHIS, singer

● Because no one else sounds like me. I'm not being bigheaded, but my style is unique. I'm in good physical shape — that's as important as being in good vocal shape — and I haven't capitalized on my fans. I respect them and don't want to get rich from them by putting out novelties like T-shirts with my name on them — a fast way of my getting richer and their getting poorer.

FOR JUNE POSEN, cosmetician and beautician

Some of my friends believe in long, hot baths and others don't. What's your opinion? —Cathy Lane, Canton, Ohio

● I never take them because prolonged exposure in a hot tub causes excessive perspiration. The loss of moisture brings on flaking, itching and wrinkling, which leads to premature skin aging. If you want to protect your skin as winter approaches, keep away from steaming baths — if you don't, you'll have dry skin and add a few years to your face and body.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips seem such a dull couple. Have they ever said or done anything to make them seem less stodgy? —I.B., Lowell, Mass.

● Gossip lovers had a field day recently. While in Germany, Anne curtly ordered her husband to dance with her, in spite of the fact he'd hurt himself that day horseback riding. She also snapped at him during dinner when she asked for wine and he suggested she stick to orange juice. Seems Anne's nose was out of joint because Mark had struck up a conversation with a German girl at the stables.

FOR SHIRLEY JONES, actress and mother of Shaun Cassidy

How do you feel about your son being in show business? —M.C., Cumberland, Mo.

● I wish he'd chosen something else. I was more discouraging than approving. Our business is unstable and insecure, especially the acting part. I'd rather he'd become interested in the nonperforming areas, such as writing or producing. However, I could see his heart was set on it, and once I know my kids are serious, I'm with them all the way.

FOR ALAN ALDA, actor

Can you remember when you first felt you were making it in show business? —M.H., Mankato, Minn.

● The obvious answer is when my press interviews started picking up. I figured if people wanted to read about me, then I was starting to make a name for myself. But on a more domestic level, I felt secure when I realized I'd reached the point where I could decently provide for my family.

FOR PHYLLIS GEORGE, sportscaster

What got you hooked on sports? —H.A., Rome, Ga.

● If a Texas girl doesn't like sports, she can't live in the state. We had the Texas Longhorns and the Dallas Cowboys, and I grew up worshipping both of them. I was a cheerleader for six years in school and later in college. I'm an athlete, dated athletes and did everything from table tennis to water-skiing. I was introduced to games by my dad, who refereed football whenever he got the chance.

FOR JOSEPH A. CALIFANO, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare

Would you like to see HEW split into three separate divisions? —A. Pally, Albany, N.Y.

● No. I do believe, however, that we have to integrate our services better, as states are doing increasingly with their departments of human services. By setting up separate agencies, you make it more difficult for them to work together. From the President's perspective, he needs fewer, not more, people reporting to him. By the way, there is no truth to the often-repeated allegation that HEW is "unmanageable."

FOR MR. BLACKWELL, designer

What is the biggest miracle that the fashion industry has performed? —G.A., Bangor, Maine

● The advent of the mini-skirt. The greatest miracle to come will be the fashion industry saving itself from its own self-inflicted wounds. As with all other businesses, we make mistakes, and we don't always know we are making them.

PRO AND CON

Should Federal Judges Continue To Receive Lifetime Appointments?

PRO Sen. Birch Bayh (D.-Ind.)

When the framers of the Constitution declared that Federal judges were to hold office indefinitely, during good behavior, they did so with the conviction that lifetime tenure was essential to preserve the delicate balance of power. Congress was to reflect the will of the people. The Judiciary was to insure individual justice through standards of law tested over time, without regard to popular will, and to act as a check on Congressional or Executive actions. The President and Congress were given checks on the Judiciary through appointment, confirmation and impeachment. Only by insulating judges from the political pressures exerted on elected legislators could the framers hope to maintain this system of checks and balances.

CON Sen. James B. Allen (D.-Ala.)

Rather than having a Government of three coequal branches we face the danger of the Federal judiciary being the most powerful branch of Government. There must be meaningful and lasting reform to restore balance in our Government without compromising the fundamental independence necessary for judges to interpret the Constitution and to apply the statutory law fairly. I have proposed a constitutional amendment requiring the reconfirmation of Federal judges at designated intervals, but there would be no limit to the number of terms that may be served. I simply do not believe it is in the best interest of the American people to have any public official appointed for life and to be accountable to no one.

WHAT IF YOUR CHILD JOINS A CULT?

By Jo Anne Parke and Carroll Stoner

At one point, former Eagle Scout Michael Fischer seemed destined to spend his life chanting on street corners and in airports with the yellow-robed, shaven-headed Hare Krishnas.

When Michael's mother found him working in the basement of the Krishna's Brooklyn temple, she says she was shocked at his poor health. She took her son home to Chicago, where he was hospitalized and fed intravenously to counter the acute malnutrition he suffered while a member of the Krishna sect. Eventually Mrs. Fischer persuaded her son to leave the Krishnas.

Dr. Eli Shapiro, a Boston physician, and his wife were not so successful when they tried to get their son Edward to leave the offbeat Eastern sect. The Shapiros had their son kidnapped. He fled back to the Krishnas.

Still worried about Edward's health — he is a diabetic — Dr. Shapiro recently asked a Massachusetts court to appoint a legal guardian for him. In spite of Dr. Shapiro's pleas that his son may even die without guidance, the court said Edward — who is 23 and married — is an adult with a right to live his life as he chooses.

Since the late 1960's, scores of new religions have appeared on the American scene. And, instead of fading away, many of these new cults have become well established. At a national conference on the new religions,Dr. Jacob Needleman, a professor at San Francisco State University, observed, "The new religious movement can no longer be taken as a transitory cultural aberration but rather as a central force in the profound change through which American civilization is passing."

The cults provide a way of life that, he says, fills a void for many young people. For one thing, the groups offer what appears to be a purposeful existence to youths who can't find jobs or who are at a low point in life. Whatever the organization, the recruiting techniques have much in common, as we discovered on our year-long investigation of the cults. As we toured the country, posing as potential converts, we found that recruiters first get prospects away from familiar surroundings, often inviting them to country retreats or communes. Yale psychiatrist Robert Jay Lifton calls this essential element in psychological coercion "milieu control."

In the camps and communes everything the recruit sees, hears and does is controlled by already fervent believers. Yet the process is not nearly so dramatic as the term brainwashing suggests. The change is gradual and begins when a recruit starts to conform, long before he starts to believe the teachings of the cult leaders.

Just who are some of the self-proclaimed prophets and messiahs who command the attention of so many sons and daughters of the American middle class?

- Sun Myung Moon, who heads the Unification Church, is a multimarried Korean industrialist and recent American religious leader who was born in 1920 in what is now North Korea. This man, whose followers believe him to be divine, lives in superb luxury on a Westchester County, N.Y., estate.

The young Moonies, as they are called, live communally in Unification Church centers in every state or travel with mobile fund-raising teams. They work long hours each day selling candy, flowers, peanuts or candles to raise money for the Moon cause.

- The spiritual leader of the Hare Krishnas, A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada, is a retired Indian pharmaceutical executive. After the swami arrived in New York in the 1960's, he caught the imagination of the media with his colorful parades and ceremonies.
- Guru Maharaj Ji, the corpulent young man who is the "Perfect Master" to thousands of Divine Light Mission "premies" (as the devotees of this movement are called),was brought to the United States from his native India by a band of Boulder, Colo., benefactors when he was a pudgy little boy. They set him up in a tepee on the side of a mountain so he could teach them and their buddies how to "bliss out" without drugs.

Today the multimillion-dollar-a-year Mission is administered from an office building in downtown Denver. The boy-guru lives on a quarter-of-a-million-dollar oceanside estate in Southern California with his wife, a former airline stewardess who became a Mission devotee, and their two infant children.

The mission premies often live communally, in houses the group calls ashrams, and spend their time either working full time for the Mission or working outside and turning over all their money to the movement in exchange for the privilege of living in one of its communities.

Many parents who become estranged from their children eventually turn to "deprogramming." Most of these middle-class parents know they are breaking the law when they kidnap and forcefully deprogram their adult children. They are usually law-abiding citizens who have never had so much as a speeding ticket. Yet they feel justified because they believe their sons and daughters are prisoners who have been brainwashed or hypnotized.

Just what is deprogramming? It is, simply put, any method used to undo cult influences and may involve anything from persuasion to threats. Many parents first learned about it when they read news accounts of the work of a former California civil servant named Ted Patrick, who described deprogramming techniques in his book, Let Our Children Go. His particular technique is one of force and intimidation.

Deprogramming often fails, thus widening the gulf between parents and child. Sometimes the rift becomes almost irreparable, as it has in the cases of young people who have taken their parents to court.

Another deprogrammer, Joe Alexander, has been remarkably successful in getting courts to grant parents temporary conservatorships — guardianships — over their often "adult" children so that the young people may be deprogrammed legally. Alexander and his wife Esther run the Freedom of Thought Foundation, a center for former cult members near Tucson.

Father Kent Burtner, Roman Catholic chaplain at the University of Oregon, and Rabbi Maurice Davis of the Westchester Jewish Community Center in White Plains, N.Y., use none of Patrick's fright tools, and yet they have convinced many young people to abandon religious cults.

Deprogrammings can be expensive. While clergymen who do it usually don't charge, a deprogramming by a well-known "professional," coupled with the legal costs of a conservatorship, can run thousands of dollars. Parents have taken second mortgages on their homes and spent savings intended for college educations to get their kids back.

Former cult members have described life in a cult to be a severe regime in which leaders make all decisions. "We were told when to sleep, when to get up and when to eat. We were told what to do every hour we were awake." In the Hare Krishna cult couples don't engage in sexual relations in marriage unless the temple president thinks it's time to bring another Krishna baby into the world. Even so, scores of Krishna babies have been born in the United States in the last 10 years. They are the first batch of "pure" American Krishnas, untainted by the worldly temptations their parents had to overcome to find bliss in the cult. Khrisna life is not strange to them. They don't go to public schools. They've never seen television or a movie. They've never tasted hamburgers, pizza or an ice-cream cone.

Ultimately, it may turn out that the cult question isn't one of religious freedom at all. It may be a question of who first violates the civil rights of these kids: the cults that entice them or their parents who want them back.

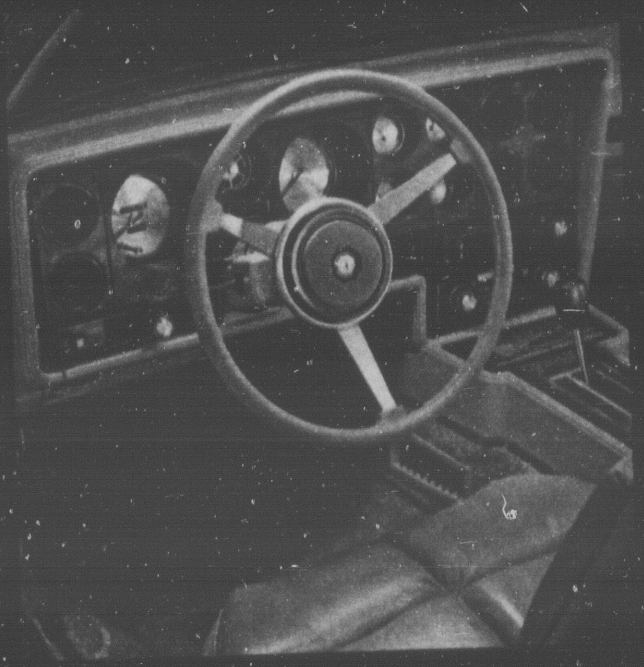
Jo Anne Parke and Carroll Stoner spent a year on the road investigating cults. They are the authors of All God's Children: The Cult Experience — Salvation or Slavery? (Chilton).

Introducing the 1978 Pontiac Grand Prix.

Grand new looks. Grand new luxury. Grand new Prix.

Most scientific design in Grand Prix history! We used computers to design a new full frame to isolate road noise. Special body mounts help damp out vibration. New door and body seals help seal out noise. All to give you a smooth quiet ride.

New luxury appointments! Available new loose pillow design seating that's richer than ever. An available bucket seat that's a GP exclusive. A new cockpit-style dash.



New maneuverability. This trim new Grand Prix is amazingly agile when you put it in a tight city corner. Or even those tight city parking spots.

Grand Prix is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your Pontiac dealer for details. Talk to him about buying or leasing this incredible new Grand Prix.

It's destined to take its place beside the classic Grand Prixs of the past.

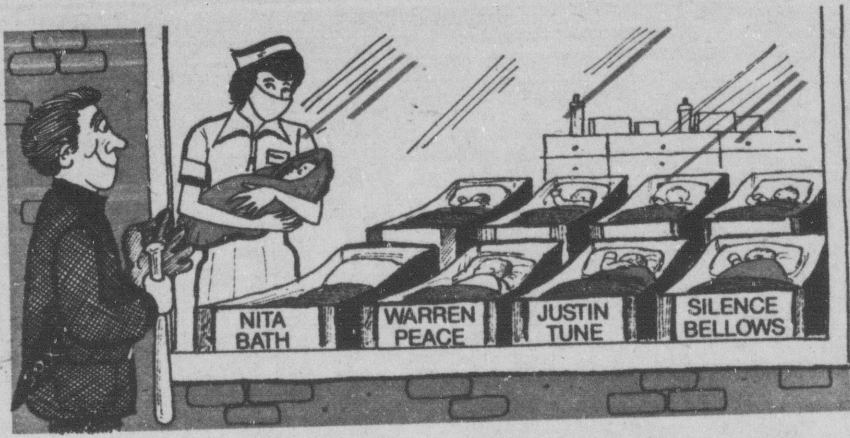
HOW DO YOU LIKE YOUR NAME?

Rate your own for beauty and euphony alongside Gaston J. Feeblebunny or Gisella Werberserch-Piffel.



Mac Aroni was a real person. So were Cigar Stubbs, Hyacinthe Ringrose and Toilet Jacobs, not to mention Goody P. Creep, an undertaker, A. Moron, who was commissioner of education in the Virgin Islands, and Dr. Zoltan Ovary, now a noted New York gynecologist. All these names and many others — some of which can hardly be believed, much less repeated in polite company — are included in the new book, Remarkable Names of Real People.

In the book's preface, humorist S.J. Perelman writes, "...many of the names included have a distinct poetic or lyrical rhythm, and I can well imagine chanting oneself to sleep by repeating Sugarporn Poopatanna and Madonna McClung. I note with regret that the chronicler has seen fit to omit a heroine of my youth, Ming Toy Epstein, whose name had the sweet, tinkling purity of temple bells."

The book publishers plan another edition, and nominations from readers are encouraged, especially if official proof of the unusual name is available. Some interesting names submitted to the publishers but yet unverified as real are Heidi Yum-Yum Gluck, Sexious Boonjug and Zita Apathy. What follows is a partial list of notable names from persons living and dead:

If you still haven't quite found a name to suit your fancy, think about Buncha Love, Cardinal Sin, Rev. Christian Church, Sir Cloudsley Shovel. (But we guess you wouldn't want this last one. Seems he ran the British fleet on the rocks in the Scilly Islands in 1717, drowning 2,000 men.)

If you want your child to be a doctor, here's a shoo-in: by recent count there were 13 doctors Doctors, Docter or Dokter in the U.S.; five doctors Bonebreak; one Bonecutter and 18 Butchers. Dr. Fillerup, obstetrician, lives in California, and Dr. Screech lives in British Columbia.

And if it's a lawyer you'll be wanting, try Cumming or Gooing from Louisiana. That'll getcha — either way.

Observations

Rays of hope. They come from the sun, the versatile star that warms the earth, grows our food, tans our skins, and supplies almost all the energy used by man. Oil, gas, coal—they all represent solar energy that was trapped millions of years ago. You can warm your feet by the fireplace on a cold winter night because the blazing log releases energy it stored from sunlight. And when you consider how much solar energy falls on the U.S.—enough to supply the nation's energy needs 500 times over every year—you realize why scientists want to harness more of it.

How practical is solar energy? There's a lot of wishful thinking on that score. Solar energy is here now—for supplementing your home heating. But it's expensive. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that a unit costing $4,875 would supply 40 percent of the average family's heating needs in Boston's climate. (The average heating bill in Boston is about $675 a year.) In some cases, like new houses tailored to use of solar heaters, this can make sense as a long-term energy saver. In other situations, buttressing the insulation for an oil or gas-heated home may make more economic sense.

"Well, what do you know? It works."

Needed: an engineering breakthrough. When scientists talk of the great potential of solar energy they're looking beyond home heating—to use of the sun to generate electricity at reasonable cost. That's where the technology is still only partially developed. What's needed are more economic ways to convert the sun's energy to electricity and store it so it's useful 24 hours a day, rain or shine. Mobil alone is spending $30 million on developing solar electricity through a joint venture (Mobil Tyco Solar Energy Corporation). But we've got a way to go, for costs thus far are 30 times those of conventional electricity.

Light in the tunnel. We think that solar cells using silicon ribbons to convert the sun's energy to electricity offer the most hope. If the manufacture of such cells can be improved through large-scale research, mass-production could be possible by 1990. According to the Energy Research and Development Administration, solar cells could represent 20 percent of all the electricity generating capacity added annually by the year 1990. Promising as solar energy is, it offers no immediate easy solutions to the nation's energy problems. And if politicians put too much hope in it helping soon, we could all be burned.

IS THE STOCK MARKET FOR EVERYONE?

The trick is in learning to buy when the "specialists" buy — and to sell when they sell.

Edward C. Topple

An overall view of the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

By Richard Ney

Most investors are totally unprepared for the market's predictable turmoil. So, unsurprisingly, they ultimately discover they would have done far better had they kept their money in the bank.

My view is that a stock exchange is nothing more than a giant supermarket whose stock prices are controlled by merchants (called specialists) who, in most respects, are no different from department stores whose basic aim is to buy inventory (stock in the specialist's case) at wholesale and sell at retail. What the investor must do if he wishes to be successful is learn to buy when these merchants buy and to sell when they sell. Unless you're willing to approach the market from this premise, I believe you should answer the question, "Is the stock market for me?" with a resounding and final "No!"

Why do so many investors suffer losses in the market? Examine the following investor profiles to see if you recognize yourself.

1. I'm sensible; I don't trade; I'm an investor. I only buy the best stocks, and eventually they always go higher.

2. I need monthly income, so I'm going to buy stocks that pay good dividends.

3. I'm going to try to play it smart. I'm going to give my broker a price to sell at so that I can let my profits rise but cut my losses fast.

4. I'm a technician. I use charts and time my purchases so that I buy as new highs are being established and sell when a stock's price moves down to a new low.

5. I believe in fundamentals. I believe I can safely make money if I buy stocks only when a company's earnings forecast is on the favorable side.

What's wrong with the preceding profiles? They sound quite sensible. Let's examine how, in each of the foregoing categories, investors have adopted an approach that virtually eliminates their chances of making a profitable investment.

1. This investor may have been successful buying stock and never selling it during the 1940's and 1950's, but as we moved into the 60's, a different kind of market came into being. Fluctuations in stock prices became more violent, and the long-term investor discovered that he was separated from more and more of his money. Did you know that the stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange are, on balance, lower now than they were 20 years ago? If you do not want your investments eroded by time (not to mention inflation), you must learn to time your purchases and sales to major market swings. That is not trading; that is prudent investing.

2. Those who invest in high-yielding stocks because they need income are generally unaware that they can do just as well without having to accept the risks of the market by investing in bank savings certificates. If you need income from your investments, you shouldn't be in the market. Not only can high-yielding stocks have their dividends cut but they also can become even higher-yielding when the stock's price drops, thereby eroding your capital base.

3. A wise investor never surrenders by appointment. Yet, that's just what you do when you enter stop-loss orders on the specialist's book. If the specialist observes a bunching of orders at a specific price level, he will handle the orders in the manner most advantageous to himself. A stop-loss order tells him that you will surrender your stock if he drops his price to where you have entered your order. Many an investor has told his broker something like, "If my stock drops under 40, I want to get out of it, so enter a stop-loss order for me at 39." He then sees his stock drop to 39 (where the specialist buys it for his account) just before it takes off for new highs.

A former actor, Richard Ney is a Beverly Hills investment adviser and the author of three best sellers on the stock market: The Wall Street Jungle, The Wall Street Gang and Making It in the Market.

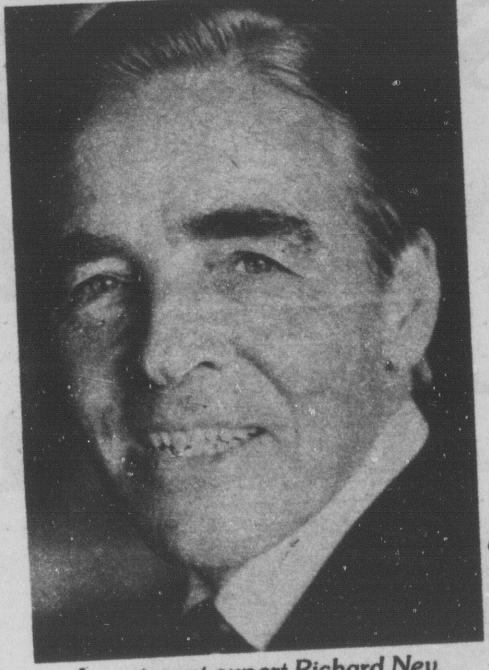
4. Those who invest in stocks solely on the basis of charting techniques are playing the specialist's game. He knows all the tricks of the trade. Specialists know they can precipitate heavy buying by taking a stock to a new high. Each specialist, therefore, will advance his stock to a new high; chartists (among others) will charge into the market to buy it, and when the specialist has sold his inventory and sold short ("borrowed" stock to buy later at a lower price), he will launch a major decline in the stock. Conversely, when specialists wish to accumulate stock, they drop stock prices to new lows knowing that chartists will dump their stocks thereby enabling specialists to buy these stocks before they rally prices.

5. Probably the worst reason for buying a stock is on the basis of "sound fundamentals." Specialists know investors buy stock on good earnings announcements. This buying enables specialists to sell at higher prices the stock they bought at lower prices. The fact is, once specialists have completed their selling, you'll find more stocks dropping on good earnings than bad earnings. It has been a simple matter to condition the public to buy on the basis of good earnings since this approach seems entirely logical. However, the only factor affecting a stock's price is the specialist's inventory position or objective.

Now that you know what is wrong with what I believe are the most commonly held and most damaging investor beliefs, you have probably decided that specialists are no-good scoundrels who are too tricky to compete with and that the market is not for you. Specialists are not too tricky to compete with. Indeed, it is because the market is controlled by them in predictable ways that the average investor can invest his money safely and profitably.

In analyzing the market, the investor should keep in mind that specialists are merely merchants who wish to buy stock from investors at wholesale and then, employing the most resolute and ingenious salesmanship, sell it back to them at retail. They differ from the department stores in one major respect: when the stores conduct a sale, they lower prices; when stock-exchange merchants conduct a sale, they raise prices — sharply, and it is the excitement and optimism generated by sharply rising prices that cause the public to charge into the market. Similarly, when the specialist wants to accumulate inventory, he drops prices sharply because he knows that sharply falling stock prices will frighten the public into selling.

Investors who adhere to the following simple rules and guidelines will be able, I believe, to develop the ability to compete successfully with the specialist:



Elizabeth Gee

Investment expert Richard Ney.

1. Only buy high-quality stocks. They provide a degree of protection that will produce more consistent gains over the long term.

2. Study the volume figures (amount of shares traded daily) listed in your daily newspaper for at least a six-month period or until you become familiar with what is low, average or high volume for a stock. Increased volume and big blocks (transactions for 10,000 shares or more) are the signals that specialists are either accumulating or distributing stock.

3. After a period of advance (or decline), if there is a sharp jump (or drop) of a point or more for one to three days to the accompaniment of an increase in volume of 50 percent or more, you should anticipate the possibility of a short or intermediate term reversal.

4. If the previous advance (or decline) has been of an extensive nature and a sharp jump (or drop) in price occurs followed by an increase in volume of 100 percent or more over a period of three or more days, a reversal of major proportions may be in the offing.

Many of the difficulties of investing vanish once the role of the specialist is understood. If you can learn how to time your purchases and sales to conform to his, you will come to the conclusion, as I have, that the stock market is, indeed, for you. FW

RICHARD NEY'S DEFINITION OF A SPECIALIST

Specialists are the financial elite. On the New York Stock Exchange, for example, there are approximately 350 specialists divided into about 100 specialist units. Each unit is registered in 10 to 40 or more stocks. Most specialists inherited their job from their fathers, who in turn inherited the job from their fathers. Although you might be able to buy a seat on the NYSE for $40,000, you couldn't buy a specialist's "seat" for any amount. Specialists are allowed by their own regulations to trade in competition with their customers. In theory they are supposed to "maintain a fair and orderly market" by matching public buy-and-sell orders. If, however, you want to buy or sell, say, 100 shares of stock, the specialist can execute your order higher or lower than the last sale price depending on the direction in which he wants prices to move. When he dramatically raises his stock price, he receives more buy than sell orders. The specialist will sell from his inventory of stock or sell short to supply the excess demand. Conversely, when he drops his stock's price dramatically, he receives more sell than buy orders. Again it is the specialist who buys the excess.

Thus, specialists are able to accumulate large inventories of stock at wholesale price levels for their personal investment accounts, "which then gives them the incentive" (according to a 1963 SEC Staff Study) to advance stock prices in order to sell at a profit.

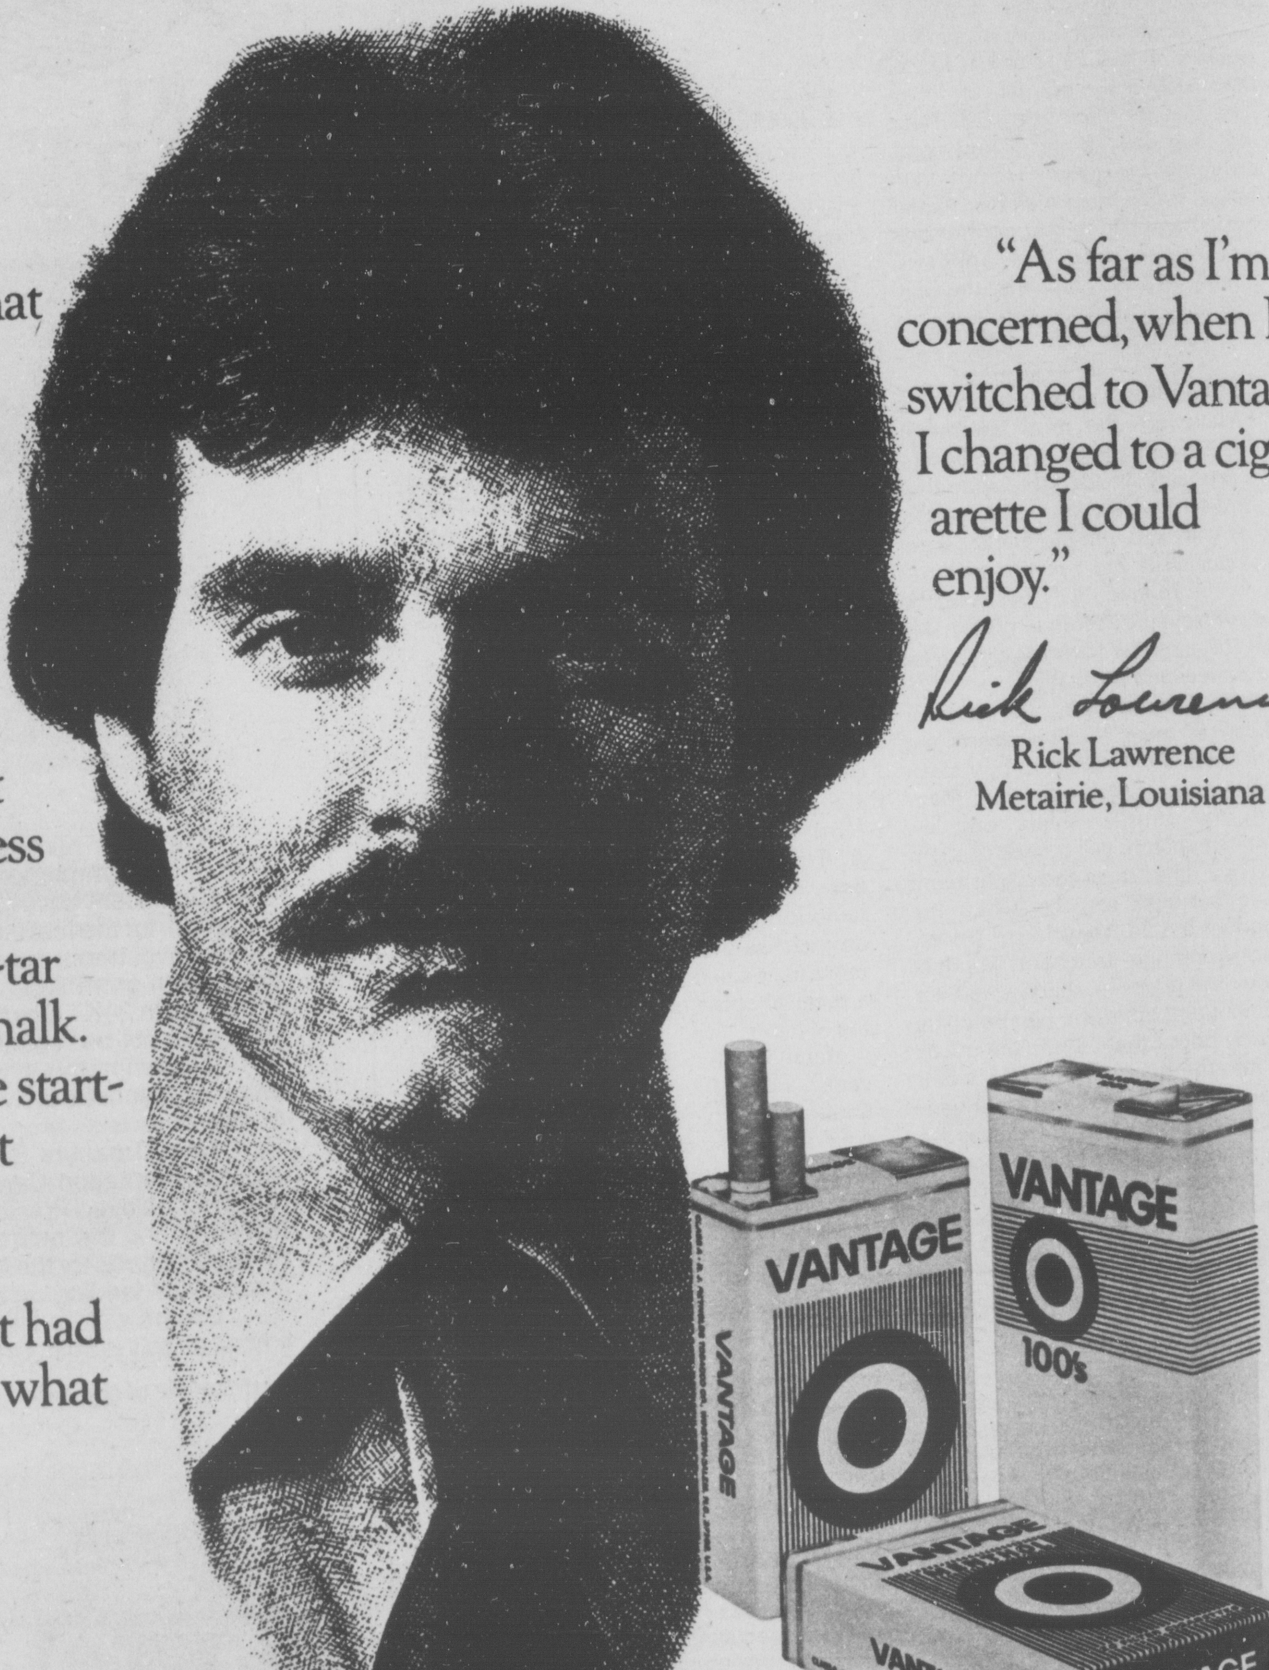
"Vantage is changing a lot of my feelings about smoking."



"I like to smoke, and what I like is a cigarette that isn't timid on taste. But I'm not living in some ivory tower. I hear the things being said against high-tar smoking as well as the next guy.

"And so I started looking. For a low-tar smoke that had some honest-to-goodness cigarette taste.

"It wasn't easy. The low-tar cigarettes I tried tasted like chalk. And high-tar cigarettes were starting to taste rougher as I went along.

"Then I tried a pack of Vantage. It was smooth yet it had taste. And a lot less tar than what I'd been smoking.

"As far as I'm concerned, when I switched to Vantage, I changed to a cigarette I could enjoy."

BIG BILL WALTON: NOT YOUR TYPICAL AMERICAN SPORTS HERO

By Barry Abramson

He was known as a radical and a nonconformist. He made statements calling the FBI "the enemy" and urged rejection of the United States Government. His long, red beard and ponytail, along with his lumberjack clothing, offended some people. He was reported to dislike the weather and atmosphere of the Pacific Northwest and to be feigning injuries to get out of his contract with the Portland Trail Blazers so he could return to sunny Southern California. He was usually inaccessible, except when he wanted to sound off about a social issue. Letters complaining about him poured into the offices of the team and local newspapers.

Today Bill Walton, the 6'11" captain and center of the Trail Blazers, is the hero of heroes in Portland and such a box-office draw that the team expects to sell out all its home games this season. It has even arranged for overflow crowds to see the games via closed-circuit TV in a theater near its Memorial Coliseum. Those who criticized Walton before now say he's a changed person. And what everybody talks about regarding him is his stunning achievement in leading the Trail Blazers to their first National Basketball Association title last season.

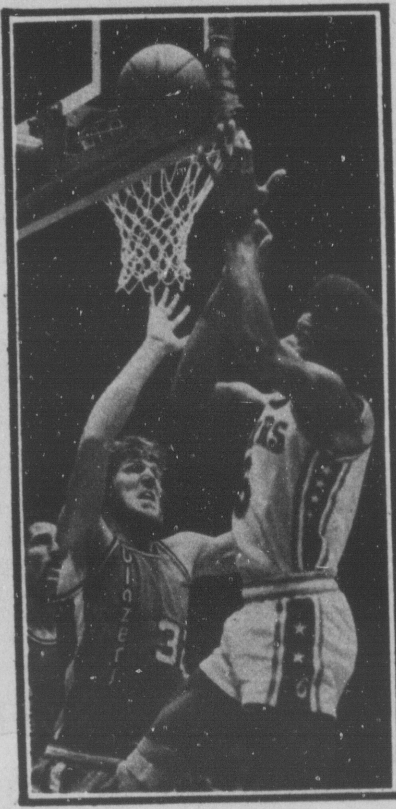
The new Walton cut off his ponytail, trimmed his beard and made sure his public comments were confined to basketball. His friend and former teammate, Steve Jones, has commented, "Bill's war with the people is over. At some point, he realized he's a basketball player first, a political activist or whatever next."

The somber, introverted attitude that once characterized the big center was nowhere in evidence last June when the people of Portland staged a parade to honor their championship team. Walton led the parade on his 10-speed bicycle, cheerfully doused the mayor with beer while that official was at the mike, and then joined his teammates in tossing basketballs into the crowd. He signs as many autographs as he can and praises Trail Blazer fans as "great people who help us play better because of their support."

Walton plays down the idea that there has been a great change in his personality or attitudes. "I still say what I believe and do what I believe," he says. "When you're winning games, folks don't seem to care what you say."

As he sees it, the major difference between the Walton of today and the one who spent two unhappy years with his team is that he has been free of injuries. Far from feigning them during those two years, he suffered grievously, and they affected his attitude and feelings. He had nine broken bones, tendonitis and underwent two operations.

Dick Darcey/Camera 5



F.O.S.

He has proved that an athlete's life and attitudes don't have to reflect our stereotyped image of the jock.

Basketball — and indeed all competition — was always fun for Walton as a youngster in La Mesa, Calif. His dad, a welfare department official, and his mother both encouraged competition in the household. They organized foot races up the hill to their house for their three sons and one daughter and held a contest to see which one could hold open a spring clothespin for the longest time. Mrs. Walton recalls one instance in which the children were asked to jump and try to touch the ceiling. "The contest ended when Bill began touching the ceiling with his elbows," she says.

At Helix High School, Bill was no great shakes as a basketball player until his junior year, when he shot up six inches to 6'7". He started to dominate games and led Helix to a string of more than 30 consecutive victories. His brother Bruce, a year older and the strongest in the family, acted as Bill's "bodyguard" when he played with him. In one game, a rival center kept banging Bill under the boards, so Bruce flattened him with an elbow to the throat. When Bruce went to UCLA, Bill followed him there, although Bruce gave up basketball to concentrate on football.

Under its incomparable coach, John Wooden, UCLA had already built a championship tradition. Walton enhanced it by leading Wooden teams to near-perfect season records and two NCAA championships. It was at college that he first became known as an individualist and a social activist. He was a vegetarian who didn't believe in killing animals for food. He was active in rallies denouncing America's role in Vietnam, practiced transcendental meditation and took up acupuncture to relieve pain in his knees. In his spare time, he rode his bike along the beaches and went backpacking in the mountains. He would psych himself for games by listening to hard rock music.

One thing that made it hard for Walton to adjust to Portland during his first two difficult seasons was that he had been accustomed to playing on winning teams. The team's great turnaround in his third season changed everything. Although his improved physical condition was the prime factor, it wasn't the only one. The arrival of a new coach, Jack Ramsay, proved to be significant. He had heard the controversial things about Walton, but he wanted to get to know his players for himself and arranged to talk to each individually. He spent over an hour with the center and then said, "I found him a sociable, likable person who didn't want to lose. I couldn't ask for anything more."

Walton was impressed with Ramsay's determination to stress team play rather than a star system. "No matter how much an individualist Bill Walton is off the court, he's dedicated to the idea of team play on the court," a friend of his from college points out. "At UCLA he preferred passing the ball to making scores himself. And he would give advice, direction and encouragement to the others and openly knock himself if he flubbed a play. He was always close to his teammates."

To build the team he wanted, Ramsay sold or traded players who had been concerned more with individual statistics than with team success. He brought in seven new players who would blend with Walton's special skills.

The new Trail Blazers ran their opposition into the ground in the early weeks of last season. Walton was a quick-leaping giant who blocked shots, intimidated rival centers, grabbed rebounds, started the team's fast breaks and set plays with his passes and scored himself when the situation called for it. On defense, he always seemed to know where every rival player was on the floor. "That way I have an idea of where my opponent's thrust to the basket is most apt to start," he explains. "Sometimes if your first couple of steps are in the right direction, you can break up a play that might otherwise have been successful."

When old devil injury caught up with Walton again, he had to sit out several games. This time the injury was not severe. Walton came on strong, and the Trail Blazers finished second to the Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division. In the playoffs, however, Portland destroyed the Lakers in four straight games.

In the championship round, the Trail Blazers faced the Philadelphia '76 ers, which had a treasure chest of individual stars including Julius "Dr. J" Erving and George McGinnis. But individual heroics came up short when matched against Portland's team play built around Walton.

Simple living has been Walton's credo, and he sticks to it, despite his hero status in Portland. He remains a vegetarian and spends as much time as possible enjoying the natural beauty of the outdoors. He lives in an old house not far from downtown Portland with his girlfriend Susan, her 2-year-old son and some of his buddies. He now loves Oregon and has centered his life there. He keeps his political opinions within his private circle these days but remains an active supporter of the American Indian Movement.

All Trail Blazer players are asked to be involved in some community activity, and Walton does his part by staging clinics for the Warm Springs Indian Reservation. He's also an avid supporter of a local soccer team and spends most of his summers practicing with them.

Bruce Walton, who has remained close to his brother, says of him, "He's friends with everybody on his block. He goes to the park and plays soccer with the kids. He's just a helluva nice guy who also happens to play basketball."

PORCELAIN FROM CHINA

for less than half what you'd expect to pay!

AMAZING SAMPLE OFFER!

12-piece Demitasse set $9.95 Plus $1.50 postage & handling

When Marco Polo returned from China, he was laden with all sorts of treasure. But nothing amazed his fellow Europeans more than the snowy white, translucent pottery he brought with him.

This was the western world's first glimpse of Chinese porcelain, the fabulous material from which China's greatest artists and craftsmen made Ming vases and countless other priceless works of art.

The secret of true porcelain is in the clay. Nothing will do but kaolin clay, which is extremely fine in texture and absolutely white. Such clay is very rare.

The same clay used for Ming vases

Two of the world's most valuable deposits of such clay lie in China: one in Li-ling in the Hunan Province, the other in Ching-te-chen in the Kiangsi Province. It seems certain that many of the original Ming vases that now grace the world's museums were made in these areas. Now you can own superb cups, saucers and other tableware made from the same rare and historic clay.

Weston World proudly presents authentic, imported Chinese porcelain cups and saucers, made, hand-finished, and decorated in Li-ling and Ching-te-chen.

To appreciate their beauty, you must see them and use them — which is why we make this introductory offer:

Amazing low price and free catalog!

Either pattern shown only $9.95 for 12 pieces — less than half what you'd expect to pay! With your order you'll receive a color catalog of all the Chinese porcelain Weston World offers — many stunning patterns and beautiful 12-piece, 20-piece and 45-piece sets. Now you can serve your family and guests on genuine Chinese porcelain — yet pay no more than you would for stoneware or plastic! Act now! Money back if not delighted.

WHAT IS HUNTING ALL ABOUT?

According to an avid outdoorsman, the experience is diverse and involves much more than killing.

By Fred Nofziger

A phenomenal 20 million people in the United States can be considered hunters, and for good or ill, another hunting season is now underway. Yet, nonhunters often cannot understand how civilized adults receive pleasure from shooting and killing. What follows is the attempt of an enthusiastic outdoor writer to justify the sport and admonish some of his fellow hunters. Some readers are sure to agree with Mr. Nofziger wholeheartedly, while others may feel he could not be more mistaken.

There is a nip in the air, a touch of color in the hardwoods, and waterfowl are winging their way in from the north. It is the time of the hunter.

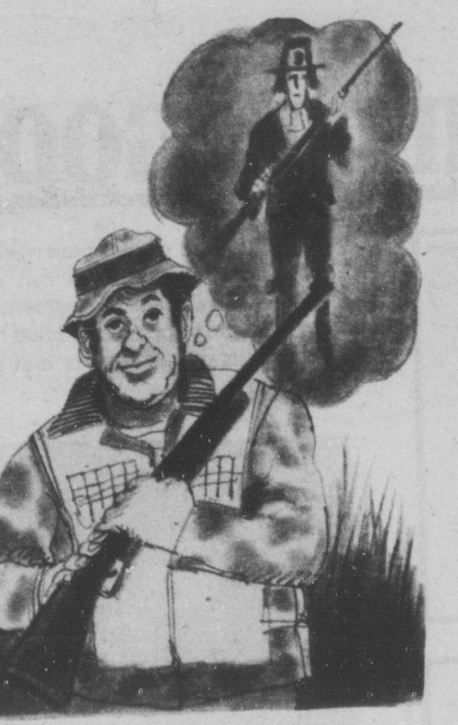
Today most hunters are not just trigger pullers. Instead, they are students of the environment and its relationship to birds and animals. Hunters must recognize habitat, for example, and understand what makes it suitable for a particular species.

This, of course, is not a technical education in forestry, plant ecology or game management, but it is a start toward realizing the importance of proper management of woods and waters.

Killing is not a sport, and, thus, hunting involves far more than the act of killing a wild animal. Hunting is a diverse experience that includes planning the hunt, purchasing supplies and equipment, traveling with companions to the hunting site, establishing a camp, comradeship in the camp, beginning the actual hunt and pursuing and possibly killing an animal.

Many hunters are satisfied and feel rewarded even if the last phase of the hunt is not accomplished. They also believe that their sport offers challenge, suspense and excitement, plus mental, physical and spiritual reward.

All true hunters learn early that sportsmanship and field etiquette are essential. They learn to respect the wild animals they pursue. They discover the pleasure of the things they see, hear and smell as they walk through field and forest or paddle through duck marsh. Many develop a reverence for nature and everywhere see the handiwork of God in the outdoors.



And, as phrased by the philosopher Ortega y Gasset, in the sport of hunting, modern man can again become a symbol of courage, endurance and skill.

While a few careless, selfish persons with guns have done a great deal to give hunting a bad name, the true hunters' good examples have done much to convince the public that hunting is not bad. As a group, hunters do not have lily-white hands, however, and there is a lot of room for improvement. So if hunters are to preserve the sport for the future, they must educate themselves as well as the public.

Lack of sportsmanship is the main problem with hunting today. A good sportsman enjoys himself even if he doesn't make a kill. He derives pleasure from just being in the wilds with companions. This sportsman can go home empty-handed and still consider the trip a success.

The fair-weather sportsman is one who feels deep shame for having failed to score. He is often the one responsible for legitimate complaints. And then there is the slob hunter. He shows little sportsmanship or consideration for the laws that govern and manage game.

The pressure to succeed, to make a kill, is the most frequent cause of bad sportsmanship. The pressure is produced by the hunter's lingering fear of being branded a failure, of being laughed at and being joked about if he doesn't come home with a large bounty of game.

Sport hunters are not responsible for the demise of the passenger pigeon or the destruction of the great herds of bison or the terrible reduction of many wild animal populations. These killers were professional market hunters. The principles of sportsmanship, courtesy and respect for the law and other hunters are the same regardless of game or weapon.

Nature's creatures die by the talon and fang, from disease and parasites and all kinds of accidents. Dying by the hunter's gun is quicker and more merciful than starving and probably less cruel than being torn apart by a hawk or a fox. The hunter learns, therefore, that to harvest the surplus of game in a given area is neither detrimental nor sinful.

In short, hunting is a heritage and a source of countless hours of wholesome pleasure in the outdoors.

Fred Nofziger, a free-lance writer specializing in outdoor articles, has hunted all his life.

IS YOUR CHILD IN GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION?

Joan Kramer & Associates

One in three can't pass a test measuring the minimum skills and strengths needed to master and enjoy ordinary games.

By Alan Haas

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports reported not long ago that youngsters who had the benefit of early sports activity were, as adults, twice as active as those who had limited exposure. They are four times more likely than others to take the kind of exercise that promotes continued health and vigor.

Also, the American Medical Association has stated that exercise increases the ease and efficiency of performing daily tasks; aids in weight control; improves posture and appearance; increases poise by improving grace and economy of movement; reduces tension, thus acting as a natural tranquilizer; and sharpens perceptual abilities.

The need for children to participate in regular sports activities has been amply demonstrated. Studies show that children spend on the average from 15 to 30 hours a weeks watching television, compared with only about two hours in planned physical activity. One American child in five fails to pass a simple test measuring the minimum strengths and skills necessary to master and enjoy ordinary games.

So if you want something better than that for your child, set a good example yourself by participating in family sports activities. It will mean better health in the future for both of you.

"As soon as a child learns to walk, he can swim, run, throw or catch a ball and do light exercises," says Dr. Thomas E. Shaffer, consultant physician, Adolescents' Health Services, Children's Hospital, Columbus, Ohio. By the time a child is 3, according to pediatricians, he is ready to jog, play horseshoes and volleyball and go climbing, hiking or canoeing with his parents.

As a parent giving your children a head start to fitness, you can add immeasureably to their enjoyment of life, keep in shape yourself and bring the family closer together, doctors and psychologists say.

"The emphasis in the early years should be on participation. Every child should feel good just for having taken part," stresses Dr. Thomas P. Johnson, a San Diego psychiatrist with a special interest in sports. "Children should be offered many experiences and the chance to specialize as they show an interest.

"If we pressure young children into narrowing their focus to highly specialized skills, we invite psychological difficulties," Dr. Johnson continues. So before them — which is why we make this introductory offer.

your youngsters start comparing themselves with their peers, before they encounter the perils of winning and losing, before they feel the need to test themselves and compete in Little League baseball or Pop Warner football, show them that physical activity can be fun. "Boys are not little men. They can't take adult pressures, mentally or physically, nor should they be expected to," says Dr. Allen Kline, a Houston pediatrician.

"In unorganized play," says Dr. Kline, "youngsters are not likely to force themselves beyond their abilities, and, if they are injured, medical attention is not complicated by pressure from coaches."

"A child can skip rope, play catch or just run up and down in the backyard — along with his parents," says Dr. William Gualtiere, exercise physiologist and director of a testing and programming facility in New York City.

"It doesn't matter what form the exercise takes," explains Dr. Gualtiere. "As long as both adult and child use a large percentage of their muscle mass, wind, stamina and endurance, muscle development is maintained, and flexibility, agility, coordination are enchanced.

"Even more important, both generations will be engaged in a vital, life-saving regimen, designed to prevent cardiovascular and circulation problems later on, as well as slowing down aging and lifting the spirits," Dr. Gualtiere points out.

H. Armstrong Roberts

"Children of preschool age should take part in family games and exercise part of every day," says this physiologist. "It should become part of their regimen, like eating and sleeping. Then, when they go on to competitive sports, there is a good chance they will focus more on improving their own performance than on defeating others. Sports will be more pleasurable, less combative."

"I have also found," Dr. Gualtiere continues, "that children who regularly participate in a family playtime are less likely to be off riding skateboards, walking fences or climbing trees, activities that can be dangerous to toddlers who haven't yet learned to be cautious. I have a boy, 3, who can already run a mile, and a little girl, 2½, who runs an eighth of a mile. The important thing is that they look forward to jogging with their father, to being praised for their accomplishments and to burning off energy, which children require."

"The psychological attitude of the child toward physical conditioning is very important," says professor Joseph B. Oxendine, dean of Temple University's College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. "We are trying to develop children's confidence about doing things with their bodies to enhance their self-image — a feeling of respect for the mind and body and confidence in their ability to function well."

Dr. Richard A. Gardner, associate clinical professor of child psychiatry at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, agrees: "There is nothing more ego-building to a youngster than to tell him, 'You really hit the ball far,' or to tell her, 'You rode your tricycle very well.' That is what children want to hear.

"Furthermore," the psychiatrist emphasizes, "physical activity is a potent tranquilizer. Children experience so many no-no's, they build up a lot of hostility and resentment. Sports are a socially acceptable means to work off these feelings.

"A key thing," Dr. Gardner adds, "is for parents to choose activities that are mutually enjoyable, so Mom and Dad don't build any resentments of their own. Youngsters don't have much tolerance; they may want to go on long after their parents have become bored. Care needs to be taken that neither parent nor child becomes frustrated by too much or too little activity."

Though family sports are generally beneficial, there are one or two things to watch. Children who have a chronic physical problem — cystic fibrosis or a congenital heart defect, for example — should not be encouraged to participate. If parents have any doubts, a visit to a pediatrician is mandatory. If parents themselves have not been physically active, they should submit to a stress test, usually a motor-driven treadmill. The physician will monitor blood pressure and pulse, test for any cardiac problems and then advise a suitable exercise program.

They're completely satisfied with their homeowners agent.

"And we know our car insurance man is the best around," Bob says. "We feel fortunate to have him so close by."

Of course, whatever the Beals think about one agent, they're bound to think about the others.

Because all of them are State Farm agent, Steve Johnson. As a family insurance specialist, Steve can provide knowledgeable advice and person-to-person service on all the policies they're ever likely to need.

"If we have any question about our coverages, or a claim, we don't have to wonder who to call," says Jeanne. "We just call Steve. It's a real advantage having one agent nearby who can help us with everything."

Having a State Farm family insurance man can be a real advantage for you.

'Enriched Flavor'™ Menthol!

Menthol taste satisfaction no longer dependent on high tar.

For years, smokers were forced to accept high tar if they wanted real menthol flavor.

Today there's MERIT Menthol. The cigarette that shattered all previous notions about what's possible—and what isn't—with tar and taste in menthol smoking.

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain natural flavor-rich ingredients that delivered taste way out of proportion to tar.

These flavor essentials were then packed into the tobacco used to make MERIT Menthol. The result was a low tar menthol cigarette packed with extra flavor.

Only one menthol has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.

BERT JONES: HIS FATHER PAVED THE WAY

"...Even today he wouldn't do anything that he didn't feel would meet with his dad's approval..."

There's supposed to be a generation gap between today's young people and their parents, but no such gap exists between Bert Jones, the peerless quarterback for the Baltimore Colts, and his father, W. A. "Dub" Jones. Bert feels his father set an example that enabled him to develop into one of the most popular and best-liked players in the National Football League. His friends say of Bert: "He always hero-worshipped his dad more so than other kids hero-worshipped John Wayne or other celebrities. Even today he wouldn't do anything that he didn't feel would meet with his dad's approval."

Dub Jones starred as a halfback for the Cleveland Browns, and son Bert served as the team's water boy. (Dub's six touchdowns against the Bears in 1951 is still an NFL record for most touchdowns in a game. The record has since been tied by Ernie Nevers and Gale Sayers.) When Dub joined the Browns' coaching staff, Bert spent five summers at the team's training camp. He carried ice, retrieved footballs, and did odd jobs around the clubhouse. He also picked up invaluable pointers in throwing the football from the Browns' quarterbacks.

Although Bert showed great pitching skill in high school, he never doubted that he would follow his dad into football. "He never pushed me," says Bert, "but once I had established what I wanted to do, he made sure that I did it to the best of my ability."

Bert was an All-America quarterback at Louisiana State University and set 20 school passing records. He expected to follow his dad to the Browns in 1973, but Baltimore won the rights to him. In his second pro season he set a record of 17 straight pass completions in one game, which made him and Dub the only father and son listed in the pro football record book for individual achievements.

1973 and '74 were rebuilding years for the Colts, but they came into their own in '75 and '76 when Bert led them to successive division titles. Bert threw 24 touchdown passes last season and led the NFL with 3,104 yards gained passing. The Associated Press named him the league's Most Valuable Player, but Bert says he won't be satisfied until he leads his team to a Super Bowl triumph.

At 6'3" and 215 pounds, Bert has the size and strength pro quarterbacks need to withstand hits from linemen. He also has exceptional speed, which makes him a threat as a runner. He is most known, however, for the power and accuracy of his riflelike throwing arm. "If someone told me Bert could throw a football across Chesapeake Bay, I'd have to believe him," says Colt wide receiver Roger Carr.

Unlike some other highly paid pro quarterbacks, Bert scorns the trappings of the prima donnas and is quick to credit his teammates for their part in his success. And despite an easygoing demeanor, he is clearly the team's leader and will speak out forcefully on issues that concern them. At the beginning of the '76 season, head coach Ted Marchibroda complained about front-office interference with his coaching. A bitter dispute followed, and Marchibroda resigned. Jones acted as spokesman for his teammates in praising Marchibroda's ability and character and demanded his reinstatement. As a result, the coach resumed his duties.

Dub Jones and son Bert.

Bert and his wife Danni live near his parents in Ruston, La., and Bert is associated with his dad's construction company there. Bert has his own plane, which he uses for business purposes as well as to maintain a busy schedule of off-season speaking engagements. "I love the people in my home town, and I love the outdoors, which is why I wouldn't want to make my permanent home in the big city," he says. His hobbies include scuba-diving, fishing and hunting. When it comes to bagging duck or quail, Bert is as accurate with a shotgun as he is firing footballs. — Barry Abbott

HOW DID SHELLEY DUVALL BECOME A STAR?

It wasn't glamor or beauty that Robert Altman noticed about her when she was a naive girl who had never been outside Texas.

Globe Photos

Shelley with current love Paul Simon.

Ledru/Sygma

By Clarke Taylor

At 27, Shelley Duvall has appeared in a number of films and has been a host on Saturday Night Live. Her star is on the rise. Yet she is barely recognizable to most movie-goers, which she thinks is an advantage.

"Well, I do not want to be recognized as Shelley Duvall. I want people to be aware of each of the different characters I play."

Shelley was a "groupie" in Nashville, a spaced-out cartoon character on platform shoes who can't find time to visit her dying aunt; a sympathetic Mrs. Grover Cleveland, vulnerable in the midst of the Wild West, in Buffalo Bill and the Indians; a disappointed mail-order bride in McCabe and Mrs. Miller; and in Thieves Like Us, a pale, stringy-haired, country girl, who sips cola and has an affair with Keith Carradine.

A 5'7" stick figure of a girl, with bangs, a blank-page expression and an overbite, Shelley could easily play the plain sister of any girl next door. One critic has even suggested that she satisfies "the current American appetite for grotesquerie." Director Robert Altman sees her as being able "to swing all sides of the pendulum: charming, silly, sophisticated, pathetic — even beautiful."

On screen, Shelley has appeared pathetically suspended in motion, yet her characters are hopeful. She is the girl ill-equipped to deal with adversity who somehow manages in a pinch. Here lies the special presence she lends to films. Your feelings rush toward her because she is a recognizable blend of human nature.

Shelley says she likes giving her audience something with which to identify, the silly things in life as well as the more sobering. "We take ourselves very seriously, but there is always a little frailty. We all make mistakes, have little accidents."

Shelley has changed her face, her accent and her posture to accommodate her varied roles. She has donned wigs and dyed her brown hair red. And in some roles her task has been to make herself appear downright unappealing.

Off screen, Shelley is graceful and self-confident, a more mature version of the screen waif. She also is more cosmopolitan, and she seems to be enjoying her success and the privilege it affords. She even appears in gossip columns along with her current love Paul Simon.

When Robert Altman discovered her, however, she was an awkward young woman who never had been outside Texas and who was apparently unaware of the director's maneuverings to size her up.

They met by accident at a party in Houston, where Altman was shooting Brewster McCloud. When he offered Shelley a role in the film, she refused because she was a student. A call came urging her to take a screen test. "I got tired of arguing, and thought maybe I am an actress," recalls Shelley. "They told me to come, and I simply got on a plane [her first] and did it. I was swept away." When she landed, the 20-year-old was in Hollywood with a five-year, three-picture contract.

After the second film for Altman, Shelley settled down to marry a painter. She claims she put notions of a career aside, happy being a housewife, reading novels, caring for animals (still a favorite pastime) and pitching her husband's art. The marriage "just dissipated." They divorced, and Shelley returned to her career.

Shelley was born in Fort Worth, Texas, and raised in Houston. She characterizes herself as something of a loner. She says she passed through adolescense without ever having taken drugs or taken part in other trends of the 60's. In fact, she can't recall a traumatic period of her life.

She attended South Texas Junior College, where she developed an interest in nutrition and studied to be a research scientist.

One character Shelley would like to portray is a woman who has something to overcome and comes to know herself well in the process. Considering the way she has transformed her simple, Texas life, Shelley knows something of this theme firsthand.

"I've never thought about being free because I've never really felt trapped," she says. "The women's movement has never done much for me because I've always thought of myself as free. Sure, my parents were strict, and perhaps I resent a part of my childhood as a result, but in the end, we all make our own decisions. There comes a time when you realize that nobody is going to take care of Number One, like Number One."

Shelley is beginning to apply this philosophy to her career as well as to her personal life. "I'd like to make more money. I don't want all that much, but I like to surround myself with colors I love, with an atmosphere that makes me feel calm, and it takes money to do these things. Of course, I want to be happy, to have something to care about in life — a family, a love, a career, a sense of accomplishment," she continues. "And I think you can be happy just about any place. It's like it says in one of Paul's songs, 'Fifty Ways to Leave a Lover': 'Hop on the bus, Gus.'"

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

HOW MEN RATE WOMEN'S ATTRACTIVENESS

What is the most important part of a lady's face? Does her appeal to a man depend on how attractive he is?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Certain features in a woman's face largely determine how attractive she looks to men.

2. There is much more to a woman's attractiveness than a pretty face and a shapely figure.

3. How attractive a woman appears to a man depends on how attractive he is.

4. How attractive a woman is to a man depends to a large extent on whether they are similar or opposite personality types.

5. A woman who knows how to manipulate a man has the inside track with most men.

6. A man is most likely to remember the face of a woman that has some type of special quality.

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychological studies at Hanover College confirm findings of other investigations showing the mouth region (shape of the lips, etc.) to be the most influential component, followed by the eyes. The hair ranked next in terms of contribution to the facial attractiveness of a woman. The nose was judged next in importance. Overall attractiveness also was influenced by facial structure and complexion.

2. True. As sociologist Andrew M. Greeley concludes from his studies on interpersonal relationships, "Attractiveness is not merely a matter of the arrangement of the features or the dimensions of various sections of the body. . . .Authentic human beauty results from a combination of the physical and the psychic, with one influencing the other. Glamor photographers have observed that after a certain age (they say 25 for most women), attractiveness is based more and more on personality." This is another way of saying that whether a woman is considered beautiful depends largely on the degree to which she develops and provides expression for the most personable qualities of her character.

3. True. In studies at Georgia State University, students rated others for attractiveness on a seven-point scale ranging from "very unattractive" to "very attractive." Results indicated that with male judges their own attractiveness influenced their attractiveness rating of women — and of men, too. It was found that "the less attractive male judges assigned lower attractiveness ratings to people than did the more attractive male judges. . .and that the reference scales of male judges were indeed dependent on their own level of attractiveness." In other words, the better-looking a man is, the more attractive a given woman appears to him.

4. True. Studies at Kent State University showed that extroverts preferred someone similar to themselves in personality. With introverts, however, the opposite was found to be true, the results showing "that introverts prefer dissimilarity to similarity." So whether a woman will be considered attractive by someone who is like her in temperament is likely to depend on whether the gentleman is an introvert or an extrovert.

5. False. A University of Delaware study has shown that, though women who are successful as manipulators — who are ruled to a far greater extent by their heads than by their hearts — are likely to "win" in competitive situations in which they are vying with others for various material goals, they do not have an advantage where romantic attraction is concerned. On the contrary, men were found to be more attracted to women who were characterized as frank, open, natural and spontaneous and who didn't go in for "playing games" or pursuing Machiavellian tactics to gain their ends.

6. True. Pennsylvania State University investigators cite findings indicating that women's faces with distinctive features are best remembered — regardless of whether the person is attractive or plain. Most forgettable face: the one that looks like everybody else.

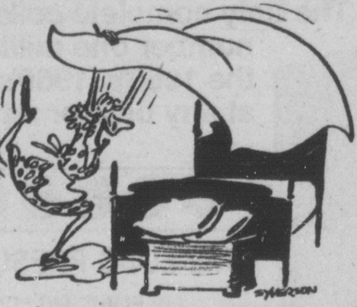
ARMOUR'S ARMORY



I'M NOT MAKING THIS UP

At making up beds,
I'm happy to state,
My wife is quite good
In fact she's first rate.
She smooths out the sheets,
Then she does it once more,
She picks up the blankets
That slid to the floor,
She straightens the quilt
Till it no longer billows,
With one final touch
She then fluffs up the pillows.
Wives come, I suppose,
In many a kind:
Mine can make up a bed
But can't make up her mind.

Air pollution has become so bad in some cities that garage mechanics are reporting a slew of bloodshot headlights.

— Lane Olinghouse

When our kids are on the go,
Our love for them is boundless,
And when they're tucked in bed at night,
We love them — safe and soundless.

— Walter E. Johnson

A cowboy with nothing to do ambled into the local blacksmith shop and picked up a horseshoe without realizing that it had just come from the forge. Instantly, he dropped the hot shoe, shoved his seared hand into his pocket and tried to appear nonchalant.

"Kinda hot, wasn't it?" said the blacksmith.

"Nope," replied the cowpoke. "Just don't take me long to look at a horseshoe."

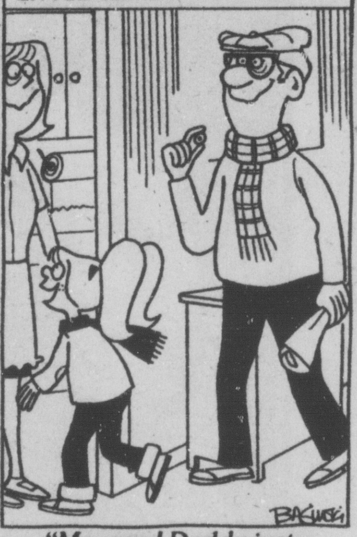
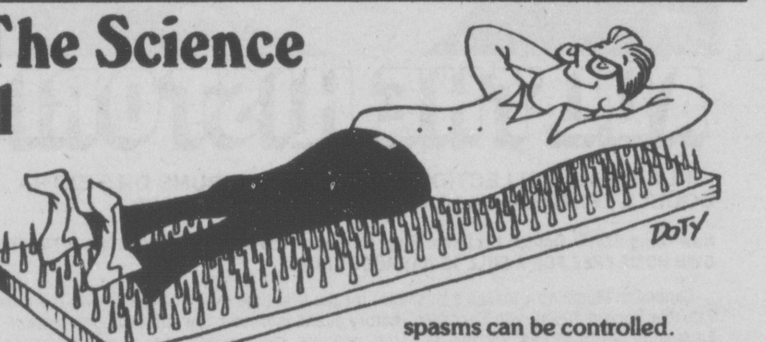
LITTLE EMILY



"Mommy! Daddy just bought a new washer for the kitchen."

THE DOCTOR AND YOU

Biofeedback: The Science Of Self-Control



Now medicine is borrowing from the gurus. For years, the West has heard about people in India who could walk on coals without being burned, sleep on a bed of nails and control their bodies in other unusual ways. Most people dismissed all this as bunk, but lately doctors have begun to take a second look. That magic may have some useful truth in it after all.

In 1970 a report from the Menninger Clinic in Kansas told of work with an Indian swami who seemed able to speed up and slow down his heart rate at will. He could even change the pattern his brain produced on a brain- wave machine. The swami thus showed he had control over his autonomic nervous system (which governs involuntary action), a part of the body that textbooks then claimed was free of mind control.

This technique is called biofeedback. Feedback is a term from mathematics and physical science. It is a method of controlling a system by feeding back into it information about what is going on. (The home thermostat is a feedback device. It reports the temperature in the house to the heating system, which in turn sends up more heat for low temperature and turns on the air-conditioning if the thermostat says the home is too warm.)

People can learn to use biofeedback information to control their own actions. In fact, much of our learning is done through biofeedback. We learn to push a button to ring a doorbell and to stop when someone answers. We learn to drink when we feel thirsty and to stop when we feel full. Now biofeedback is coming into use for treatment of disease.

Tension can be controlled by biofeedback. A sensor, like a thermostat, is fastened over a muscle. The sensor notes when the muscle is tight and reports that tenseness to the patient by a light or a buzzer. When the light goes on or the buzzer sounds, the muscle is tight. The objective is for the patient to find a state of repose so that his muscles relax and the biofeedback sensor does not report tightness in the muscle. With training, many people can learn to relax by this method. Backache, headache and other conditions related to muscle spasms can be controlled.

The same system can be used to lower blood pressure. This time the sensor reports skin temperature. When the skin temperature goes up, the blood pressure goes down because blood pressure is inversely related to the circulation to the skin. So, by fastening a thermometer to the skin and using a red light to report rise in skin temperature and a green light to report its fall, the biofeedback system can train a patient to lower his blood pressure by increasing the circulation to the skin.

There is no magic cue for controlling the body's responses. Everyone has to learn to do it his own way. The gadgets merely point the way, indicating when the goal of relaxation or rise in skin temperature has been met. It is up to each person to identify and reproduce that state of mind and body that gives the useful result. Biofeedback is not a miracle cure, but it is certainly a powerful tool.

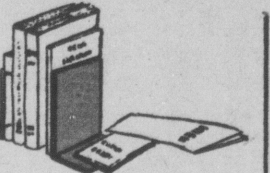
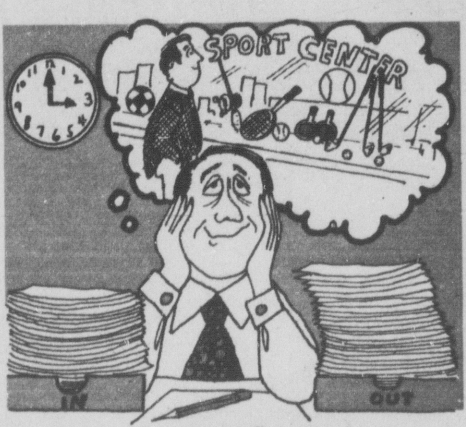
WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Booklets For You and Your Family

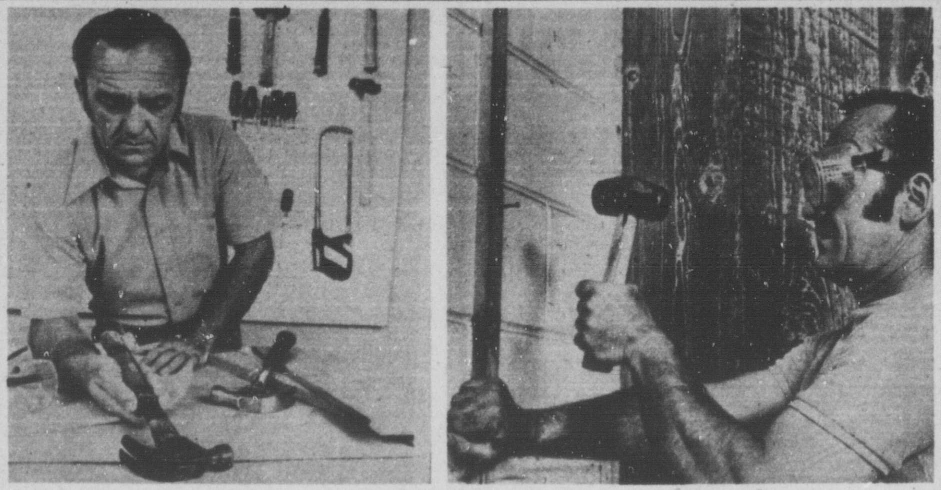


Winter: watching your breath mist in front of your face, sloshing in your waterlogged boots, hearing your car sputter and die in the morning. To help you weather the punishment winter can dish out, take a look at these inexpensive Government booklets. Request the booklet by title and number from: Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009 and allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery. The Common Cold: Relief But No Cure (642E. Free): Effectiveness of various cough, cold, allergy and asthma remedies; includes labeling information. Flu (129E. 35¢): Causes, prevention, symptoms and treatment. Winter Driving Tips (509E. Free): Enough said. Home Heating (058E. 45¢): Installation, operation, maintenance and costs of the most commonly used heating systems.



Energy Crisis

Do you start dragging around 3:00 P.M., when it seems that dinnertime will never come? A few simple changes in your schedule may provide the pick-me-up you need. "A lot of people feel worn-out late in the afternoon because they feel there is nothing to look forward to," says Dr. Herbert Hoffman, director of the Hillside Psychological Guidance Center in Queens Village, N.Y. "They think that they'll just go home, watch a little TV and then go to bed and be back at work in the morning." Dr. Hoffman says that most people put off "having fun" until the weekend, which "makes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday pretty hard to get through." Planning something enjoyable to do after work, such as a movie, window-shopping or a pleasant walk, will help you get out of your rut. Another way of avoiding an afternoon letdown is to pace yourself better during the working day (whether it's office work or housework), doing those tasks that require the most concentration or effort early in the day and saving the more routine tasks for later. Dieters have special energy problems; they may skip breakfast and make up for it by eating a heavy lunch, which makes them lethargic. It's better to relax by eating a leisurely, but light sit-down lunch and turning to snacks such as fruit for an afternoon pickup.



Tool Tips

Buying tools doesn't make you a handyman (or woman) — unless you know how to use them. If you're a new do-it-yourselfer, here are some tips on tool maintenance that will help you work more effectively and avoid injuries. All tools should be regularly checked for hazardous conditions created by wear. The striking face of the tool should be smooth and free of cracks, dents and mushrooming. If the tool shows these signs of damage, it's time to get a replacement. However, if only the handle has been damaged, it can be replaced. Tools are less likely to become damaged if stored properly, and hanging tools on the wall is preferable to box storage, where they will knock against one another. When using a hammer, strike only with the face and not the flat side, which hasn't been hardened to resist blows. Sand away any rough spots or splinters on the handle and coat it with shellac. Saws should be kept sharp and rust-free. A triangular saw file will let you touch up the teeth when they show signs of dullness and space out time between professional sharpenings. Keep the blade clean with steel wool and some kerosene or a commercial rust remover. And always protect your eyes with goggles.

Makeup Tips For Contact-Lens Wearers

If you're a new contact-lens wearer, you're probably eager to show off your eyes. But before you reach for the mascara, there are a few tips to help keep your lenses in top condition. Hard-lens wearers may prefer putting in lenses after makeup is set as the lens can pop out if the eyelid is pulled smooth to apply eye shadow or liner. Even the light pressure of the applicator can cause lid discomfort. The manufacturer that first introduced soft contacts says they should be put in before makeup because the oily substances in creams and lotions absorb into fingers and could smudge lenses. Pencil eyeliner can be used above the upper and below the lower lashes, but avoid using eyeliner on the inner margins of eyelids. Work in a clean, well-lighted area that is safe enough for a dropped lens. For example, if you make up over the bathroom sink, close or cover the drain. Hair and perfume sprays should be used before the lenses are put in — if used afterwards, close eyes and move away from the area until the spray settles. Something else to consider is the tendency of eyeglass wearers to wear heavier eye makeup. So, less might be better for your new look.

In The Swim

For almost 9 hours, Bellflower, Calif., high-school senior Mary Beth Colpo battled chilly, shark-frequented waters as she tried to set a speed record for the 21-mile swim from Santa Catalina Island to the Calif. mainland. Her time of 8 hours, 43 minutes and 16 seconds broke the women's record for the swim by more than 2 hours and bettered the fastest men's time by 6 minutes. Seventeen-year-old Mary Beth had set her mind to the swim several months earlier, when she began an 8-18 mile-a- day training program. Senior-class president with a 3.85 average, Mary Beth hopes to attend UCLA to become a physical therapist — and to keep swimming, which she describes as a "natural high."

Quick Takes

If your feet are cold, maybe you should put on a hat. At least that's the advice of specialists at Cornell Univ.'s Cooperative Extension division. They say that up to ¾ of the heat generated by the body is lost through the head area, so when the head is covered, heat saved can be redirected to other parts of the body, like cold feet or hands. Now that's using your head.... While we're on the subject of heads, a survey of musicians' scholastic achievement by a national rock magazine reports that jazz musicians are the educational elite, averaging 2 more years of schooling than singers and songwriters. The magazine also says that scholastic achievement is reflected in musical styles; instrumentation tends to be more complex among performers who either scored well on their SAT tests or completed college. They also tune their instruments faster....Boston may be a great place to visit, but you wouldn't want to drive there. The Automobile Legal Assoc. says that insurance rates have made Boston the most expensive city in the country in which to drive a full-sized car. Bostonians pay an average of 23.63 cents a mile to operate a full-sized 1977 car, compared with the national average of 17.08 cents a mile....The Federal Government is investigating a missing-food problem — what happened to the nutrition in school lunches. A General Accounting Office survey of meals served to public-school students across the country reports that the lunches fell up to 50% short of Federal nutrition standards. The lunches are flunking the taste test, too — students tossed out 46.6% of their vegetables and 25.4% of their fruit. ...What do kids like to chew? Bubble gum! Putting their money where their mouths are, gum-snappers spent almost $56 million on their habit last year.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Viceroy

More Tobacco, Less 'Tar' than Winston or Marlboro.

Rich, full flavor is the promise that Viceroy makes.

And it's a promise that Viceroy keeps.

The method for delivering flavor is as simple as it is smart.

Instead of using stronger tobacco, Viceroy uses more tobacco, and a lower 'tar' blend than Winston or Marlboro.

The result is a mild, fully packed cigarette with an extra satisfying taste. And, yes, lower 'tar' than Marlboro or Winston.

Postwar baby boom a page of social history

Consequences only now being felt

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It began in 1946 with the notion that things were finally looking up, a national euphoria released by the end of depression and war. By 1961, as though some intangible limit had been reached, it was over.

It was a wave of child-bearing, and it produced a generation so large that it was called the Postwar Baby Boom.

Slowly and inexorably this generation rearranged the country: first the maternity wards weren't big enough, then new elementary schools had to be built, later more high schools and colleges. Through sheer numbers the postwar children set new standards, rediscovering bicycles and baggy pants, marching on Washington and retreating to Vermont, flooding colleges and then flogging them as irrelevant.

This crowd of people, today 16 to 31, shows up in double digit unemployment rates for teenagers, the housing crunch, the crime rate, debate over a later retirement age, doctors of philosophy driving taxicabs.

"In the past five years we have come to recognize much more fully the scope of this baby boom," says Peter Morrison, a population analyst with the Rand Corp. "Demographers are discovering that its effects run far deeper than we recognized.

The baby boom was an interruption of the gradual graying of America. Sixty million babies were born in the 15 boom years from 1946 to 1961. In the preceding 15 years, only 40 million had been born, and in the 15 years after 1961 just under 54 million.

Attitudes of this generation toward itself and the world were molded by unique events. It was the first generation to grow up with the television, the transistor and the polio vaccine, the first to sit in the family room and watch men walk on the moon.

Just as important is the way it developed great expectations, nourished by education and prosperity, then saw them trammeled in its constant elbowing for position. There were too many people expecting too much.

"By reason of their experience, this generation is much more sophisticated, cynical, much more willing to challenge traditions, more willing to accept changes," says Philip Houser, director of the Population Research Center at the University of Chicago. "We may be in for some basic changes that this generation will insist upon."

The postwar generation already is carrying into its middle-aged years new ideas about family life, the value of work, education, leisure time, food and neighborhoods.

'Not too old to have a baby'

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some products of the post World War II baby boom may be contributing to a baby boomlet.

They are women in their early 30s who are deciding to start families. Their child-bearing years are dwindling, their professions are secure, their marriages seem stable and their financial future appears adequate if not rosy.

Postponement helped to contribute to the so-called baby bust — the dramatic drop in the U.S. birth rate in recent years. But there are statistical signs that the birth rate may be on a

Access to water from north at stake in vote

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Approximately 15,000 voters, from Pomona and Claremont to Rowland Heights and Glendora, are expected to go to the polls Tuesday to decide whether this area should have access to more Northern California water.

To distribute the water to its users, the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District says it needs $26 million to build treatment plants, reservoir and pipelines, and another $15 million or more in 10 years to complete the job.

Northern California water is of much higher quality than the supply from the Colorado River and the water drawn from local wells, according to Stan Kawa, general manager of the PVMWD.

"The northern water is already available from the Metropolitan Water District," Kawa explained. "But without the distribution system we can't take it to many of the people in the valley, particularly along the foothills."

Although Northern California water has not been brought here since lastspring because of the current water shortage closer to its source, it has been used in a blend with the Colorado water to supply the Diamond Bar-Walnut-Rowland Heights area.

However, Kawa explained, the southern distribution system is now old and inadequate and needs to be replaced with a much larger system.

The water official said the areawide system is also necessary because of an expected cutback from the Colorado River in the 1980s.

Moreover, La Verne and Claremont are not equipped to receive any northern water, he explained, because they don't have the necessary hookups.

What the district wants to do is build two new distribution systems, one for the north side of the valley and the other for the south, as well as a large reservoir and treatment

Weather

Partly cloudy today and Monday with 20 percent chance of rain this morning decreasing to 10 percent tonight. Not much temperature change. High today in the upper 60s. Low tonight in the mid 50s. High on Monday near 70. Monday sunrise 6:16, sunset 4:53.

Half-inch rain makes autos skiddish

Slightly more than a half inch of rain fell in various parts of the valley Saturday as the season's first storm spawned by a Pacific Northwest cold front, passed through.

Snow showers hit Mt. Baldy and Big Bear above the 8,500 foot level but not enough snow fell to cover brush, spokesmen said.

Scores of minor traffic accidents on surface streets and freeways kept law enforcement agencies busy well after dark after rain began falling shortly after noon. No serious injuries were reported in any traffic mishaps. Worst of the crashes involved an auto which skidded off Carbon Canyon Road south of Chino sending the car into a canyon. No one was injured.

Highway Patrolmen said a semi trailer truck jackknifed on eastbound Pomona Freeway at Peck road during the afternoon blocking three of the four lanes more than an hour.

Spokesmen for Southern California Edison Co. said at least three utility poles caught fire in Alta Loma and the Ontario area as circuits shorted but no outages were reported.

Weather Service spokesmen said the Southland storm was the tail end of a front which dumped much more rain in Oregon, Washington and Northern California. Today it was expected to touch off showers in Southeastern California, Arizona and Mexico .

Forecasters said skies today should be partially cloudy through tomorrow with a high both days of about 70 and an overnight low in the low 50s.

Valley cities reporting rainfall measurements included Claremont with .33 of an inch, La Verne .46, Montclair .19, Mt. Baldy .48, Padua Hills .51 and San Dimas .55.

U.S. offers Park deal for names

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is offering to dismiss the federal indictment against Tongsun Park in exchange for the names of members of Congress who received money from him in the Korean influence-buying scandal.

In a report sent to Congress, the administration confirmed Saturday that the Justice Department would seek dismissal of Park's 36-count indictment in return for his help in the Korean probe.

President Carter said in the report that last Monday the South Korean government sent to the United States "an important new proposal" on the interrogation of Park.

Guy Lombardo dies

HOUSTON (AP) — Famed bandleader Guy Lombardo, whose "Auld Lang Syne" became a New Year's Eve mainstay for nearly a half century, died late Saturday night in Methodist Hospital. He was 75.

Lombardo died off a breathing problem related to the pulmonary artery trouble for which he had been admitted to the hospital on Oct. 27, a hospital spokesman said. The pulmonary artery links the heart to the lungs.

Lombardo had undergone undergoing heart surgery in late September.

GUY LOMBARDO

Lombardo's wife, Lillie Bell, was with him when he died about 9:45 p.m. CST.

Funeral arrangements are pending in Long Island, N.Y.

Lombardo had been listed in critical condition earlier Saturday, although a spokesman said "he seems to be improving a little."

Named Guy Albert Lombardo Jr. at birth, Lombardo started his musical career in 1914, 12 years after he was born in London, Ontario. He formed a band to play at small dances; he was a violinist, but was never to gain fame for playing an instrument.

Lombardo's New Year's Eve performances became a tradition for many Americans on Dec. 31, 1929, when his Royal Canadians first played the tune for a radio audience.

Lombardo was 27, and the band had been formed five years before.

Lombardo and his two brothers, Carmen and Lebert, formed the band in their native Canada and shifted to Cleveland and then Chicago. The youngest brother, Victor, joined the 9-piece band in 1930, and a sister, Rose Marie, sang with the Canadians until her marriage.

For the most part, Lombardo concentrated on avoiding new things. A number of times the bandleader decided to modernize, and each time the band lost some of its following.

So instead of changing with the times, Lombardo watched as sounds from jazz to rock and roll caught the popular imagination. He was dismissed as an anachronism, but the Lombardo sound was still selling records at the time of his death.

Mother, pilot die in wreck

Girl, 8, leads brother from desert air crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Heading toward the sky glow of Las Vegas' brightly lighted streets and entertainment palaces, an 8-year-old girl led her dazed older brother to safety over eight miles of rugged desert from an airplane crash that killed their mother and the pilot.

The girl, Rochelle Krumpeck of San Jose, Calif., then told searchers how to find the wreckage of the single-engine Piper Cherokee, which crashed into a hillside about 20 miles from here.

The two killed, who were sitting in the front seats of the craft, were identified as Ruth Krumpeck, 35, and Ron Griffin, 31, both of San Jose. The children had been in the back of the four-seater plane.

"I heard this beeping noise about three times and then I blinked and all of a sudden the next thing I know I look around and Ron was on Randy's lap with his head all bleeding," the youngster told authorities Saturday after the ordeal. "And my mom was on the seat with her face all bleeding. I climbed out the window and I told him (Randy) to climb out the window too."

Rochelle told authorities she helped her 18-year-old brother, Randy, from the wreckage Friday evening and urged him on to Las Vegas because she was concerned about her mother and Griffin.

"We started to walk and then after we walked about halfway, we went to sleep," the youngster said. "Then I said, 'Randy, come on, we've got to go to Las Vegas because Mommy and Ron can die if we don't go there and tell them that they're hurt."

Rochelle then guided her brother, who suffered a slight concussion and lost his glasses in the crash, during the 2½-hour walk across the desert to the nearest road, police reported.

The youngster said she was able to find her way out of the desert because the aura of the bright Las Vegas lights was visible in the skies.

A passing motorist took them to a Las Vegas truckstop and called police. The plane wreckage and the two bodies were found early Saturday.

29th Pilgrim Festival:

10,000 expected at annual affair

About 10,000 guests are expected to crowd the grounds of Pilgrim Place in Claremont when the 29th annual Pilgrim Festival takes place Friday and Saturday.

According to Nell Simmons, personnel coordinator, it takes about 800 volunteers to stage the festival. The 300 residents, many of whom work all year on preparations, are assisted by 500 persons from outside of the retirement community.

Students from the School of Theology at Claremont help unpack and shelve the thousands of books collected for a book sale.

Claremont ministers assist members of the McCabe Rest Home Auxiliary at the luncheon to be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. both days.

Claremont Kiwanians are in charge of greeting bus groups arriving from out of town while members of other clubs, churches and community groups are pitching in to help in many ways.

An original, historical pageant, "Pilgrim Triumphant," will be presented at 2 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. The pageant has a cast of 40. All are Pilgrim Place residents except for youngsters from Claremont schools.

The pageant and festival are open to the public free of charge.

All proceeds from sales during the festival will benefit the Pilgrim Place health services. In an effort to improve health care and extend community outreach, the retirement center has embarked on a $2.5 million fund drive for a new Health Services building with 49 beds in three wings.

Carter uses first veto on breeder reactor bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter used his first veto Saturday, rejecting a bill that would have authorized $80 million for a breeder reactor that would produce weapons-grade nuclear material.

Carter said the reactor project, located on the Clinch River in Tennessee, would imperil his effort to stop the spread of nuclear weapons and technology.

The president indicated he would consider impounding funds for the project if his veto is overridden "to ensure that no further unnecessary expenditures on this facility are made."

Carter said the government-industry venture at Oak Ridge, Tenn., designed to demonstrate the feasibility of breeder reactors, would be "technically obsolete and economically unsound."

The bill cleared Congress on Oct. 20, winning 366-52 approval in the House and passage by voice vote in the Senate. It would take 67 votes in the Senate to overturn the veto and 290 in the House.

"There are now on the drawing boards better technologies," said Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's assistant for domestic affairs and policy.

Eizenstat said Carter was confident the House and Senate would sustain the veto.

The measure authorized funding for fiscal 1978, which began Oct. 1, for the Energy Department's nuclear and non-nuclear energy research, development and demonstration projects. New legislation for projects other than the Clinch River project, would have to be passed if the veto is sustained.

Breeder reactors produce more nuclear fuel, plutonium, than they consume. The fuel can be converted for use in atomic bombs and Carter has stated that his efforts to end the project were part of his program to halt the spread of weapons-grade nuclear material.

Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., who sponsored an unsuccessful House amendment to cancel the project, said Carter's veto was "sound on economic, political, scientific, environmental and national security grounds."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho., chairman of the energy research and development subcommittee, said he believed the president's veto was wrong.

"By refusing to build a breeder reactor while other nations proceed to do so, we ... retreat from reality," he said. "Other nations have aready crossed the threshold of the plutonium age."

Carter had to veto the bill Saturday or it would have become law automatically.

Cooper's abilities cited for new post

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The appointment last Tuesday of Ken Cooper as assistant superintendent of business services for the Pomona Unified School District has created considerable unrest and speculation throughout the district.

Cooper, a native Pomonan who resides in Claremont, leaves his post as director of pupil personnel to take over the $36,050-a-year job in the business department where he will command some 350 employees.

Following last Tuesday's board meeting, considerable ire was raised between trustees when two of them, Eugene Whitlock and Frances Livingston, left the meeting after the 3-1-1 vote approving Cooper's appointment.

Whitlock had voted no. Mrs. Livingston had abstained.

While considerable questions exist about Cooper's skill and experience in dealing with business matters, there has been unilateral praise for his ability as an administrator from trustees, fellow administrators and even the Associated Pomona Teachers (APT).

As the months have passed since the retirement of former business superintendent Lynn Rountree, the appointment of his successor has more and more become a political football. Some trustees have claimed that one board member applied for the job himself. Others said that some trustees, nursing political ambitions, wished to see the job filled as quickly as possible.

In recommending Cooper to the board Tuesday night, District Supt. Charles Carpenter admitted that Cooper did not have certain "desirable" credentials but after the meeting said Cooper's "proven administrative skills will certainly overcome any lack he might have in direct experiences in business services.

"The dispatch with which he changed from an outstanding principal to an outstanding director of pupil personnel only shows this."

Carpenter stressed the fact that Cooper has all the "required" qualifications for the job although he may lack some of the "desired" qualifications.

Those voting to support Cooper's appointment were trustees C. J. Mendoza, Don Donnelly and C. Allen Braswell.

Braswell earlier this year introduced a motion calling for all top-level administrative personnel to reside within the district.

2 hunters find body of slain man

Two rabbit hunters Saturday stumbled across a slaying victim in a vineyard just north of Ontario Motor Speedway.

San Bernardino County homicide detectives said the unidentified black man between 20 and 30-years-old, so far is unidentified.

Detectives said the man, dead four to six weeks, was found four rows inside the vineyard off Milliken Avenue near Fourth Avenue. He died of several gunshot wounds in the chest and abdomen, detectives said.

Officers said the man was wearing a distinctive wishbone gold necklace with a pearl affixed to the wishbone.

Circumstamces surrounding the slaying are similar to a case three weeks ago in which a Pomona man was found shot once in the head in a canyon near San Dimas Dam in Bonelli Park. Los Angeles County Sheriff's detectives are handling that case.

Car plunges 275 feet; driver hurt

West Covina motorist Larry Seeley, 42, suffered a broken leg Saturday when his 4-wheel drive auto plunged 275 feet down a canyon off a dirt road near San Gabriel Dam on Rincon Redbox Road.

San Dimas Sheriff's search and rescue crewmen worked several hours to free Seeley from wreckage and lift him to the road.

He was rushed to Verdugo Hills Hospital in Glendale for emergency treatment and later transferred to Queen of the Valley Hospital in West Covina where his condition was listed as good.

Deputies said Seeley was forced off the narrow dirt road in San Gabriel Mountains when another auto approached head on. He remained inside the tumbling auto as it plunged into the canyon.

Woman found dead of gunshot

Mrs. Mable Metyer, 83, of 1983 W. Ninth St., was found dead at her home Saturday, victim of a gunshot wound in the head, Pomona police said.

Mrs. Metyer, who suffered asthma and heart trouble, recently complained of despondency, according to officers. Police recovered a .38-calbre pistol found next to the victim.

Youth fires 3 rifle shots in classroom

Valley voters to decide water issue

plant in high North Claremont elevation that would permit distribution of the Northern California water through gravity flow. Plans also call for the acquisition of a large parcel of land in Tonner Canyon that would eventually be used as another reservoir and treatment plant.

The proposal is a streamlined version of a more elaborate $35 million system which the voters rejected two years ago.

It is supported not only by the district and most of its clients, but also a Citizens' Committee for Water headed by former Pomona City Administrator Fred Sharp. It is opposed by the Glendora and Claremont chapters of the League of Women Voters who insist that it is not needed. The women suggest that the district use the Weymouth treatment plant of the MWD in La Verne, instead, and build a mile-long pipe to the Fulton plant that now supplies water to both Claremont and La Verne.

They claim the Weymouth plant is running far below capacity and could well supply all the water the district needs for the foreseeable future.

The MWD which has been silent on the issue till now, today agreed that its Weymouth plant could supply all the water the valley needed, but agreed with Kawa that hookups would be necessary to serve Claremont and La Verne.

Thomas Patterson, the MWD's superintendent for this area, said the Weymouth plant was currently operating at half of its 400-million-gallon capacity because demand for water has slackened off since last summer. But even in the top summer months, he said, the plant could have handled more water.

The women contended that using Weymouth would cost less than building a new treatment plant. Kawa said the cost of pumping the water up 500 feet from that plant to Claremont and La Verne would, in time, be more costly than building the new plant at a higher elevation.

Patterson said the MWD didn't want to get involved in the controversy.

About 15,000 of the district's 124,000 registered voters are expected to go to the pollsTuesday to decide the issue. They will vote at 142 precincts scattered throughout the district which includes Claremont, Pomona, La Verne, San Dimas, Diamond Bar, Walnut, Rowland Heights, Covina, and Glendora.

A simple majority is needed, and the vote will be counted by the staff of Los Angeles County Registrar Leonard Panish at the PVMWD offices at 174 W. McKinley St. in Pomona.

The district office also will be the tabulation center for an election involving the annexation of the Piedmont Mesa area to Claremont, and for those in Walnut who will vote for two directors on the Walnut Valley Water District.

Those who need rides to the polls apparently will not have a difficult time getting them. The LWV offers car service to voters who telephone 624-9457 or 621-2094. The citizens' committee will have rides available for those who call 623-7671 or 622-0923.

Early this year, the birth rate was up six percent over the same period last year. And the National Center for Health Statistics has reported that the rate of first births to women 30-34 was up to 8.1 per thousand in 1975, from 7.3 per thousand in 1970.

The subject is explored in a new book, "You're Not Too Old to Have a Baby," (Farrar Straus Giroux), by Jane Price, a research associate in the East Asian Institute at Columbia University who waited until she was nearly 32 to have her first child. Much of the book is devoted to the medical aspects of late pregnancy.

"Medically, the risks of waiting to have children past the biological prime have been exaggerated," she writes. "With recent advances in genetics and obstetrics, most mothers over 30, 35, and 40 have an excellent chance of bearing a healthy child."

It is still true that older parents have a statistically greater chance of having a child with birth defects, especially a child with mongolism, known medically as Down's syndrome.

Ms. Price notes that the chances of having a mongoloid baby are one in 2,500 for a mother under 20, about one in 1,500 for a mother in her 20s, and for mothers 30 to 34 about one in 850. But for mothers 35 to 39 the chances climb to one in 280 and for the woman between 40 and 44 one in 100 and after 44 to one in 40.

The author, however, says that a medical procedure called amniocentesis can detect such defects shortly after conception so the woman can have an abortion.

Pilgrim Festival

One section of the new center will be for mentally confused persons and will be open to the community. This is the first such facility exclusively for persons past 65 in Southern California. The fund drive is half-way toward its goal. Pilgrim Place residents, all retired ministers, missionaries, YWCA and YMCA workers or teachers of religion, have donated over $600,000 to the fund from their limited incomes.

A motorized "Mayflower-on-wheels" will take guests on tours of the 32 landscaped acres of independent homes and gardens.

The pageant is held on an outdoor stage set amid crimson liquid amber and golden ginko trees.

Children will be entertained at a Pilgrim puppet show. Or they may participate in a "glue-in," using chips of wood to create anything their imagination can produce.

Among the many items available at the festival will be a 14-foot handcrafted Sportabout boat made by the late Lucius Barrows. Sealed bids for the nearly new boat will be received until 3 p.m. on Saturday.

The Rev. Rollo E. Dunman, who moved to Pilgrim Place a year ago and contributed English toffee to the 1976 festival, won the honor of being the candy chairman with his expertise.

Under his guidance, more than 500 pounds of homemade candy and 100 pounds of sugared grapefruit peel have been prepared.

Retired Col. Harry M. Grissard, a resident of Mt. San Antonio Gardens, is responsible for the more than 500 chrysanthemum trees now in full bloom for the festival sale.

Dr. R. Wilbur Simmons, plant chairman, and other residents actually grew the potted trees.

Members of the festival executive committee include Doris Roth, general chairman, Marjorie D. Mathews, G. Ross Thomas, Harry D. Brown, Hazel F. Shank, Dunham, Gertrude Feely, Mrs. Simmons, Frances Elwell, E. Alexander Gray, Mrs. Sayre, Dorothea Lemon and Lydia Flucke.

Further information about the festival may be secured from the Administration Office, 624-5006.

ELA auto insurance rates down in experiment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An eleventh-month campaign by the United Neighborhoods Organization has paid off in reduced car insurance rates for residents of East Los Angeles.

Under an experimental agreement between the UNO and a Los Angeles insurance firm, the experimental rate reductions for the predominantly Mexican-American area will begin Jan. 1.

Josephs said Friday that his company will slice premiums from 5 to 9 percent, using a "zip code sensitive" rate structure enabling it to retain its current profit margin.

Josephs told a packed UNO meeting at East Los Angeles College that the system will permit premium reductions in areas such as East Los Angeles where actual losses have been lower. At the same time, he said rates will increase in areas of higher losses.

"Our studies have shown this area deserved a lower rate," Josephs said. "We felt it should be lower than Beverly Hills, Central Los Angeles and Hollywood where the losses are higher."

The finest jewelry was probably some ornamental clasp or pin. It may have been used to hold together the skins which clothed prehistoric cavemen, and decorated with a pretty stone for good luck.

Mankind has never ceased to enjoy the beauty of exquisite jewelry. See us for any jewelry need, or when a gift is contemplated.

Obituaries

Harold Brewer

Harold Albert Brewer of 2153 Vallejo Way, Upland, died Thursday in Riverside after suffering an apparent heart attack.

Mr. Brewer was born May 28, 1924 in Oilton, Okla. He lived in Pomona from 1942 to 1957 when he moved to Upland.

He was an operating engineer employed by a Riverside construction firm. He was a Navy veteran of World War II. He was a member of the Upland Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Mr. Brewer was a member of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 12.

Surviving are his widow, Yvonna; a son, George of Chino; and a brother, Carl of Tulsa, Okla.

Services will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the Upland Ward chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Private burial will be in Pomona Cemetery.

Friends may call at the Stone Funeral Home in Upland Monday from 5 to 9 p.m.

Peter Mosher

Peter W. Mosher of 2717 Arrow Highway, La Verne, died Oct. 30, at Pomona Valley Community Hospital after a two-month illness.

Mr. Mosher was born Sept. 1, 1897 in Grand Rapids, Mich. He came to La Verne in 1962 from Wausau, Wis.

Surviving are his widow, Beatrice E.; three sons, Donald J. of Milwaukee, Wis., and Robert L. and Gerald C., both of Pomona; two sisters, Geraldine Kahn and Olive W., both of Wausau, Wis.; 7 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

Private services were held.

Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona was in charge of arrangements.

Samuel Smith

Samuel E. Smith of 250 W. Artesia St., Pomona, died Thursday night in a local convalescent center.

Mr. Smith was born Oct. 24, 1891 in Dallas County, Mo. He came to California 20 years ago from Borger, Tex. He was a former resident of Woodlake and had lived in Pomona the past month.

Surviving are his widow, Mable L.; a stepson, Harold A. Davis of Pomona; two brothers, Archie of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Virgil of Ponca City, Okla.; and three sisters, Mamie Moser and Zetola Coats, both of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Zenola Hammans of Ponca City, Okla.

Shipment was made to Stroud, Okla., where services will be held and burial made in the Stroud Cemetery.

Odes Gish

The Rev. Odes Walter Gish of 2320 Bonita Ave., La Verne, died Friday at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Mr. Gish was born Feb. 27, 1889 in Jewell County, Kansas. He had been a resident of Seattle, Wash., for 50 years. He lived in La Verne the last 20 years. He had been a carpenter for many years until his retirement in 1967.

Mr. Gish was a member of the Fellowship Church of the Brethren in La Verne and was an elder and ordained minister in the church.

Surviving are his widow, Florence R.; a son, LeRoy C. of Redwood Valley; a brother, Frank J. of Altamont, Kan.; 5 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren.

Services will be held Monday at 10:30 a.m. in the Fellowship Church of the Brethren, La Verne. The Rev. Vernard Eller, pastor, will officiate.

Burial will be in La Verne Cemetery.

Friends may call at Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona today from 2 to 9 p.m.

James Matthews

James P. Matthews of Hesperia died Oct. 28 in Victorville.

He was born Sept. 23, 1901 in Iowa and had resided in Pomona from 1945 to 1955 before moving to Hesperia. He was a Mason, veteran of World War I and retired superintendent for Turner Construction Co.

Survivors include his widow, Sylvia; four daughters, Patricia Collins of St. Peters, Mo., Jacqueline Lawrence of Alta Loma, Theodora Harding of San Diego and Barbara Brown of Ontario; three sons, Michael of San Bernardino, Daniel of Delta Junction, Alaska, and Thomas of Australia; two sisters, Martha Heumes of Mesa, Ariz., and Helen O'Connell of South Bend, Ind.; 22 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Private family services were at Dudley Mortuary in Victorville.

Garnat Penrose

Garnat Penrose of Chino died Friday at Park Avenue Hospital, Pomona, after a long illness.

Mr. Penrose was born Nov. 11, 1889, in Australia.

He is survived by one son, James M. of Redlands; one daughter, Lois G. Wymore of Chino; one sister, Hazel; 14 grandchildren and 7 great-grandchildren.

Services will be Monday at 1 p.m. at Rainbow Chapel, Rose Hills Memorial Park, Whittier.

Tiny swimmer makes first

LOS ALAMITOS, Calif. (AP) — Nine-month-old Fred Garcia III has become the youngest person ever to pass the beginner's stage of the Red Cross swimming test in Gretta Andersen's swimming school here.

For his achievement, Fred received Miss Andersen's gold medal from the 1948 Olympics and a Red Cross certification card, which he promptly attempted to eat.

The son of Dr. and Mrs. Fred Garcia blew bubbles, bobbed his head and swam 30 feet. He floated on his back 30 seconds and bounced back up when pushed to the bottom in 5 feet of water. He did all this after only 15 swimming lessons.

The Red Cross test also required that he jump into the pool and swim, but since Fred couldn't walk yet, he just sat on the ledge and fell in.

Laboulaye wins star assignment

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Taking up his new assignment as French ambassador to the United States will be a lot like going home for Francois Rene Antoine Lefebvre de Laboulaye.

The sleek, silver-haired diplomat was born in Washington 60 years ago. He returned in time to play wingback for the capital's Landon School football team and still later to send his daughter Claire to public school on Massachusetts Avenue.

"I was always on the sidelines," he recalls of his football career. "I was just too light."

Laboulaye is still slim but he has won the star slot on France's diplomatic roster, just as his diplomat father did before him.

The new ambassador arrives Nov. 5 in Washington — aboard the Concorde — and begins immediately preparing for President Carter's visit here at the end of the month.

Provisional clearance for Concorde landing rights at New York has eliminated a major irritant in Franco-American relations, getting Laboulaye's stay off to a friendly start. His major task as he sees it now is to keep French and American policies in tandem on foreign trade, Africa and human rights.

"There are differences of interests sometimes," he said. "We wouldn't be different nations otherwise. But the public shouldn't understand these differences as a loss of our traditional affinity. We should be able to talk about them as in a family."

Laboulaye and his wife, Antoinette, count a long list of friends in the Washington family, including Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Washington Post owner Katharine Graham.

"Having a sympathetic listener makes getting your message across easier, even if they don't like what you have to say," Laboulaye said in an interview at the Foreign Ministry, where he has been director of political affairs since 1975.

Laboulaye spent his first few years in Washington during World War I, while his father was posted in the French embassy. The elder Laboulaye returned as French ambassador from 1933 to 1937, when Francois was introduced to American-style football at Landon.

The new generation of Laboulaye diplomacy showed up in Washington from 1954 to 1957, when Francois was attached to the French embassy under former Ambassador and Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville and Ambassador Herve Alphand.

During that stint, Laboulaye's son also attended Landon.

"That was the occasion for my worst humiliation," recalls the smoothly tailored ambassador. "I took my son to see the headmaster and he said, 'I remember your father well. He was a good student but a terrible football player.' There went a reputation I had cultivated carefully with my son over the years."

The Laboulaye children — two sons and two daughters — are grown and married now.

Between the early years and the new assignment have come posts in Beirut, Moscow and Ottawa and ambassadorships in Rio de Janeiro and Tokyo.

With examples like Alphand — a personal friend of the Kennedys and a social lion in Washington — Laboulaye has tough acts to follow. His immediate predecessor was Jacques Kosciusko Morizet, who is reported to have been tapped as a parliamentary candidate for next March's national elections.

"I want to continue in their line," Laboulaye said. "But you have to be yourself. You can't copy. That's an important thing in this job."

Phillips Ranch report slated

A progress report on building activities in the Phillips Ranch area will be explained to the Pomona City Council Monday at 8 p.m. by an official for Westmore Development Co.

Alvin Lesser, vice-president of the firm which bought the ranch area several years ago, will bring the council up to date on projects such as the building of two reservoirs and future tracts that will occupy the more than 1,000 acres in the area between the Pomona Freeway, the Corona Expressway and the Westmont Hills.

Since the meeting is a council study session, no action will be taken by council members.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives, friends & neighbors, for their kindness & sympathy shown us, during our sad bereavement in the loss of our dearly beloved father.

Postwar baby boom gives birth to whole new world of problems—

In 1944 Cole Porter's "Don't Fence Me In" was released, and the millions of servicemen who returned the next year seemed to take it as a theme. They moved out into what had been farm fields — where their children would be bigger than the trees they wanted to climb — and built homes with money guaranteed by the GI bill.

The number of marriages jumped from 1.6 million in 1945 to 2.3 million in 1946. The number of births jumped from 2.9 million to 3.4 million.

"The baby boom is probably the first generation raised in middle class affluence, and they have taken it for granted," says Denis Johnston, a demographer in the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. "I was 35 when I first bought an automobile. That's unknown in this generation."

Today, the babies born in 1946 are 31 years old and have formed their own households. "I would argue that they had a shocking experience," Johnston says. The affluence was impossible to sustain."

Now that the first of the postwar children have grown and left home, their old neighborhoods — the first strongholds in the great march to suburbia — look different.

"Neighborhoods tend to go through life cycles like people," says Dr. Rex Campbell, professor of sociology at the University of Missouri. "Populations tend to age just as houses do, and soon you have an aging neighborhood and finally a declining neighborhood."

Typical is Nassau County, adjoining New York City on Long Island, whose population tripled between 1940 and 1970. Now it is at a standstill. Of several hundred schools in the county, about 30 have been abandoned.

Across the nation, communities that debated higher school taxes in the 1950s to accommodate the baby boom are debating today which schools to close. That's because the baby boom was followed by a rather dramatic "baby bust," an unexpected occurence that magnified the impact of the baby boom.

Demographers supposed that another population surge would happen when the postwar children reached child-bearing age in the 1960s. But it didn't.

The rate at which women were bearing children at the peak of the boom in 1957 — which implied nearly 3.8 births for each woman over her lifetime — was a record for modern times. By 1973 the rate had dropped to 1.9 births per woman.

The nationwide enrollment in elementary and secondary schools rose from 48 million in 1964 to 51 million in 1973, then slipped back to 50 million in 1975. And the National Center for Education Statistics projects that it will drop to 46 million by 1985.

This means difficult decisions not only for school districts but for those of the postwar generation who chose teaching as a career. Nearly half of those who received degrees in 1975 qualifying them to teach and who looked for a job didn't find one, the center estimates.

The same expansion occurred at colleges and universities as the baby boom generation entered. Enrollment rose from 1.5 million in 1952 to 6.3 million in 1972. Not only were there 11.6 million more people of college age in 1972, but the proportion of them going to college had risen from 11 percent to 25 percent, the Census Bureau says.

Changing times: boom babies are today's 'young adults'

Because more people were going to college, more people were entering society with high aspirations that often couldn't be satisfied.

"They grew up at a time when education was a royal road to success, they were told," says Dr. Jerald Bachman, a social psychologist at the University of Michigan. "But it simply wasn't possible to deliver on it. It's like telling everybody where the good fishing hole is."

Next year the last of the baby boom group will be at the typical college enrollment age. Each year after, paralleling the declining births in the 1960s, the number of potential college freshmen each year will drop sharply.

"Our colleges are already in trouble," says Fabien Linden, director of research for The Conference Board, a research organization "In fact, their troubles have not yet begun. It will be next year that the demographic trauma of the colleges will really begin to be felt.

"A lot of colleges are going to close. The same thing would happen if people quit drinking milk — a lot of cows would be out of work."

The traditional timetable of going to college, then going to work may be outmoded. It's possible that formal education in the future will continue over a person's lifetime. Colleges are already looking at continuing adult education as a way to blunt the impact of declining births.

"The fighting for grades today is unbelievable," says Dr. Carl Harter, a sociology professor at Tulane University. "You've never seen such competition. There's such a large group of young adults entering the labor force. Some of the troubles of entering young adulthood have been going on long enough that these younger members of the baby boom have been exposed to them."

A decade ago someone who wanted to teach in college picked half a dozen interesting schools and applied, Harter says. Last year, Tulane hired a sociology teacher who had sent out more than 160 applications. "It's an example of the kind of fear, real or imagined, that's around," he adds.

More than 5,000 teen-agers mobbed job centers in New York one day this past summer for a chance at 2,000 jobs. Similar scenes occurred in Chicago and Los Angeles. Behind them is the way the baby boom has flooded the labor force.

At any one time in 1975, 3.6 million people aged 16 to 24 were unable to find jobs, the National Commission for Manpower Policy found. Another 600,000 wanted to work but had become discouraged and quit looking.

"We have paid a substantial price for this condition," Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said this year. "The opportunity to participate in the nation's prosperity — or even to have a job — has been denied a significent segment of the population."

A big part of the expansion in the labor force after 1964, about three-fifths, was due to the tendency of women in the postwar generation to quit the traditional role of housewife and take a job. The proportion of women working outside the home is expected to grow in coming years.

Jane Tillis graduated from Livingston College in New Jersey in 1976 with a degree in women's studies and sociology. She looked for a job all summer, mailing about 200 resumes, sitting through about 50 interviews, without success. The best job a friend of hers with the same degree could find was in an envelope factory.

"It's made me reality-oriented, more practical, less idealistic," Miss Tillis says. She took some secretarial courses and got a job at a university.

As it moves into middle age, the baby boom generation will continue to feel the crowding it is experiencing today. Most people expect to advance in their careers. But the baby boom generation will be trying to squeeze into a fewer number of management jobs, at the same time finding fewer people under them to manage.

"There is a kind of natural ratio of workers to supervisors," says Paul Flaim, chief of special labor force studies at the

Bent coppers in 'Scotland Yard'

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard has a tarnished image.

It is now better known as the home of the bent copper — London slang for the corrupt cop.

One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of a corruption ring.

For the past eight years, since corruption at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a series of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for taking bribes from criminals, and 400 lower-ranking officers have been fired or have resigned.

The London Metropolitan Police, official name for the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversity.

That independence is now in the hands of David McNee, a 51-year-old nicknamed "The Hammer" for his strikes against the underworld. But McNee, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the Yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on . .. and are still serving today."

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives' taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted.

Among the senior officers jailed for up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography racketeer Jim Humphreys; Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 detectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers; Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption network. Moody once headed an investigation into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence.

An internal investigation bureau has been set up to root out crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians.

The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in ... the corruption trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?"

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active.

Baby boom spurs change—

Bureau of Labor Statistics. "When the baby boom reaches 40 years of age, fewer people will be coming up behind.

"You will have more potential chiefs than Indians, because the low birthrate in the '60s."

The oldest members of the postwar generation are today at the age, 25 to 30, when people typically look for their first house.

While the total population grew by 5.3 percent between 1970 and 1976, the 25 to 34 year age group — the first-home buying group — grew by more than 27 percent, the Census Bureau says.

"This year we expect 1.4 million new single-family housing starts," said Bob Sheheen, associate chief economist of the National Association of Homebuilders. "We attribute this to a great extent to the postwar population bulge."

Many young couples can only afford a house if both are working. The association found in a survey last year that 58.5 percent of the first-time buyers of new houses were working couples.

With couples having fewer children or none at all, houses may become smaller, and more couples may choose city life over suburbia.

The Gerber baby food people, whose mashed carrots were spooned into innumerable baby mouths in the 1950s, read the demographics right and decided to diversify as early as 1957. Today the company also sells life insurance in a plan geared to young families.

Baby boom couples are marrying at a later age, having their first child at a later age, planning smaller families, getting divorced more often.

The baby boom generation will have its own troubles with retirement. By 2011, when the first of them turn 65, they'll still be a crowd. The Census Bureau figures that the elderly population will rise from 23 million today to 55 million by the year 2030.

Today, most elderly parents who need constant care still live with their children. And if the postwar generation continues its small-family trend, where will those needing assistance turn?

Serious questions already have been raised about the Social Security system. In the year 2030, the Social Security Administration says, one retired person may draw benefits for every two workers paying for them through taxes.

If the baby boom generation is hobbled by its size, it is also helped: It will wield a large number of votes to influence the course of its retirement. Already the political clout of older citizens is rising, as indicated by the Congressional vote against mandatory retirement.

So far the country has usually reacted with surprise to each new problem created by the baby boom. Planning for such people bulges may well become the emphasis of population study in the future.

There are many reasons why

Our housing prices have skyrocketed

Food, clothing and shelter are three basic needs.

And like seemingly everything else these days, the cost of providing them has gone up faster than many peoples' paychecks.

Food prices have more than doubled in the last decade.

Gasoline, clothing, automobiles and most other consumer goods have likewise jumped in price.

But nowhere, perhaps, has inflation been anymore dramatic than in the area of housing.

Housing prices have skyrocketed in just a few short years.

For most families, providing shelter is the single biggest household expense.

And there are many reasons why.

According to a recent report by the National Association of Builders, land costs alone have gone up an incredible 500 percent in the last 20 years.

Other factors, such as increased labor and materials costs, higher interest rates and government fees have also climbed drastically.

Since 1970, the average price of a home in California has risen from $31,400 to over $61,000.

Greatly increased finance charges over and above the price of the home, rapidly increasing property taxes and other influences have put the price of buying any home, new or used, out of the reach of many families.

But rents, likewise, have climbed in almost the same fashion as mortgage payments.

For those who own their own homes, the problems of housing do not appear as severe as they do to the poor, the young and the elderly, who in some cases are paying as much as half of their total incomes for shelter.

Basically, however, the issues of housing boil down to "supply and demand."

There are simply not enough houses available to those who want them.

House sales and building have been booming in the valley for the last few years.

Ella Ruby, an executive for the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, anticipates that local real estate sales will reach an all-time high in both number of houses sold and total monetary sales this year.

During the first nine-months of 1977, Pomona Valley real estate brokers have sold more than $25 million worth of residential property in Pomona; $17 million in Claremont and $11 million in La Verne.

Although real estate sales have slackened in the last few weeks, brokers don't see signs of much weakening in the demand for housing by area residents.

Pomona Valley Board of Realtors' president Dean Murphy, says the increase in the cost of housing will have to stop somewhere, but he says frankly, "I'm not sure when it's going to happen."

Murphy, who has been in the real estate business since 1971, says today's housing cycle is very unusual. Brokers and housing experts are unsure what to make of the trends in both the new and used housing market.

"To me it doesn't make sense," he said.

Murphy explains that most homebuyers in the Pomona Valley are attracted to the area because homes are still

HOUSING BOOM The cost of housing has risen dramatically in recent years, but so far has not stymied development in much of the valley. Demand for housing in most area cities and communities is still strong amidst one of the largest building booms in valley history.

Searching for a home . . .

Most dream houses are too expensive

Tom and Teri Tondee are like many professional couples.

He works as an engineer's assistant; she, as an elementary school teacher.

They are both young, well educated and look forward to someday settling down and raising a family.

In many ways, the two are luckier than most. They both have good jobs and a combined income that would be considered comfortable by most standards.

Recently, the couple bought their first home, a two-bedroom, modestly priced Spanish-style house in La Verne.

Finding it was not an easy task.

Tom and Teri spent more than a year looking for that "special" house. They looked in Pomona, Chino, Claremont and almost everywhere else in the valley.

"We must have looked at more than 50 houses before we found this one," said Tom.

Most houses were too expensive.

When the Tondees first decided to buy, they set $50,000 as the top price they could afford.

After looking at the prices of new and older homes, however, they became discouraged and decided $50,000 was just not enough to buy the kind of house they had in mind.

"We had to go higher," said Tom. "There just wasn't anything in that price range."

Teri said they had seriously considered buying an older run-down house, but the prices for homes in need of repair were almost as high as prices being asked for new homes.

"We didn't find anything for under $40,000 that didn't need a lot of repairs," she said. "It was really frustrating."

The La Verne home cost them nearly $60,000. It is quite large and spacious (nearly 2,000 square feet) and is located in an older, established neighborhood. The house was built in 1932.

Teri said, "It has a lot of character."

After looking at several new homes throughout the valley, the couple decided a "tract" house just wasn't what they had in mind.

"Besides, they were all too expensive anyway," said Tom.

While families who have owned their own homes for many years are still paying relatively low mortgage payments, the Tondee's, like most young couples, have to struggle to get by, despite their double salary.

"Right now, I couldn't afford to quit work to raise a family," said Teri.

"It's hard for us to save any money," said Tom.

The two say that the high cost of putting a roof over their heads doesn't give them much money to enjoy minor luxuries such as going out to dinner, or to a movie or to buy things for their home.

But, both still feel they are luckier than most, in that they can at least afford the luxury of owning their own home. Many others in similar situations cannot.

"I don't know how other families can do it," said Teri. "It seems to me it would be awfully hard for a young couple just starting out."

The Tondee's say the purchase of their new home has forced them to live on a budget. Even household projects, which they do themselves, can cost a lot of money.

"Unexpected expenses like car repairs and other emergencies just seem to keep cropping up," Tom explained.

"It's really frustrating when both people have to work to afford a home," he said. "We try to keep costs down by doing things ourselves, but even materials are expensive these days."

"We're happy here, though," said Teri. "This is the kind of house we've always wanted. It fits our lifestyle. A new home just wouldn't fit us."

"And besides," Tom joked, "most of them are just too expensive."

Mapping rapidly 'changing trends' in valley

Stories and photos by Bob Swetnam Jr.

As director of community development for the City of Chino, he has witnessed first-hand the residential development of one of the fastest growing communities in the U.S.

There were only 20,000 residents in Chino during the 1970 U.S. Census. Today the city's population is rapidly approaching the 40,000 mark.

In 1976, despite its relatively small population, Chino had more building activity than all but 11 cities throughout Southern California.

"We've seen a rapid increase in the rate of development in Chino and the rest of the West End during the last few years," Chiniaeff says.

The director attributes the local building boom to the fact that land — and thus housing — is considerably cheaper in the valley than land sold in Orange County or more urbanized areas of Los Angeles County.

"Land in Orange County generally sells for more than $100,000 an acre. In Chino it costs about $30,000 an acre.

"The homebuyer figures he can get more house for his money by buying in our area," he says. "He figures it's worth driving the extra 20 to 30 miles a day to work in Orange or Los Angeles counties where the houses are much more expensive."

Houses in the valley are generally $10,000 to $20,000 cheaper than those sold in the more urbanized centers, says Chiniaeff.

He says people's attitudes towards housing has been largely responsible for the high prices homebuyers are paying.

People want larger homes on larger lots than in the past, the director believes.

"Most of the people looking for new homes want something better than what they are used to," he says. "If they are young, they want a home as nice or nicer than their parents. If they are older and their families are grown, they want that house of their dreams."

Chiniaeff says there probably is some validity to claims by housing critics that strict governmental building regulations are partially responsible for the rapidly increasing price of homes.

But more importantly, he says, development standards led to better communities and reflect the wishes of residents as to the type of lifestyle they want in their city.

"We (city government) are only here to enforce the wishes of the community," he says.

But, Chiniaeff, an avid student of housing trends, believes attitudes on suburban life-styles are going to have to change in the future, because of the housing crisis.

"Many low- and middle-income families are being priced right out of the market on housing," he says. "We're going to have to see attitudes change. The idea of the 'dream house' mansion on the hill concept is just not going to work."

Chiniaeff envisions smaller homes and smaller lots to be the trend of the future. He also believes more innovative house construction and design methods are needed to bring down the cost of housing.

"Cities and other governmental agencies are going to have to start encouraging builders to experiment with new ways of constructing homes. They are also going to have to start considering housing assistance programs for the elderly and the poor. Too many people are already finding it difficult to afford decent housing," he says.

Chiniaeff and other housing experts believe innovative housing designs, modular construction, planned residential communities, higher densities and more open space are a neccessity to avert serious housing problems in the future.

The houses of tomorrow may be very different than what people are used to today, they believe.

The advantages, however, are that by utilizing new construction methods, new materials and new ideas, those who cannot presently afford adequate housing, might in the future find a decent place to live.

PEOPLE PLANNING

The valley has for several years been part of a huge building boom that has resulted in more than 33,000 new homes being built in the area. In Chino, which has become one of the fastest growing cities in California, city planners are careful to monitor growth in order to provide adequate governmental services to citizens. Above, Chino's director of community development, Dennis Chiniaeff, points out rapidly developing areas to a fellow city planner, Michael Vairin. The two, and others like them, work to make sure development is orderly.

Home construction is up despite high prices

Despite today's high priced housing market, new home construction in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties — particularly the local valley area — has skyrocketed in recent years.

More than 33,000 new homes have been built in the valley since 1970.

In the tri-communities area of Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda the total number of homes has nearly tripled — from 5,549 in 1970 to more than 15,000 today.

In Chino, Walnut, Diamond Bar, San Dimas, La Verne and Upland, similar trends are evident. The number of homes in many of those areas has nearly doubled since 1970.

Ontario, Claremont and Pomona have also begun to see signs of housing growth, with Ontario leading the way with an additional 5,000 dwelling units since 1970.

County and local officials see no slackening in the demand for new houses. In the West End of San Bernardino County rampant growth has been slowed until problems of inadequate sewage treatment facilities and overcrowding in schools are solved.

Despite the growth problems, however, several thousand new dwelling units — already approved for construction — are expected to be built in the West End during the next two years.

On the Los Angeles County side, overcrowding and sewage treatment problems have not been as severe. Thousands of new homes are also expected in those areas too.

A breakdown of housing growth by area between 1970 and 1977 follows. The statistics are the most recent available, but do not reflect additional growth known to have taken place since they were gathered.

Housing growth in valley since 1970

	Total number of dwelling units
Area	1970	1977
Pomona	28,864	29,765
Claremont	6,788	7,776
La Verne	4,135	6,235
San Dimas	4,375	7,000
Walnut	1,590	2,750
Diamond Bar	3,330	5,904
Chino	7,405	14,003
Ontario	20,723	25,273
Montclair	8,573	8,820
Upland	12,231	17,353
Alta Loma-Etiwanda	3,008	8,267
Cucamonga	1,481	2,945
Guasti	1,060	925
TOTAL	104,563	137,034

The purchase price for the average new home has climbed dramatically since 1970. Since the statistics below were tabulated in January of 1977, prices for homes have risen even further. A comparison by years of what it cost to build a new home follows:

	1970	1975	1976
CONSTRUCTION (labor and materials)	$17,580	$25,200	$29,000
IMPROVED LAND (including government fees)	$ 6,600	$12,450	$14,800
FINANCING	$ 2.040	$ 4,450	$ 5,000
OVERHEAD (profit and fixed costs)	$ 3,610	$ 5,690	$ 7,400
MISCELLANEOUS	$ 1.570	$ 2,610	$ 4,900
TOTAL	$31,400	$50,400	$61,100

Water bonds are necessary

The water bond issue on which Pomona Valley citizens in Los Angeles County communities will vote on Tuesday is not as complex as it sounds. That the election has been allowed to become controversial is regrettable, because the project is vital.

In informing oneself on the election, there are just two primary considerations involved: energy and quality water.

The water treatment plant and storage reservoir which the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District proposes to build north of Claremont would save thousands of dollars in electricity which are now being spent to pump the water uphill to foothill communities from an existing plant in Pomona. If voters can understand the economics of saving energy they are well on the way to understanding the necessity of this project.

Now to the issue of quality water. The fact that our local well water supply is running short cannot be refuted. Practically every water basin has been receding for the past decade or more, due to overpumping and not enough replenishment because of the drought. In order to use many of the local water basins now, the water must be blended with imported water to meet minimum health department standards.

The proposed program of the PVMWD provides for efficient use of imported water, delivered to all residents and other water users within the valley at minimum energy and transmission costs. It greatly improves water quality by reducing the tons of dissolved salts now imported from the Colorado River sources. It prepares the region for Feather River water to augment remaining Colorado River water supplies not lost to Arizona and other Colorado River states by a U.S. Supreme Court decision. This region is fortunate because both the Colorado River system and state water system pass through the upper reaches of the valley.

On balance, the water bond election proposed by the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District is both necessary and vital to the present and future of this region. It provides for equitable financing of facilities needed within each city and a flexible method of payment for both the water facilities to be constructed and the water used.

True, Pomona does have an adequate supply of water at the present time so that its reliance on an expanded and more efficient system is not as great as are neighboring communities which are not so fortunate. But, since the repayment of the water bonds will be asssessed according to each community's use of imported water, the projected cost to Pomona householders is minimal compared to surrounding areas. Also, the project is good insurance for Pomona in the event that the drought years continue.

It would be ironic indeed if this area, blessed with main water feeder systems, would allow itself to be bypassed because it did not prepare itself to use its share of the water it is already paying for.

The Progress Bulletin, after carefully analyzing all factors, strongly urges a YES vote on the bonds on Tuesday.

Lance's law

Whatever else happens to Bert Lance, the former director of the Office of Management and Budget, he ought to be remembered for his advice to the federal establishment: if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

A perfect example of how easy it is to violate that dictum for the noblest of purposes is illustrated by a true story making the rounds of the academic community.

University of Missouri President James C. Olson entered an elevator with a student in a wheelchair recently. The student looked around in vain for the buttons and asked where they were.

Olson replied that Department of Health, Education and Welfare regulations required specifically that for the convenience of people in wheelchairs, the university must place the button panel on the back wall of new elevators — at some considerable expense. The incredulous student informed the president that nobody in a wheelchair ever enters an elevator front first. They back in.

Unfortunately, nobody in Washington ever thought to ask a handicapped person about that.

Think on these things

The simplest remedies can heal our deepest ills. A smile — someone's whistle, the sound of birdsong — the knowledge that all's well with someone we love.

How easy we are to please when we're content within ourselves and can see and hear these simple things — and how unreasonable we are when we blow something clear out of proportion and make ourselves sick in the process.

A choice is something we don't always believe is possible — but, nine times out of ten we have that choice of whether to take things in our stride — or explode. It has been known to take a little of each before we can learn to be contented, or know what really counts.

Pro and con on water bonds

Dear Editor:

Two years ago we voted against an expensive Pomona Valley Municipal Water District water project. Recent water history gives us no reason to change our minds. The severe drought conditions throughout the state should not be incentive to increase our dependence on Northern California water. Rather, the drought should herald an era of careful use and recharge of local water supplies, of pricing policies that encourage conservation and of funding water projects through revenue bonds. The general obligation bonds to be sold for this project hide a significant water cost in the property tax bill and, therefore, may encourage greater water consumption.

Two years ago many of us urged PVMWD to finance a thorough, professional study of causes and solutions to the nitrate problem existing in some of our wells. We called for a conservation plan before the district's peak summer water use committed us to pay for a much larger part of the facility than our total percentage of water use would warrant. We hoped for a thorough examination of the developing technology in the management and utilization of natural groundwater basins for storage, recharge and supply — before we greatly increase our dependence on imported sources.

Instead, our tax money has been spent on the recent slick brochures emphasizing drought and followed up by an expensive telephone campaign. The truth, of course, is that the proposed project cannot create water supply! Let's vote NO again and demand that our public agencies put their money and time in developing policies, projects and funding approaches that will do something to meet our future water needs.

Charlene Martin
Claremont

Dear Editor:

Let's do it right this time. I refer to the water system serving our valley, and the opportunity to make it more functional and adequate.

In the past Pomona Valley has failed to act when given a chance to augment its water supply. In 1936, when the Metropolitan Water District tried to persuade our residents to join in bringing Colorado River water to Southern California, well-intentioned but uninformed leaders refused to accept the invitation and scoffed at the idea that we needed more water. They said that our wells and the flow of water from the canyons would be adequate for our needs.

This proved to be erroneous thinking. Water levels receded and 10 years later some of those same leaders started urging us to join MWD to get additional water. This was difficult to do. It took lots of pressure to persuade the district to accept us, even though we paid for our participation on the basis of original and subsequent costs: assessments, taxes and interest.

By delaying our joining the MWD, we did our valley a great disservice, for not only did it cost a great deal more, but water lines and the treatment plant were installed on the basis that our valley would not be served. Therefore it has not been possible for us residents to enjoy the benefits of treated and soft water from the La Verne (Weymouth) plant.

The bond issue to be voted on at the polls on Tuesday will overcome this great deficiency and will also increase capacity as well as operating efficiency. Distribution to all parts of the valley will be by gravity flow, without paying money to pump it to its destination.

The cost is minimal: only $200,000 for Pomona, $2,800,000 for La Verne, $3,500,000 for Claremont, etc. The total of all nine participating areas adds up to $26,000,000 being voted on. The saving in soap alone, plus reduced costs of operations, would make up for the small amount each user would be assessed.

Again I say, "Let's do it right this time." Go to the polls Tuesday and vote for improved water.

Clem Neibel
La Verne

Dear Editor:

Several things are disturbing about the role and position of the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District in Tuesday's water bond election.

First of all, why is the PVMWD, which takes a strong position on one side of this issue, conducting the election? One result of PVMWD's control shows up in the sample ballot, mailed out to all water district voters. Included in it is the analysis of the ballot measure, which should be an objective and impartial statement by a neutral analyst; but it was submitted by PVMWD's own district counsel, who shows his bias by calling the facilities the bond would support "useful and necessary."

PVMWD's argument in favor of the ballot measure is also disturbing. Giving no evidence and no reasons whatsoever, it asserts that water storage and transportation are "badly needed." It then jumps to scare tactics, claiming that lack of water means loss of jobs, etc. For one thing, supplying storage and transportation, which is what the bond measure would fund, is not the same thing as supplying water. But we don't need the treatment facilities because the existing Weymouth Plant normally operates below capacity. And as for the water, in the Oct. 24 Progress Bulletin, Stan Kawa, manager of the PVMWD, admitted that ample water exists in the district. So the ballot argument is false. By focusing the rest of its statement on how big a system to build and how it should be financed, PVMWD throws up a smoke screen. It never justifies the need for the project in the first place.

Another objection to the way the PVMWD has conducted itself in this election campaign is its attempt to keep a legitimate "con" argument by the League of Women Voters off the ballot statement. The PVMWD hoped to substitute a bogus argument by one of its own board members who had previously seconded the motion to support the bond measure. Only when faced with a legal suit by the League of Women Voters did the PVMWD back down.

We hope that voters will see through the feeble arguments of the PVMWD and will reject this expensive and unjustifiable measure.

Nixon's attempted coup

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most audacious of the Watergate schemes was Richard Nixon's attempt to Nixonize the federal bureaucracy and bring it under his tight, personal control. Without the consent of Congress, he intended to increase the power of the presidency in a revolutionary way.

If he had been able to pull it off, it would have amounted almost to a coup against our existing form of government. He succeeded to a degree in subverting the Civil Service Commission, which is supposed to protect the professional bureaucracy from political encroachment.

The story of Nixon's attempt coup has never been fully told and the conspirators have never been held accountable. In fact, the commission is still populated at its upper levels by officials who helped him subvert the civil service system. Here are the details:

Richard Nixon had an intense distrust of the millions who compose the permanent government. He often complained that the federal bureaucracy was dominated by "liberals" and "academics." He would confide to intimates that a "Jewish cabal" had taken over this office or that agency. He issued orders that no more "Ivy Leaguers" should be appointed to high positions.

Nixon's denigration of the civil service system led the White House to begin a quiet political purge. Those who were considered unreliable were shunted into obscure jobs and replaced by people with Nixon credentials. The White House also set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of new applicants for government jobs.

This subversion of the regular institutions of government, of course, was conducted in the utmost secrecy. Even in the backrooms of the White House, Nixon aides were careful not to refer to it in political terms. Admonished the White House hatchetman in charge of the purge, Fred Malek: "I propose we stop calling it 'politicizing the executive branch' and instead call it something like strengthening the government's responsiveness." The euphemism stuck and the operation became known thereafter as the Responsiveness Program.

By executive decree, President Nixon also sought to create around himself a super-cabinet of loyal aides who would have total power over the bureaucracy. They would force his policies upon the government through White House agents who would be installed in every department.

Nixon, meanwhile, intended to encapsulate himself from unnecessary turmoil, devote his energies to formulating policies and deal regularly only with those select few who were on his personal wave length. He would leave it to them to enforce his edicts through a political system that would turn the bureaucracy into an unquestioning, subservient arm of the White House.

But he found out that a seething enterprise like the federal government could not be compartmentalized, cordoned off and led from a glass bubble. He left behind, nevertheless, civil service officials who not only supported his power play but who allegedly destroyed documents to prevent Congress from learning of the abuses.

The transition team, which helped turn over the reins of government to Jimmy Carter, was sharply critical of several career people at the Civil Service Commission. Although the transition papers have been kept secret, inside sources say the final report pointed an accusatory finger, for example, at John Cole.

He heads the powerful Bureau of Personnel Management Evaluation, which has the authority to examine the personnel practices of any government agency. Yet despite the critical evaluation of his own performance, Cole is still evaluating others. Furthermore, the commission has no plans to transfer him.

This has upset Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who has been keeping a watchful congressional eye on the commission for years. He has written a stinging, secret letter to President Carter calling for the removal not only of Cole but of the executive director, Ray Jacobson.

Declares the letter: "Suspending the authority of (Jacobson and Cole) is essential. Until questions of document destruction and concealment of the commission's role in violating the merit system are answered, these individuals should not be allowed to exercise authority."

Some of the past abuses may yet wind up in court. Congressional critics complain that the Justice Department has been less than vigorous about investigating these excesses of the Nixon era. But Civil Service Chairman Alan Campbell says he was assured by high Justice officials only last week that the investigation is still active.

Feudin' in New Hampshire

MANCHESTER, N.H. (NEA) — New Hampshire and the nation will have to look elsewhere for entertainment next year.

The best political brawl on the horizon has been called on account of cold feet. GOP Gov. Meldrim Thomson can't quite bring himself to climb into the ring with Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., his arch enemy.

"There's nothing I would like better. I lie awake thinking about it some nights," says the only governor in America who makes Ronald Reagan look like a left-winger.

"But I can do more good in my present position."

That's what they all say, of course, when they duck a fight. The real reason is a pragmatic political assessment. A secret poll by Robert Tester, the Republican Party's top pollster, shows McIntyre would whomp Thomson in a Senate race.

Politicians elsewhere, including many Republicans, think Thomson is the sort who shouldn't be permitted to have sharp objects. But the three-term New Hampshire governor is crazy like a fox when his own political neck is on the line.

Thomson and McIntyre loathe each other. It is not surprising; they couldn't be more different in personality, background and ideology.

McIntyre, a New Hampshire native who has served in the Senate since 1962, is a low-profile politician with a moderate-to-liberal voting record. In one of the few states where Republicans still hold a wide edge in voter registration, he has won reelection handily over the years despite furious opposition from William Loeb, ultraconservative publisher of the Manchester Union Leader, the only newspaper with statewide circulation.

Thomson, on the other hand, is a transplanted Georgian who was virtually created by Loeb, politically speaking. He once ran for governor as an American Party candidate before winning, as a Republican, in 1972.

His antics as governor, during three two-year terms, have drawn widespread national attention. In fact, his reputation for bizarre conduct is such that when he went to the Republican National Convention last year to support Reagan's nomination, the Reagan forces assigned a watchdog codenamed "The Muzzle" to keep Thomson under wraps.

One of Thomson's pet stunts is lowering the state house flags to half-mast whenever he doesn't like something done in Washington (which is nearly all the time). He did it when President Carter proclaimed amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders, and again when the Panama Canal treaties were signed.

Thomson is a big cheese in the Conservative Caucus, a national pressure group, and serves as "secretary of state" in the group's "shadow cabinet." The Panama Canal issue is his favorite hobby horse right now, and he is riding McIntyre about it incessantly.

A few weeks ago, the governor threatened to reconsider his renunciation of the Senate race if McIntyre — presently undecided on the canal issue — should vote for the treaties.

"Mr. Loeb and Mr. Thomson and the Conservative Caucus can take their threats and run them up and down the governor's flagpole," replied McIntyre.

The senator and other New Hampshire Democrats wish Thomson would carry out his threat and run against McIntyre next year. They are confident they could beat him, and would love to get him out of the governor's office.

But McIntyre will have to find some other way to fire up his troops. And Thomson will no doubt be reelected once more. New Hampshire voters may not approve of his antics all the time, nor consider him respectable enough for the U.S. Senate, but they love his rock-solid resistance to raising taxes.

New Hampshire is the only state in the union without either an income tax or a sales tax, and Thomson crusades on a pledge to keep it that way. State and local government services are miserable, but the voters don't seem to mind.

When the dust settles after next year's elections, the chances are excellent that McIntyre and Thomson will be right where they are today — hurling insults long distance, between Washington and Concord.

Best to check that furnace

DEAR DR. MILLER: It's Pert, my canary. He's been acting poorly ever since I started using this new gas heater. I remember reading about how easily canaries can be poisoned by gas. Do you suppose there is a connection? Should I have the furnace checked? — W.R.

DEAR W.R.: Since Pert's poorly, it would be best to have the furnace checked for leaks. Your canary's condition could be caused by something entirely unrelated. Conversely, canaries are very susceptible to gas — and such fumes could endanger other pets and humans, too.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Beautiful eyes are the most striking feature of my Siamese. But they do strange things. Part of the time they bounce back and forth very rapidly, and it's quite startling when you notice it. It doesn't seem to bother her, as far as I can tell. Does it have to be treated? — K.F.

DEAR K.F.: No, it doesn't have to be, which is fortunate because there isn't any treatment for nystigymus in a Siamese anyway. This rapid horizontal eye movement doesn't bother the cat and is peculiar to some animals within this breed. (Some severe brain and ear infections may cause a somewhat similar, though slower, eye movement in an affected dog or cat. This condition does, of course, require immediate treatment.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our veterinarian wants to operate on our old dog. He admits the operation is dangerous but says it is the best chance for Fluffy. We have no reason not to take his advice but we are, frankly, scared to death of surgery ourselves and would rather do anything else than put her through this. Would it be unfair to our doctor, whom we do trust, to ask for a second opinion as to whether the surgery has to be done? — N.C.

DEAR N.C.: When, for whatever reason, you have difficulty accepting your own veterinarian's advice, seeking a second opinion is a logical step. Your own veterinarian should, of course, be informed of your concern so he can either help you in choosing another doctor for such an examination or, at the very least, provide the other doctor with his findings regarding Fluffy's condition. Don't procrastinate, however. If surgery is the answer, the sooner it is done (in most cases), the better its chances for success.

Astrographs

By Bernice Bede Osol
For Monday Nov. 7, 1977
Your Birthday, Nov. 7, 1977

Your past actions have won some very valuable allies. These people may not have openly supported you previously, but they willcoming year.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you're aiming for something important today, keep your ideas to yourself. Reveal your plan at the last possible minute for best results. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Circuitous procedures may work today where a frontal attack won't. If you can't go over something, go around it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The possibility of outdistancing your opposition today is very keen. The reason is, you possess a second effort that others lack.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Left to your own devices today, you will not be very productive. You need an active, energetic companion to spur you on.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In business today, your position is far stronger than you may appreciate. Don't take the first offer. Do some negotiating.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Enterprising associates could be beneficial to you today. You stand to profit through people who are proven winners.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Accelerate your pace today work wise. Develop an ambitious time schedule. Do your best to adhere to it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You are where the action is today. You make things hum and could even turn a dull meeting into something lively and interesting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In things personally gainful, you are quite clever today. This, coupled with an innate sense of timing, gives you a real advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you may be lax in matters where only you are involved, be bold and forceful in regard to the interests of those under your wing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You've got some clever ideas in matters that could add to your resources, but be alert. Things could develop much faster than you think.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Pennies have a way of adding up to something far larger for you today. Don't be perturbed if early returns are smaller than expected.

Libber's letter fit to print

Dear Ann: I must respond to "California Pig" — the chauvinist louse who said Women's Libbers are largely responsible for the increase in male impotency.

Dear Pig:

I'm tired of being your scapegoat. We've been blamed for the rise in unemployment, the increase in crime, homosexuality — and now it's male impotence. Perhaps you've had problems with one woman. Well, too bad. Everybody has problems with somebody at one time or another.

You say "the Libbers" don't WANT a man to protect them. Do you honestly think men are protecting women today? From what?

Was I protected by a man when he raped me? Was I protected by a man when he denied me an abortion for an unwanted child? Was I protected by a man when he refused to give me a job because he thought women should stay home and do the cooking and cleaning?

Thanks, Pig, but we don't need your "protection." It's high time you stopped blaming women for your own inability to function as an adult. For years you blamed your mother — and now your sweetheart or wife is supposed to take the rap for your immaturity. Grow up or shut up! — Heard that Song Before

Dear Heard: Many "Libbers" wrote to express the same sentiments but your letter was one of the few that was printable. Have a good day!

Dear Ann Landers: You have stated many times that the purpose of your column is to educate people. This letter is on behalf of those of us who handle money.

I work for a large western bank and handle anywhere between $7,000 and $15,000 a day. Almost everyone thinks that the extra $10 or $20 they get when someone makes a mistake will not hurt a large corporation or bank. They are right. It won't — but it can sure hurt a teller or a cashier. What people don't realize is that it goes against his (or her) record and could cost a person his job.

I am appealing to your readers to please — if you get more money than you are entitled to — return it. Not only will your honesty re-affirm the cashier's faith in humanity but it might even save his job. — We All Make Mistakes

Dear Mistakes: Here's your letter — but you left out the most important benefit of all — self-esteem. Returning money when you have been overpaid gives you a good feeling about yourself. And people who feel good about themselves are a joy to all mankind.

Dear Ann Landers: I received in the mail yesterday two invitations — both for dinner parties on the same evening.

I like one of these couples better than the other but my husband says we should divide the time — go to one for cocktails and explain that we have an obligation to go elsewhere for dinner. He feels in this way we will at least have made an appearance at the first party which is better than a turn-down. (I should tell you the two hostesses are not fond of each other.)

I think we should accept the invitation from the woman I feel closest to and not try to make both affairs. What do you say? — Split Personalities

Dear Persons: Your husband's idea is a good one. The hostess will probably feel better if you come by for cocktails than if you give her a negative response.

Unlimited excuses at hand

When it comes to homework, educators have heard every excuse in the book.

"My mother wrapped the garbage in it."

"I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out."

"My little brother pee-ed on it."

The excuses often showed more imagination than the assignments turned in and invariably involved a third party who was totally responsible for their deficiency.

This fall, 850,000 women over 35 are returning to the classrooms as students. They're not entering the academic world empty-handed. Thanks to their children, they have a couple of years' supply of excuses. Only a few words have to be changed to get them off the hook.

"I was going to do my homework last night, but my husband put me to bed early."

"My paper was typed neatly and ready to turn in when my brother spilled his martini all over it at the breakfast table."

"I had every intention of going to the library, but I couldn't find my car keys."

"My children were hanging on the phone all night and I couldn't call my best friend and get the assignment."

"I didn't feel well. I went into false labor 10 months early."

"I picked the same topic every other person in the class picked . . . The Evolution of Storm Doors in the Ming Dynasty . . . and all the books were out."

"Our dog is being paper trained . . . you may have noticed."

"I was absent yesterday because I was waiting for the washer repairman and didn't know you had made an assignment."

"Do you think just because this assignment is done in yellow crayon, my kids did it for me?"

"My husband wrapped his gum in it."

As the child of one of my best friends told his Mother at breakfast one morning, "You just tell your teacher we got home late last night and we felt your sleep was more important to your health than that stupid assignment."

That's easy for him to say. He's not a 50-year-old second-semester Freshman.

Dr. Lamb

Scant chance of pregnancy

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband and I get into arguments over whether or not I can become pregnant. He says no and I'm afraid I may still become pregnant.

I am not taking the pill and am 56 years old. I haven't had my period in more than three years but I believe I am still going through the change as I get very nervous at times and still get estrogen shots. How long must I get shots? It's over 18 years now.

DEAR READER — If you get pregnant you are likely to set a new record. Published accounts say that the oldest woman to have a child was 56 at the time of the birth. Some of my readers have brought to my attention at least two instances of women who were 57 who gave birth. Since you must be past your 56th birthdate and it will take nine months to have a child you will be at the top of the record if you achieve that rare distinction.

Many doctors believe that if a woman in her 50s goes through the menopause and doesn't menstruate for one year she is not likely to get pregnant. Others prefer to wait two years after menstruation has stopped before saying that a woman is no longer fertile.

The symptoms you have may not be from menopause. It is very likely that your ovaries have not been functional for nearly all of the three years since you have stopped menstruating. There is a lot of the confusion about what symptoms are caused by menopause. Put simply, a lot of people get nervous who are not going through the change of life, including men.

To give you a better understanding of the change in life and what symptoms it really causes I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Whether or not a woman needs estrogen after menopause is an individual matter. Some women produce enough female hormones from the adrenal gland to get along quite well and others do not. Only an examination by your physician can answer the question of whether or not you need it.

For women who need estrogen support it is really replacement hormone therapy to help do part of what the ovaries used to do. In these women the female hormones help to prevent changes in the vagina cells that cause dryness and may lead to chronic infections. The hormones are specific for controlling hot flashes caused by lack of estrogen.

There is some evidence that adequate amounts of estrogen help to protect against ostgoporosis (dissolving bones) but less indication that they stop the process once it has begun.

There are good studies that show that women taking female hormones after the ovaries stop functioning, or have been removed, have a much lower death rate from a variety of medical conditions, and live healthier and happier lives. Women who take estrogen after the menopause should have careful regular medical examinations to be certain there is no evidence of breast cancer and there are no signs of malignancy of the uterus if a hysterectomy has not been done.

What people say

"(Jogging) is something you can do every day, you don't have to reserve a court or get up a game. Running requires no special skills. And you have that wonderful feeling of health. And somebody said it was often more beneficial to jog around the psychiatrist's building than to enter . . . It's cheaper than a couch."

—Linda Schreiber, one of the women who ran last week's New York City Marathon.

"Democracy is pluralism, and when you've emerged from a dictatorship as we did, and the people here in Greece and in Spain, you have no trouble recognizing where it exists and where it does not."

—Prime Minister Mario Soares of Portugal, at a recent symposium on the future of democracy in Athens.

Today's hand was played 20 years ago in the last quarter of an important team match.

You are in seven spades and it is a cinch to see that your opponents would also be there.

Your team was well behind at the three-quarter mark and you realize that your only chance to win will be to make seven while your opposite team goes down.

The hand is going to depend on taking a successful heart finesse and when you get around to it you have managed to eliminate everything but hearts and East has discarded one. Hence, he started with four — West with three — so the odds are slightly in favor of playing East for her ladyship.

Pedro Cabral of New York decided after long thought that the other South would take the percentage play. He played West for the queen and made the grand slam.

Now, what would you do if you were at the other table and only wanted to make the same play that Pedro made.

The other South took the percentage play, lost the slam, but still won the match by a very small margin.

A Michigan reader wants to know what the four-spade bid means in the partnership sequence: one diamond, one spade, four spades.

Most experts play it as showing the same 18 or 19 points in support of spades as standard bidders do, but add the extra proviso that their hand does not include a singleton or void.

Note it claimed in print that dogs can't see television. They can pick up the light patterns and notice the motion, but they can't focus well enough to make out the nature of the action, it's contended. Interesting, if true.

Q. "Ask your Love and War man what it suggests to him that I sometimes get a nosebleed while engaged in that thing he calls physical romance?"

A. Only that you've either got high blood pressure or a fighting partner.

Q. "Can eels crawl on land like snakes?"

A. One sort can, anyway. Anguilla rostrata is its nomenclature. Been known to wiggle over moist ground as far as three miles.

Q. "What's 'witch hazel'?"

A. A shrub with pliant branches that blooms in the fall. Also, an alcoholic lotion made from witch hazel bark. The name, incidentally, came from the fact that the shrub's branches were supposed to be used as witching rods by the oldtime water finders. These were the cunning characters who would point out to you for a fee the best place to dig your well.

'I love you' is vital message

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

I received a phone call the other day that broke in on a pressure-filled day in a very special way. My friend asked, "Do you have a minute?" I said, rather quickly, "Yes . . . just a minute?"

"Yes," my friend answered. "I was just thinking of you and wanted to tell you that you are very special, and that I love you." Wow! I felt the tension flow out of me. I pulled up a chair and sat down as a feeling of happiness came over me. This loving surprise, deeply appreciated, was savored for what turned out to be several minutes.

"I love you." We need to hear it and we need to say it. This is not something to be said only during the romantic period of courting, but it should be said to one another through all of the living and sharing of life's ups and downs. Sharing love — whether between parent and child, husband and wife, neighbors or friends, is our greatest source of happiness.

Love is our most potent resource. Yet, many are uncomfortable communicating loving feelings. Why is this so difficult for some?

Psychological research on love has revealed that a lack of love in childhood can have a devastating effect on a person's ability to give and receive love in later life. Children who receive little love value love less as adults.

People have difficulty telling another, "I love you," for many reasons. Lack of self-confidence and natural shyness are two explanations I frequently hear. Fear of being seen as soft or feminine is the feeling some men have. A major cause that holds a large number of people back from saying, "I love you," is the fear of being rejected.

Love relates closely to happiness in marriage, in contacts with family and friends and even on the job. Satisfaction in life and a happy marriage seem closely related.

Nearly every marriage provides the opportunity for a man and woman to place the happiness, growth and fulfillment of the other as equal to his own. Taking this opportunity . . . taking this chance . . . is the act of love. Using this most important resource in our lives brings nourishment. It isn't whether giving love brings love back. Giving love makes us feel more alive, more secure — more complete. Giving love is a gift I give myself.

Housing prices skyrocket in just a few short years—

reasonably inexpensive in comparison with Orange County or Los Angeles County.

He said homebuyers can save several thousand dollars on their purchases by coming to the valley.

While many believe it is speculators and investment buyers who are forcing the price of housing up, Murphy says there are several factors causing what he expects this year to be a 25 percent increase in the average cost of a home.

Murphy says the biggest proportion of home buyers in the area today are young couples who are buying their first home.

Most of the young couples, he says, are forced to have two incomes to afford a home.

He believes the trend may lead to an influx of foreclosures on some homes when — due to emergencies — one of the spouses will have to quit his or her job.

"Some people are buying a lot more house than they need and are paying more than they can really afford," he explains.

"Too many people making the purchase of a home dependant on two family incomes can cause problems."

The real estate expert says another reason for the upsurge the number of homes being sold and bought are that older couples — who because their homes have increased in value — are able to use equity to buy a more expensive house.

Such a move, he believes, results in increased market activity.

"The person who is buying a new home is usually selling a used one," he says.

Investor-speculators are also an influence, he says, but their involvement in the market has fallen off in recent months.

According to statistics tabulated by the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, the average price of a home in Pomona rose from $23,155 in 1975 to $32,949 as of September of this year.

In Claremont, home prices rose from an average of $43,006 to $62,954; in La Verne, from $36,306 to $52,601.

The historical rate of inflation for housing has been about 6 to 8 percent a year, said Murphy. During the last 12 months, housing prices in the Pomona Valley have escalated by 25 percent.

But Murphy believes the inflationary rate will have to to slow before too long, or no one is going to be able to afford a house.

"It can't continue," he said. "It's impossible for housing prices to continue increasing at a 25 percent rate. It's just going to outstrip itself," he said.

Murphy believes government has been largely to blame for the rapid increases in the cost of housing and his comments seem to be supported by area builders.

Ken Willis, a spokesman for the Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association (BIA), says local government has been increasing the prices of homes over the years by tacking on fees for many public works projects.

A comparison of housing cost statistics provided by the Construction Industry Research Board, located in Los Angeles, indicate that government fees and permits for houses are growing at a much faster rate than prices for other aspects of building.

According to Willis, government fees can add $2,000 to the price of an average sized, 1,600-square-foot home.

Willis believes builders are being used as a scapegoat by local government that gives "politicians and bureaucrats" the ability to raise funds for government projects without going to voters.

Willis says government charges on each home can end up costing an individual homeowner over $5,000 when interest charges and other factors are considered.

Other factors influencing the price of homes have been increases in labor and raw material costs.

Wood alone has gone up in price nearly $1,500 for the average home recently.

Interest rates have also climbed significantly, adding to the overall builder's cost for a home and the individual homeowner's mortgage payments.

Builders, however, generally believe the housing market to be an indicator of the nation's economic health. As long as homes are being built and sold, the economy of the U.S. generally shows signs of improving, says Willis.

Man intrigued by the unknown

Course taught by minister on 'Apocalypse' is popular

DETROIT (AP) — Hal Blay doesn't necessarily think "The End Is Near," but he has some idea what it's going to be like when it comes.

What's more, people are paying good money to hear his views.

Every Tuesday at a little past noon, Blay's classroom begins to fill with students taking his Humanities course through Wayne State University's College of Lifelong Learning. The title of the course is "Apocalypse: The End of the World."

Blay got the idea while doing research for other adult education courses he has taught, which studied the Bible as literature or probed Van Daniken's "Chariot of the Gods."

All of the courses have been filled to capacity, said Blay, a cherubic, 43-year-old, ordained Lutheran minister who recently became pastor of a congregation, relegating his teaching to part-time.

"I think mankind has always been interested in the unknown," he said. "He has always been a little afraid of it because of the fact that it is unknown."

He said he also thought recent occult movies like "The Exorcist" and sci-fi hits like "Star Wars" and "Logan's Run" have heightened the general interest in the unknown.

"I think the majority of mankind is rather insecure," Blay said. "And I think this (studying) might give mankind a sense of security in that these may not be actualities, in terms of the future, but they're definite 'maybes.'"

Blay does not approach his students as a prophet or guru. Rather, he introduces what has been written and lets the students make up their own minds.

"My idea is not to influence people, but to present the different concepts," he said.

Privately, however, Blay said he felt that in the next 150 years the world was "going to be altered almost beyond recognition or else plunged back in time, so that it's still going to be altered, because man in his stupidity decided to destroy himself.

"It could occur any time," he insisted. "It could happen tomorrow."

Blay defines apocalypse as a "gigantic change in the world — at least civilization as we know it."

He said he was certain the end would be violent and that many would not survive it.

"It could be overnight or an ongoing thing that could take decades, perhaps even centuries — which I should rather doubt," he explained. "If it is an ongoing thing, we could be witnessing our own apocalypse now."

He insists, however, that some will survive and mankind will prevail.

"Modern man is looking for whatever certainties he can find in a very uncertain world," Blay said. "And there are such things in terms of apocalypse — regardless of what that turns out to be. Nobody can tell me, for example, that a Third World War would not be apocalyptic. Anybody who said it could be 'limited' is insane."

Sedentary Americans?

BOSTON (AP) — Many Americans just may be leading such sedentary lives that they are "virtually motionless," moving about little more than if they remained in bed 24 hours a day, Dr. William Kannel, director of the famed Framingham Heart Study, said here recently.

Kannel said 16 percent of men and 21 percent of women in a group studied in Framingham achieved activity scores of 29 or less. He said that spending 24 hours in bed rates a score of 24.

Now known as the Boston University-Framingham Heart Study, the project has involved studying several thousand Framingham residents for 27 years.

Kannel told a symposium on leisure time sponsored by the Massachusetts Medical Society that even in the group scoring the highest levels of activity, with scores higher than 36, few would qualify for a high level of physical fitness.

Despite the lack of scientific evidence on exact relationships between activity and fitness, he said, "it is of interest that the greater the dose of those sedentary traits, the greater the risk of cardivascular disease."

He's seeking an answer for 'low vision'

Valley man 'intrigued' by life helping people see better

Lawrence E. Gallarini of Alta Loma was a sophomore in high school when he first stumbled onto the world of optometry.

"My math teacher couldn't understand why I couldn't do my schoolwork, until he realized I couldn't see the chalkboard," he recalls.

"The school nurse would write notes to my parents suggesting I see an eye doctor, and I kept throwing them away. My vision was about 10/200."

"Then I finally got glasses, and saw 20/20 for the first time. I saw things I had never known existed. That's when I decided to go into optometry and help others see."

With that goal firmly in mind, he became Dr. Gallarini in 1967, graduating from the Los Angeles College of Optometry.

At that time little help was available to patients with low vision, a subject which greatly intrigued Dr: Gallarini as a student. Many patients with low vision were classified as legally blind, meaning that their best vision even with corrective lenses in 20/200 or worse.

After serving a three-year hitch as a Navy optometrist, Dr. Gallarini's interest in low vision was rekindled when he returned to the optometry college for further accreditation. Based on his qualifications and interest, he was one of seven optometrists asked to help staff a low vision center. Dr. Gallarini has taught low vision at the Southern California College of Optometry (formerly Los Angeles College of Optometry) in Fullerton since then. He also sees low vision patients in his private practice in Ontario.

His work in low vision and other areas of optometry earned Dr. Gallarini the title of Young Optometrist of the Year in 1974 from the California Optometric Association.

As chairman of the association's department of education and research, Dr. Gallarini is concerned with educating optometrists on the various new techniques available to them.

According to him, help is available to those whose visual loss is so great they cannot read a newspaper or letter.

"That doesn't mean they can't see, because their eyes still function. They just can't see as well, almost as if they were seeing through a dirty windshield.

"Yet their visual demands are the same as those who have normal eyesight," he asserts.

The 35-year-old optometrist says that studies have shown that about 75 percent of those with low vision problems can actually be helped. The difficulty, he states, is getting these patients to seek help, since in many cases they have been told there is no hope for normal seeing.

"Some people tend to give up when they acquire a visual loss," he says. "We try to show them they can indeed see with the help of low vision devices."

These devices range from simple hand magnifiers to closed-circuit TV systems, but most of them can easily be fitted onto a pair of glasses. Bioptic telescopic lenses, similar in principle to bifocal glasses, allow the patient to fucus on a near distance with one part of the lens and on a far range with the other. Telescopic lenses are also available for people whose work does not allow them to bring a device close to the material they wish to see.

"Using a low vision device demands concentration, for many times patients must bring the reading material up very close to the special lens, but generally patients learn to accept these aids," he asserts. "If we can help restore their vision through these devices, then for many we have restored their privacy, for now they can read their own letters and balance their own checkbooks."

The final decision of whether to prescribe a device or not always lies with the patients, says Dr. Gallarini. "We can only give them options, and perhaps even lend them a device so they can test it out, but they must decide whether they want to see again or not."

Dr. Gallarini is also involved in vision therapy, which attempts to get patients to use both eyes to see. "The optometry field has progressed considerably in the last 10 years. We used to check for clear vision only; now we are testing for efficient eyesight. Just because you see clearly doesn't necessarily mean your eyesight is functioning as well as it can.

"We have always tested for eye muscle positioning, but now we are actually helping patients exercise a lazy eye so that they can develop binocular, or two-eyed vision," he says.

"For example, a child who keeps bumping into things might be enjoying good, clear vision, yet he might be looking down a tunnel, unaware of any peripheral sights.

"In this case, the child has never learned to use his side vision," says Dr. Gallarini.

"Many of us discover our eye skills through our environment and hold onto them, while others don't. By listening and studying their actions, we can spot the problem, and through exercises help these patients refine their awareness of the world."

Irony seen in bit of political symbolism

Ancestor of religious 'dissident' envoy to England with a mission

EDITOR'S NOTE — For 14 years Kingman Brewster presided over Yale University. Now he is a diplomat with a mission. He told about it in an interview with AP Diplomatic Correspondent Arthur L. Gavshon.

By Arthur L. Gavshon
AP Diplomatic Corr.

LONDON (AP) — William Brewster sailed to Plymouth, Mass., aboard the Mayflower in 1620 vowing with 100 other dissident fellow Pilgrims to recover the religious freedoms they began losing in the England of Queen Elizabeth II.

Today, the descendant of that refugee, Kingman Brewster, is the U.S. ambassador to the Court of Elizabeth II.

The irony of that bit of political symbolism has not escaped the erudite envoy, former president of Yale University, who, soon after presenting his letters of credence last spring, was quoted by a British interviewer as saying: "It is satisfying for the descendant of a dissident refugee from Elizabeth I to present his credentials to Elizabeth II."

Of course, Elizabeth I had been dead 17 years by the time the Mayflower sailed. But even while she was alive, the Pilgrims felt they were being persecuted to the point that they began breaking away from the Church of England and setting up their own Congressional houses of worship.

Brewster's ancestor William may well have taken pride in the emphasis the ambassador of today places on the need to preserve not only the liberties but also the unity of the English-speaking world.

"The American political experiment sprang from English values, traditions and institutions," the ambassador told The Associated Press in an interview. "Indeed it was to vindicate the rights of Englishmen that the Colonies, in exasperation, reluctantly rebelled."

"The rights of Englishmen" spelled out by the 17th century Pilgrims broadly resemble those standards of human dignity and freedom which President Carter would like all nations to respect.

Brewster had been talking about the importance of those rights to the English-speaking world long before Carter was elected. In the 1975 Churchill Lecture he voiced his conviction: "It is our first obligation to see that 'the rights of Englishmen' are not lost, that they are protected and nurtured in their natural home."

That "natural home" to him is North America, Britain itself and Australia, which he said provides "a global strategic base" from which the English-speaking peoples could defend their principles against any assailant.

It was more than a matter of political identification that seemed to impel Carter to pluck Brewster from the post he had held at Yale since 1963 in order to rekindle as ambassador here the "special British-American relationship" to which both say they are devoted.

"At Yale, Brewster had engaged in the sort of activities that Carter would almost surely have endorsed. He led an anti-Vietnam war demonstration to Washington. He was influential in having more women, more blacks, more minority elements in the university. Through the 1960s he was a force for moderation when student passions ran high.

Brewster's structured, sometimes serious, often witty speeches already have attracted the attention of many Britons in England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, where he made a point of becoming visible soon after settling in.

In the interview the 58-yearold former Navy pilot discussed the sunnier outlook Britain faces after decades of economic travail; popular yearnings for peace in northern Ireland; the way an academic sees the span and variety of his role as chief of a big diplomatic mission, and one of his pet theories that treasury masters of the Western world should transform their tax systems so that people would pay on what they spend rather than on what they earn.

On the outlook of Britain awaiting the full flowering of the North Sea oil bonanza, Brewster said the country now has every chance to escape from "ancient woes" and approach "a more productive and equitable society." As he sees it "the first job is to make Britain more competitive, more productive so that it can restore its basic capacity for growth" and a great deal will depend on the next five years. By that, he said, he meant if the governing Labor Party or the opposition Conservatives manage the oil boom well — using new revenues for capital improvement and not entirely on consumption and welfare — then the nation and entire Western world would benefit enormously.

On his visits to Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales where separatists seeking to break out of the United Kingdom sometimes have used bombs and bullets, Brewster said: "You cannot understand a country, any country, by remaining in the precincts of its capital city."

While in Belfast he stressed what he called "the distress, disapproval and downright disgust" felt by the Irish-American political leadership at the eight-year old sectarian struggle between the Protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority.

On rekindling "the special relationship" between the United States and Britain, Brewster said he does not think of this "in power-political or diplomatic terms," nor only as an "affinity of sentiment, culture and language." Its most special thing, he said, "is how desperately important to each of us it is that the other should succeed" in the shared aim off preserving "ordered freedom for the world."

The ambassador spoke of a new concept of tax policy he has been interested in for some years — the idea being "the more you spend, the more you had to share with the government." Those people who preferred to save their income, he explains, would put it into productive investment without being penalized. The idea, he noted, is not U.S. policy — yet equally he has not abandoned it as a means of providing a new form of incentive that most Western countries could well use to provide the investment funds for which they hunger.

"It's an idea whose time has not yet come," Brewster said.

Family views world of art

The exhibit, a sampling of the 120,000-piece Alinari family archives, is arranged in six categories: documents and photographs of the Alinari family, images of Florence, art treasures, cameras and accessories and pictures of European cities and landscapes.

Leopoldo Alinari, an engraver's son, became involved in commercial photography in the 19th century when it was still a relatively new concept. He was joined by his brothers, Giuseppe and Romoaldo. Their sons, Giuseppe and Vittorio, and grandsons, Leopoldo and Carlo, also became photographers in the family firm.

The company, Fratelli Alinari S.P.A., was sold in 1920. The current owners expanded the archives and are managing the exhibit.

Near ghoulish 'death strip'

Fence, and whole world, separate German towns

ECKERTAL, West Germany (AP) — To Juergen Pieskar, the German-speaking people over his back fence might as well live in another world. Pieskar lives in West Germany. His neighbors are in Communist East Germany.

A ghoulish collection of electrified fences, guard towers, and a heavily mined "death strip" erected by the East Germans separate Pieskar's village from Stapelburg, a farming community a few hundred yards into Communist territory.

A December 1971 transit agreement between the two Germanys permits West Germans and other foreigners to cross into the East at a handful of locations. Eckertal, on the northern rim of the Harz Mountains, is not among them.

East Germany normally forbids travel to the West by the majority of its citizens.

To visit their "neighbors," residents of Eckertal must travel 50 miles northeast to Helmstedt or 70 miles southeast to Duderstadt, cross into East Germany, then drive back to Stapelburg.

Residents say few make the trip.

"There isn't much contact any more," said Ursula Sehnin, a waitress at a restaurant some 150 yards from the border. "An elderly couple has a son and daughter in the village over there but most people came here after the partitioning. It's like another world."

Pieskar, who has lived here for about 20 years, claims "life is not bad" along the border but "the children have to be careful. They can't roam and play all over the place."

About 50 yards behind Pieskar's new brick home flows a tiny brook. A sign warns that the middle of the stream is the border with East Germany.

A few yards behind the creek, flanked by white birches and evergreens, lies the complex of fortifications that makes the inner German border one of the most heavily fortified in the world.

East Germany claims the fortifications, which extend some 856 miles from the Baltic Sea to Czechoslovakia, are designed to keep fascists and neo-Nazis from the West out.

West Germany, citing the millions who fled East Germany before erection of the Berlin Wall in 1961, says the fortifications are to keep would-be East German defectors in.

Pieskar, who like many West Germans has relatives in the East, claims some residents of the border area are still apprehensive, although detente has eased fears of invasion.

Many were attracted here by cheap land and rural charm. Most of the several hundred residents of Eckertal moved here after creation in 1949 of East Germany, officially the German Democratic Republic, from the Soviet occupation zone.

West Germany was formed in the same year from the American, British and French zones.

East Germans must obtain special permission to live within three miles of the border, and residents of the district carry special identity cards. West Germans need no such special permission.

The border, a potential flashpoint of East-West conflict a generation ago, has become a tourist attraction, where thousands come each year to the Western side to peer through binoculars at a slice of life on the other side.

An occasional bicycle rider glides down the road beyond the fences, and during the summer tourists can watch East German farmers tend their crops.

The highway that once linked Eckertal and Stapelburg runs to the border, then resumes beyond a trench and fortifications.

Pac 8 race still anyone's 'bed of Roses'

USC leaves Stanford standing in rain

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Stanford walked into a Cardinal and Gold thrashing machine . . . and was thrashed.

The 49-0 score tells the story. It was as one-sided as the score indicates. Rain that started about an hour before game time and continued through the first quarter kept about 6,000 fans away.

The 65,101, mostly USC fans, that turned out, didn't mind at all. The Trojans dominated offensively and defensively.

In dealing Stanford its worst defeat ever by a USC team, Troy out first-downed the visitors, 33-17, outrushed them, 453 yards to 42 and outgained them, 592 yards to 208.

But the road to the Rose Bowl is still a long way from being clear. Next, the Trojans journey to Seattle to do battle with Washington, surprise 50-34 victor over Cal.

The Huskies, UCLA and USC are all 4-1 (Stanford is 4-2). With UCLA hosting weak Oregon State (0-5) next, another USC-UCLA titanic is taking shape if USC can get by Washington.

"I'm amazed we shut Stanford out" said USC coach John Robinson. "Of course, we made all the interceptions today that we dropped last week.

"This was one of our best games all around. We just have to learn to relax. We were so uptight last week (against Cal) we just couldn't execute."

In the Trojans three losses beginning with the Alabama game, quarterback Rob Hertel had started out poorly completing only four of 29 passes with four interceptions in the first halves of the games.

Against Stanford, Hertel connected on five of nine aerials for 82 yards and two touchdowns (one interception) as Troy rolled to a 21-0 halftime lead.

"We didn't start our comeback too late, thank God," grinned Robinson. "I'm really proud of our kids. We never lost faith in ourselves. Today our team played as well as I've ever seen it play."

Along the way, fullback Mosi Tatupu (101 yards in 13 carries) put on the best running show of his career. A crunching blocker, the 6-0, 225-pound Samoan had never carried more than 11 times in a game nor hit the century mark in yardage.

Tailback Charles White (126 yards and two TDs in 16 carries) broke the conference sophomore rushing record and now has 1,114 yards on 217 rushes to break the mark of 1,034 set by Anthony Davis in 1972.

White also moved by Jon Arnett into seventh place on Troy's career rushing list with 1,972 yards in 21 games played.

Split end Randy Simmrin caught one pass for 26 yards and now has snared at least one in 33 straight games.

White saw his own conference freshman rushing record broken by Stanford's Darrin Nelson. Nelson was held to 22 yards on nine carries. But he needed only three yards to top White's 744.

Nelson, who had averaged 5.7 yards per carry coming into the contest, averaged only 2.44.

Cardinal Guy Benjamin, who was the nation's leading passer when the game started (65 percent completed for 1,878 yards and 16 touchdowns), was shackled by Troy's defense.

Benjamin completed half of his 38 passes for 208 yards. But he was intercepted four times and sacked four more coughing up the ball on one to set up one of USC's seven touchdowns.

"We knew we were confronted by a dramatically bigger and faster team today," said Stanford coach Bill Walsh. "At the beginning of the season, they were ranked first in the nation and we were no better than fifth in the conference.

"They were bigger and faster at every position today. USC's running is ominous. It's the best-balanced, most finely tuned team we've faced all year and the best team we've played."

Yet when Robinson walked into the dressing room, his head was down and one could have sworn his team had lost.

"I was just thinking about next week (Washington)," he said half seriously.

Washington had dealt Stanford its only previous Pac 8 loss, 41-25, at Washington Oct. 15.

TROJAN TATTLE — Hertel marched USC to a touchdown the first time USC had the ball. The TD was a thing of beauty with Lynn Cain, on a fourth and two at Stanford's six, faking a dive for the first down while Hertel lobbed a pass to wide open reserve tight end Dan Burns in the end zone.

Broncos blanked again

The Broncos were blanked by host Cal State Fullerton 48-0 in a contest played at Cerritos College.

The game marked the fourth time this year that Poly had been shut out, a new school record. It was also the third time in their last four games that the Broncos have been a victim of a goose-egg treatment.

Fullerton, a Division I school, just had too much of everything for the Broncos to handle Saturday night. The Titans rolled up a huge 463-193 advantage in total yardage in completely dominating the contest.

Poly, now 0-7 on the year, never advanced the ball closer than the Titan 34-yard line in the game. With the win Fullerton is now 4-5 on the season.

A pair of former Citrus College standouts, quarterback Dale Bunn and halfback Obie Graves, played a big role in the Titans' victory.

Bunn rushed for 70 yards and one touchdown, a 22-yard scamper in the third quarter. He also clicked on five-of-five passes for 67 yards while playing only a little over two quarters of football.

Steve Martindale took over the quarterbacking for Fullerton in the late going and ran for two more scores. Mike Martin also scored twice for the Titans, while Graves rushed for 52 yards and yet another Titan tally.

Poly's freshman quarterback Gordy Bohannon hit on seven of 16 passes, but those completions netted only 53 yards. Bohannon was also intercepted once.

Former Pomona High and Mt. San Antonio College signal-caller Steve Taylor took over for Bohannon in the final quarter and hit on two of eight tosses for 58 yards.

Poly netted only 82 rushing yards, with no individual totalling more than 26 of those stripes.

Cal Poly will hope to pick up its first win when it celebrates Homecoming Saturday night vs. Santa Clara.

Kings stymie Rangers again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Syl Apps, Mike Murphy and Marcel Dionne provided the scoring punch as the Los Angeles Kings handed the New York Rangers a 3-1 National Hockey League setback Saturday night.

The win was the Kings' second over the Rangers this season and kept Los Angeles unbeaten against New York in the last 11 games. The Kings are 10-0-1 during that stretch, dating back to 1975.

Apps, playing only his second game for the Kings since coming to Los Angeles in a trade from Pittsburgh last Tuesday, opened the scoring after 4:29 of play with his first goal of the year. He connected from the side of the net after Dionne's drive hit the board and bounced in front of Apps.

The Kings made it 2-0 on Murphy's short-handed goal early in the second period, with Tommy Williams and Butch Goring getting the assists. Murphy beat New York goalie John Davidson from 10 feet for his sixth goal of the season and his third in the last four games.

The Rangers scored with 11:15 left in the game on Lucien Deblois' 10-footer which eluded Los Angeles goalie Rogie Vachon.

Dionne's empty net goal with 1:17 left added an insurance tally for Los Angeles.

The Kings raised their record to 6-4-2. The Rangers dropped to 5-7-1.

PASSING GAME

Walnut High quarterback Steve Green winds up to pass during the Mustangs' 35-8 victory over Royal Oak Saturday night at MSAC. Green threw for over 250 yards in the game.

Rout Royal Oak, 35-8

Mustangs soothe memory

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

But the Mustangs' convincing 35-8 conquest of Royal Oak Saturday night at Mt. San Antonio College helped to blunt that memory.

"Anytime you beat Royal Oak, it takes some of the sting out," Gunn said after the game.

The "sting" was applied by the Gladiators last week, but the hurt has been mounting all season for the Mustangs, who took over second place in the Hacienda League with a 5-1 record (7-1 overall). Royal Oak fell into a third-place tie with Ontario at 4-2.

Walnut has been plagued this year by injuries — not the least of which knocked starting running backs Dave Woronkiewicz and Tony Rossi out of the lineup.

But sophomore Jon Vallejo, a 5-foot-9, 150-pound scooter, picked up the slack for the Mustangs Saturday night. He rushed 28 times for 132 yards and two touchdowns.

"Our offensive line did a great job tonight," said Gunn, "and I'm really proud of the way Vallejo carried the load."

Steve Green, the quarterback who has spearheaded Walnut's offense all year, had another exemplary game against the Romans. He completed 20 of 28 passes for 256 yards and a touchdown and was intercepted twice. Green now has 1,460 yards passing for the year.

But Walnut's offense didn't steal the show by any means Saturday night. The Mustang defense was, if anything, even more impressive.

"I've been hearing a lot about Royal Oak's defense," Gunn said, "but I think we hit harder than they did."

Walnut held Royal Oak to 146 total yards — 85 on the ground and 59 in the air — while the Mustangs rolled up 384 yards against a defense that had allowed just 36 points in five previous Hacienda League games.

Mustang defenders came up with four interceptions — two by Doug Vind and one each by Andy Crowe and Brad Hurst — while two Roman quarterbacks completed just two of 16 passes. Crowe's fourth-quarter interception went for a 40-yard touchdown and was followed on the next play from scrimmage by Hurst's interception.

Jim Schoulten, starting for the first time, caught eight of Green's passes while Pat Flaherty grabbed six and Hurst caught two for 81 yards.

Walnut will host Ontario Friday.

No luck as Owls stumble

MISSION VIEJO — Citrus College was its own worst enemy Saturday night in its Mission Conference showdown with Saddleback at Mission Viejo High.

The Owls turned the ball over eight times in losing to the Gauchos 25-14. Saddleback is now 5-0 in M.C. action while Citrus is 4-1.

Citrus gave the host Gauchos nine quick points at the very start of the action and never was able to catch up.

A lateral fumbled out of the end zone netted Saddleback a safety, and on its next possession the Owls fumbled on their own two and Greg Speicher ran it in for the Gauchos to make it 9-0.

A field goal made it 12-0 Saddleback early in the second quarter, but Citrus got back in that game as quarterback Ken Eriksen hit James Williams with a 25-yard TD toss.

However, a Citrus turnover cost the locals dearly again in the third quarter. The Owls lost a fumble at their own 11 and one play later Gaucho QB Billy Yancy hit Joe Haigh with an 8-yard scoring strike to push Saddleback's advantage to 19-7.

Leo Burke scored later in the quarter for the Owls to make it a tight 19-14 contest, but another TD run by Speicher, this one of four yards, iced the win for Saddleback.

The Gauchos finished with a 351-282 advantage in total yardage, thanks mainly to their defense holding Citrus to a net of only 36 yards on the ground.

Owl QB Eriksen had a big night with 16 completions in 34 attempts good for 243 yards, with Dave Kirby catching eight of those for 79 yards.

Speicher led the Saddleback attack with 35 rushes good for 135 yards.

Norton emerges on split verdict

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ken Norton overcame the slight-of-hand style of Jimmy Young with a blasting body attack that carried him to a split 15-round decision Saturday night and kept him in good position for a rematch with heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali.

Norton, unable to attack effectively to the head of the elusive Young, scored well to the body and closed out the fight with a tremendous body attack as the crowd openly rooted for Young.

Nothing fancy in UCLA victory

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — UCLA's 21-3 victory over Oregon Saturday wasn't fancy, but it kept the Bruins in the midst of a tough battle for the Pacific-8 Conference crown.

Coach Terry Donahue complimented the effort of his defense, then was thankful that the Ducks, who dropped to 1-7, were without much offense too.

"If they would have had a passer to go with their offense, it could have been different," he said.

But Oregon's veteran quarterback Jack Henderson was out with a knee injury, and the Ducks struggled behind the command of freshman Dan Daly and sophomore Tim Durando.

Mike Molina's 52-yard return of an interception for a touchdown with 26 seconds left in the half was the turning point, giving the struggling Bruins a 14-0 halftime edge. The interception came on a fourth-down play.

"There's no question that was the key play in the game because it gave us a little momentum and we were certainly hanging on at that time," Donahue said.

He had praise for Oregon's defense, which had given up 199 points in its last four games.

"I felt they fought very hard," Donahue said. "They guessed a lot and stunted a great deal and guessed right, which means we must have some real tendencies that they picked up on."

UCLA scored first on an eight-yard pass from Rick Bashore to Theotis Brown, capping a 48-yard drive.

Meanwhile, four times the Ducks were forced to start inside their own 20 and they failed to muster any offensive threat.

UCLA, now tied with Southern Cal and Washington atop the Pac-8 at 4-1, scored its third touchdown on the first play when Freeman McNeil bulled over the goal from one yard out.

Oregon's lone score came on Roy Geiger's 39-yard field goal with 3:16 left in the game.

Frank Corral's booming punts forced Oregon to start drives from the six, the 15 twice and the 19 as the Ducks had just three first downs in the first half.

COACH JOHN McKAY . . .
. . . returns to Coliseum

Tampa Bay visits Coliseum

Rams 'assured' of win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John McKay made a triumphant exit from Los Angeles, but his return to the Coliseum today will be as coach of the non-winning Tampa Bay Buccaneers who still seek their first National Football League victory.

They aren't favored to do it this time either as they face the in-and-out Los Angeles Rams.

"I know that sooner or later he'll turn that Tampa Bay team around and make them winners," says Rams quarterback Pat Haden in assaying McKay for whom he played during glory years at the University of Southern California.

At USC, McKay posted a 127-40-8 record with four national collegiate championships. On an opposite vein, his Buccaneers are 0-21 in NFL play.

Ricky Bell, the tailback who played for McKay at USC and was Tampa Bay's No. 1 draft choice last season, the first man to be picked in the NFL selection process, commented:

"This has been very difficult for me. Winning has been part of my life. I will never adjust to losing. At SC, winning made life enjoyable."

Bell then commented, "I feel sorry for our defensive guys. They've really done well. They gave up only one offensive touchdown against both Minnesota and Dallas. Offensively, we just aren't consistent."

The Rams haven't been consistent either although they're tied with Atlanta for the lead in the NFC West with a 4-3 mark. After whipping Minnesota 35-3 two weeks ago, Los Angeles was upset by New Orleans 27-26.

Bell and Anthony Davis, both running stars are USC, are newcomers to the Bucs — Davis coming to the NFL after a season in the now defunct World Football League and another in Canada. Wide receiver John McKay Jr., is another of the former USC Rose Bowl stars on he club.

In fact, young McKay teamed with Haden, the Rams starting quarterback, to make a winning passing combination in both high school and college and roomed with the McKays during his final high school year.

Haden won the starting job back from Joe Namath four games into the season and now has 41 completions in 69 attempts for 612 yards and five touchdowns.

The kickoff is at 1 p.m. PST with a crowd of 50,000 expected for the Coliseum return of John McKay.

Local SCIAC squads fall

La Verne, Claremont-Mudd and Pomona-Pitzer all found the welcome as cold and wet as the weather Saturday night.

The Leopards dropped a 32-17 game at Redlands. The Stags fell at Occidental, 21-7, and Pomona-Pitzer was bombed, 53-6, at Whittier.

Whittier and Redlands remain undefeated (3-0) in conference play. La Verne and Pomona-Pitzer are winless (0-3) in the SCIAC. Claremont-Mudd, by virtue of having played the Sagehens, is 1-2.

At Redlands, it poured before the game started, hailed when it began and the Bulldogs rained on the Leos all night.

The Leopards took the opening kickoff and David Serrano returned it 38 yards to the Bulldogs' 42. Three plays later, Andrew Ford kicked a 44-yard field goal to give the Leos their only lead, 3-0, 1:46 into the game.

Redlands then drove 69 yards in six plays for its first TD. The Bulldogs tallied twice more before La Verne got on the board again.

It was 22-10 at the half, 29-10 after three quarters.

Ben Morrow was the Leos' leading rusher with 64 yards on 18 carries. Robbie Hogan, taking over for Brad Frick, had 49 yards on 16 carries.

Redlands outgained the Leopards, 309-277 and had 16 first downs.

At Whittier, Pomona-Pitzer was blanked until the last three minutes when quarterback Lyle Lansdell scored on a five-yard run.

The Sagehens showed a net of 38 yards gained to Whittier's 451. The 'Hens had a minus 49 yards rushing and a total of 87 passing for their net of 38. Bob Warren of Whittier was the game's leading rusher with 110 yards on 22 carries.

Chaffey awaits biggie

CHULA VISTA — Chaffey College set up its titanic, a week hence, in the Mission Conference race Saturday night as the Panthers scored a comfortable 24-16 win at Southwestern.

That credit sign hiked the Panthers' MC mark to 4-1 and 7-1 overall. However, it's all on the line next weekend when they host unbeaten Saddleback.

Although sporting but a 3-0 edge at intermission, Chaffey broke the game open in the third period as the Panthers scored three times for a 24-0 advantage.

Craig Ralston set up Chaffey's initial points when he recovered a fumble at the Southwestern 12-yard line and with 40 seconds remaining before the half, Paul Belmudes booted a 30-yard field goal.

Chaffey wasted little time in the second half as it marched 81 yards on its initial possession — Bob Pleasant covering the final 15 on a sweep of right end.

Knights ramble to win

Ontario Christian High nailed down at least a tie for the Olympic League title Saturday afternoon by blanking host Los Angeles Baptist 44-0.

The Knights are now 6-0 in Olympic League outings and will close out their regular season Friday night by hosting Bell-Jeff. OCHS is 7-1 on the season.

In the only other prep outing Saturday, La Verne Lutheran dropped a 27-0 outing to San Jacinto — the latter holding a share of the Arrowhead League lead with Webb.

Quarterback Joe DeHoog led the way for the Knights Saturday in the rout of L.A. Baptist. DeHoog clicked on 13 of 25 passes good for 205 yards and three touchdowns.

DeHoog hooked up with Roger Sybesma, Bob Aukeman and Dave Hooyenga for the TD aerials. OCHS rushers added 107 yards to the Knight offense.

As effective as the Ontario Christian offense was, its defense was even better. The Knights, in posting their second shutout of the season, shut down Baptist completely and accounted for eight points themselves.

Bernie Mulder picked off a pass and returned it 38 yards for a touchdown, and the Knight defense also pressured the Baptist quarterback into fumbling out of the end zone for a safety.

Defensive end Tom Lanting added three sacks to the OCHS effort.

Record, record . . .

NCAA mark

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson broke the NCAA single game passing yardage record Saturday, throwing for 571 yards and five touchdowns as 14th-ranked BYU rolled over Utah 38-8.

The sophomore quarterback, who became a starter four games ago when Gifford Nielsen was injured, broke the NCAA mark of 561 yards set by Tony Adams of Utah State in 1972.

NAIA feat

FAYETTE, Mo. (AP) — Central Methodist quarterback Tom Stine connected on 24 of 34 passes for 571 yards and a new NAIA record Saturday afternoon as he led his team to a 56-43 win over Culver-Stockton.

The junior quarterback from Florrisant, Mo., topped the previous NAIA high of 564 passing yards in a single game which was set last year by Jim Reese of Abilene Christian Univerisity in Abilene, Tex.

NCAA log

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Doug Williams threw seven touchdown passes and became the NCAA's career passing leader Saturday as Grambling University smashed Langston College 65-0 in college football.

Williams completed 23 of 30 passes for 378 yards before leaving the game with 13:36 left to play. His final pass, a 13yard TD to Clarence White, gave him 7,551 yards for his career.

Top powers roll up scores

By The Associated Press

Notre Dame, Michigan and Oklahoma all exploded over the 60-point level as several college football teams rolled up big scores in a record-making Saturday.

The fifth-ranked Fighting Irish buried Georgia Tech 69-14, sixth-ranked Michigan crushed hapless Northwestern 63-20 and No. 3 Oklahoma walloped Oklahoma State 61-28, setting the tone for a rash of high-scoring games among the nation's elite teams.

Also among the day's big point-makers was Washington, a 50-31 conquerer of No. 17 California; 16th-rated Southern Cal, which beat Stanford 49-0; No. 12 Pitt, a 44-3 winner over West Virginia and No. 14 Brigham Young, a 38-8 victor over Utah.

Meanwhile, second-ranked Alabama wrapped up a berth in the Sugar Bowl with a 24-3 whipping of No. 18 Louisiana State. The victory gave the Crimson Tide its sixth Southeastern Conference title in seven years and an automatic spot in the Sugar Bowl game Jan. 2, 1978 at the New Orleans Superdome.

In other action involving Top Ten teams, Texas walloped Houston 35-21; fourth-ranked Ohio State smashed Illinois 350; No. 7 Kentucky trimmed Vanderbilt 28-6 and No. 9 Penn State edged North Carolina State 21-17.

Among the rest of the nation's ranked teams, No. 11 Nebraska subdued Missouri 21-10; No. 13 Clemson played to a 1313 tie with North Carolina; 15th-rated Florida State bested Virginia Tech 23-21 and Colorado scored a 12-7 victory over Iowa State, ranked No. 19 in the country.

Joe Montana passed for 273 yards and three touchdowns, scored another on a one-yard sneak and ran for a two-point conversion to lead Notre Dame's romp over Georgia Tech.

Rick Leach ran for two touchdowns and passed for two others in a third-quarter barrage that led Michigan over winless Northwestern in their Big Ten game. The Wolverines led by only 14-7 at halftime before breaking the game open in the third period.

Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott rushed for 103 yards on 17 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, and passed for 85 more yards to pace the Sooners' slaughter of Oklahoma State.

Warren Moon ran for two touchdowns in the decisive third quarter and Michael Jackson of the ball-hawking Washington defense intercepted two passes as the Huskies, sharing the Pacific-8 football lead, beat California.

Tony Nathan scored two touchdowns on one-yard plunges and fired a 20-yard touchdown pass as Alabama overcame a rash of fumbles to beat Louisiana State.

Top-ranked Texas, ignited by Earl Campbell's three touchdowns and quarterback Randy McEachern's field generalship, stunned Houston in a Southwest Conference game.

Ohio State, held to one touchdown in the first half, erupted for three in the third quarter — two in a span of 13 seconds — and rolled over Big Ten foe Illinois.

Longest win streak ends

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Danny Rogers snared a 79-yard touchdown pass from Terry Skinner and Tom Hay added the key extra point Saturday night as East Texas State shaded No. 1-ranked Texas A&I 7-6 to snap the Javelinas' 46-game unbeaten streak.

The last time Texas A&I lost was Nov. 10, 1973.

SCIAC harrier finals

Sagehens sharp

WHITTIER — Pomona-Pitzer had a big day at the SCIAC Cross-Country Finals here Saturday afternoon.

The Sagehen runners nabbed second place behind Occidental in the men's race and won the women's division. Claremont-Mudd was third in both the men's and women's race.

Oxy's Tom Colley won the individual honors with a 26:23 clocking on the Whittier College course. Pomona-Pitzer's Gerry Harnett was the top local among the men with a fourth-place finish (27:06). Other 'Hens running well were Gerard Honore (10th), Nick Buchan (12th) and Jeff Lee (13th).

Caltech's Celia Peterson won the women's race. Sagehen runners Ruth Hales, Kathy Laun, Erika Klopfer and Caroline Deuerling all finished in the top ten to pace the locals to the team victory.

The Oxy men and Pomona-Pitzer's Harnett will now advance to the NCAA Division III Nationals, to be held Wednesday at Case-Western Reserve U. in Cleveland, Ohio.

CHRIS THE CHAMP — Chris Evert returns a shot to Billie Jean King during their singles final match in the Colgate Series Championships Saturday in Palm Springs. Evert won the $75,000 first-place award by beating King, 6-2, 6-2.

Don Lugo wins crucial

SANTA MARIA — Don Lugo High, with its hopes for a CIF playoff berth riding on the outcome, scored a crucial 24-14 win over host St. Joseph here Saturday afternoon.

The win for the Conquistadores ups their season record to 4-2-1 and keeps their hopes for a CIF playoff berth alive. The "Q's", with one game remaining (at Chino High Saturday night vs. Brentwood), are seeking entry into the playoffs as a free-lance team.

Don Lugo looked most impressive Saturday in beating St. Joseph, a team from the rugged Los Padres League. Lugo rallied from a 14-14 halftime tie to dominate the action in the final two quarters and pull out the victory.

"This was the biggest game in Don Lugo's history," a happy Conquistador coach John Monger said afterward. "They are a real good team and are tough to beat at home, but we did it.

"I'm especially pleased since we have over 400 of our fans travel to Santa Maria for the game," Monger contined. "It was a big thrill for our team."

Running back Carlos Sanchez paced the Lugo effort Saturday by racking up 181 yards on 21 carries and scoring two touchdowns.

However, it took a 3-yard pass from quarterback Bobby Malins to Evan Mathews on a fourth-down play in the third quarter to net the winning TD for Lugo.

Luis Zendajas added a booming 41-yard field goal in the final period to close out the scoring.

Malins finished with seven completions in nine attempts, good for 113 yards. Fullback Manuel Villalobos added 49 yards to the Lugo ground game.

Running back Randy Murrlow led St. Joseph with 120 yards on the ground.

Don Lugo	7	7	7	3—24
St. Joseph	0	14	0	0—14

DL — Sanchez 12 run (Zendajas kick)
SJ — Aguilar 6 run (run failed)
DL — Sanchez 60 run (Zendajas kick)
SJ — Murrlow 4 run (Murrlow run)
DL — Mathews 3 pass from Malins (Zendajas kick)
DL — FG Zendajas 41.

'Lame duck' on pole

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — "Lame duck" Sam Sommers, who found out much to his surprise last week that he has been fired, stunned the favorites and put his Chevrolet on the pole position for today's Dixie 500 Grand National stock car race.

Sommers, driving what may be his last race for Savannah businessman M.C. Anderson, roared around the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway at an average speed of 160.229 miles per hour.

Richard Petty ran 160.084 mph in his Dodge to earn the other front row starting position in the 40-car field, which was filled Saturday.

Steady rains that had prevented any track activity since Thursday let up Saturday morning. Officials had been considering postponing Sunday's race one week if the rain hadn't stopped by Saturday afternoon.

Finals simply no match

Evert quiets King

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, her machine-like ground strokes working to perfection, overwhelmed Billie Jean King 6-2, 6-2 Saturday to win the $250,000 women's tennis Series championships.

Evert, who earned $75,000 for her victory in the round-robin tournament, completely dominated the foe she has replaced as the first lady of women's tennis.

King had won three straight tournaments on the championship series circuit going into this event at Mission Hills Country Club, but her game was definitely not up to par in the final against her old rival.

King's only real threat in the nationally televised match came in the third game of the opening set, when she led two games to one and seemed near a service break with Evert down 0-40.

But Evert, usually at her best under pressure, came back to win that game and went on to coast through the next four.

The second set was all Evert, as she broke King's service in the third and fifth games.

King, saying she was very disappointed with her play, added that Evert always seems to be at her best when they meet.

"She's always loose when she plays me," the 33-year-old King remarked. "She feels like she has nothing to lose. But of course today my game was absolutely shocking."

Evert, 22, who first began playing King when she was a teen-ager, said that her attitude toward her long-time opponent remains the same today.

"I was 14 or 15 when I first started playing her," said Evert. "She was, and is, a living legend, and I felt I had nothing to lose. I never feel nervous playing her and I always seem to be at my best."

Both Evert and King have been bothered by physical ailments in the past year.

King underwent the third knee operation of her career about a year ago, and has been slowly working her way back into shape.

Scuffle ends in forfeit

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky State was awarded a 1-0 college football forfeit victory Saturday when Livingstone Coach Baxter Holman took his players off the field late in the first half.

With 18 seconds left in the first half, Kentucky State running back Ruie Hannah caught a pass from Curt Sullivan to put the ball on the Livingstone 43.

Kentucky State, leading 8-0 at the time, was called for clipping and late-hit penalties on the play, which precipitated a scuffle between the two teams.

Holman, who objected to the call by the official, wouldn't let his players return to field after order was restored.

The fighting lasted about two minutes. Both benches cleared, but the players were "headed off before a major brawl," a Kentucky State spokesman said.

Middleweight crown

Valdes champ

CAMPIONE D'ITALIA (AP) — Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia outpointed Bennie Briscoe of the United States in a 15-round fight in this North Italian gambling center Saturday night and won the vacant world middleweight boxing title.

The 31-year-old Colombian won a unanimous decision in succeeding Carlos Monzon of Argentina as the champion. Monzon retired from boxing earlier this year after seven years as titleholder following his second triumph over Valdes.

The bout was a pale carbon of the 1974 title fight between the two boxers who traded savage blows for seven rounds until Valdes landed a right hook which knocked out Briscoe. It was the only knockout in the American's long career.

The two fighters also had met in 1973 when Valdes won a decision. That bout also was more exciting than this one.

Briscoe and Valdes lacked continuity and appeared tired at the end of the 15 rounds. Briscoe tried to slow down Valdes, working on the body from the outset.

Valdes was faster afoot and with his punches, but Briscoe occasionally had him in trouble.

Briscoe kept moving forward, trying to wear down Valdes. But the American often was stopped at mid-range by the Colombian's left jabs and right hooks. Briscoe, born in Georgia but now living in Philadelphia, kept boring in. But Valdez was a superior boxer and rallied every time the American began threatening.

Borg nabs Cologne Tourney

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Wimbledon ace Bjorn Borg of Sweden defeated Hungary's Balazs Taraczy 6-2, 6-3 in the $50,000 Cologne Grand Prix Tennis Tournament Saturday to enter the men's singles finals as the favorite.

Borg gave a glittering 90-minute performance before 6,000 spectators in Cologne's indoor sports hall.

Ignoring medical advice to drop out of the tournament because of the flu, Poland's Wojtek Fibak battled on despite a fever to defeat Buster Mottram of Britain 6-0, 3-6, 6-4 in another semifinal match.

Fibak slackened his pace after winning the first set, promptly losing the next set. The Pole rallied in the third set to show stronger nerves than Mottram, who managed to fend off three matchpoints before succumbing.

'Disney leaders three up

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones blended their talents for a back-9 29 that propelled them to a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World National Team Golf Classic.

"The only really nice thing about a third-round lead," said Jones, "is that you know if you play good the next day you're going to win. If you're trailing, you can play good and not win."

Gilbert and Jones had a better-ball score of 61, a whopping 11 under par on the rainsoaked, 7,197-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World and compiled a 54-hole total of 187, a dizzying 29 under par.

Tied for second at 190 were the teams of Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin and Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mexican Victor Regalado. Weiskopf and Irwin combined for a better ball 63 in the cloudy, threatening weather, while Regalado and Rodriguez clowned their way to a 65.

"We've still got a lot of golf to play," warned Gilbert. "And we've got some tough teams behind us—Irwin and Weiskopf aren't gonna be easy to handle. I just hope we can do it.

"Our strategy is to put two balls on every green and give us a par-option-birdie opportunity."

Steve Melnyk and Andy North were 4 strokes back at 191 after a 64.

Rodriguez and Regalado held a 1-stroke lead going into the third round and obviously were disappointed with their performance.

"Overall," said Rodriguez, "we played lousy. We played just like a Puerto Rican and a Mexican."

Eddie Pearce and Terry Catlett had a 64 for 192 and were tied at that figure with Morris Hatalsky and Don Pooley, who had a 63.

Johnny Miller, playing with Japan's Tsuneyuki Nakajima, had a 64 and a 193 total. They were tied with veterans Charles Coody and Lou Graham, George Burns and Ben Crenshaw, Lon Hinkle and Craig Stadler. Hinkle-Stadler had 66, Burns-Crenshaw 62, Coody-Graham 64.

Former champions Mac McLendon and Hubert Green, the current U.S. Open titleholder, were 66-195.

On the 15th, Jones started a three-hole birdie-binge that put them in front. He scored on putts of 15, 6 and 12 feet and Gibby capped it off with a 22-footer for birdie on the 18th.

Cauthen guides winner

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Johnny D., ridden by sensational 17-year-old jockey Steve Cauthen, unleashed a burst of speed leaving the backstretch and coasted to victory Saturday in the $200,000 Washington D.C. International at Laurel Race Course.

The 3-year-old gelded son of Stage Door Johnny, owned by Dana S. Bray Jr. of Twins Falls, N.Y. and representing the United States, ended France's four-year dominance of the International.

The Virginia-bred Johnny D., who opened up his lead to as much as 10 lengths entering the stretch, scored by 2½ lengths over Ogden Mills Phipps' Majestic Light, the 5-2 second choice who made a belated stretch run in the 1½-mile turf test.

Nelson Bunker Hunt's Exceller, the 3-2 favorite representing France, rallied to finish third in the field of eight, but was 14 lengths behind Majestic Light.

Cauthen, who recently became the first jockey to earn $5 million in purses in a single year, rode Johnny D. over the soft course in a slow time of 2:42.

The winner returned $22, $7 and $3.80. Majestic Light paid $3.80 and $3.20 and Exceller returned $2.60.

WHEN'S A BIG Fella COMING TO POMONA

Adult cage loops set

Registration for the Pomona Park and Recreation Department adult basketball program are now being accepted. Teams may sign up on the night they wish to play.

Practice games to determine classification begin in December with league play beginning in January. Leagues are classified A, B, or C and there is a half court program.

Players must be at least 16 years old and not have played high school, college or professional basketball since Sept. 1 of this year.

For information regarding entry fees or registration, call 620-2321 from 8:15 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Deadline to sign up is Nov. 30.

Gyms are open for practice now from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Fremont Jr. High (Tuesdays), Simons (Wednesday) and Emerson (Thursdays).

Class offered for cage refs

The Pomona Park and Recreation Department will have a class on basketball officiating starting Monday night at 6 p.m.

Persons attending the classes, in the City Hall Boards and Commission Room each Monday through Dec. 12, must be at least 16 years old.

Those attending will have the opportunity to officiate in the city's youth and adult basketball programs this season.

UP AND OVER — Claremont's Bob Hadley makes a successful jump at recent NBA Grand Nationals at Northridge. Hadley is one of the top-rated riders in the rapidly-growing sport of bicycle motocross racing and has raced across the nation helping to promote the sport.

Claremont's Hadley shines

Hadley finished the main event behind only current national champion, Stuart Thomsen in a field of the country's top 50 riders. The event was held at Devonshire Downs in Northridge.

Thomsen also captured the Open Pro class. Over 1,000 riders from ages 6 to 21 participated in the event, the largest BMX meet ever held. Riders from Arizona, Colorado, Hawaii, Nevada, Oklahoma and Washington joined with the Northern, Central, Southern and San Diego divisions of California for the meet.

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles had proclaimed Sunday, Oct. 30 (the date of the race) as official Bicycle Motocross Day in L.A. Over 100,000 young people compete in the fast-growing sport of bicycie racing.

Claremont's Hadley is currently number two in point standings for the Southern California Division of the NBA, with a total of 5,601 points. He placed second in the 16-and-over Expert Class in the halftime races at the Coliseum during a Rams-Eagles exhibition football game earlier this year, after having competed this summer in races in Arizona, Georgia, Kansas, Missouri, Ohio and Oklahoma.

Hadley is also editor of the NBA World, and a contributing writer to Bicycle Motocross News and Bicycle Motocross Action magazine. His picture is currently featured in a major bicycle manufactor's ad for motocross bikes.

Another valley youth, Brian Dworshak of Alta Loma, also did well in the Grand Nationals. Dworshak, sponsored by the Bike Shoppe of Pomona, placed third in the 14-and-over Open Class.

Brook Hadley, 13, also of Claremont, competed in the 13-year-old Open and Expert classes, making it to the main event in both classes. Brook is a student at El Roble Junior High in Claremont.

Bob Hadley is a graduate of Our Lady of the Assumption School in Claremont and Don Bosco Tech High in Rosemead.

Ron LeFlore top Tiger

DETROIT (AP) — Outfielder Ron LeFlore was named Tiger of the Year Tuesday by the Detroit chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

LeFlore received 22 of a possible 38 votes, including two half votes by writers who split their choice between LeFlore and first baseman Jason Thompson.

Thompson was runnerup with eight votes. Pitcher Dave Rozema — named Tiger Rookie of the Year a few days ago by broadcasters — and second baseman Tito Fuentes got one vote each.

LeFlore wound up as the leading right-handed hitter in the American League. His .325 average was fifth behind four lefties.

Last season's Tiger of the Year award was given to pitcher Mark Fidrych.

Amateur cross-city run slated for Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES — the normally peaceful, quiet streets of downtown Los Angeles will be awakened Sunday, Nov. 13 with a gunshot fired by Mayor Tom Bradley as he starts thousands of runners surging up Olive Street towards the County Courthouse marking the start of the Los Angeles Athletic Club Mercury 10k Run.

Amateur runners will be leaving the club at Seventh and Olive streets at 9 a.m. on a course that will take them by the Biltmore Hotel, the County Courthouse, Music Center, Bonaventure Hotel and much of downtown.

While winding south on the 6.2 mile course, runners will pass the University of Southern California, Exposition Park and enter the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum for the finish.

Early entries include some of the country's finest distance runners, along with hordes of "advanced joggers," according to Superior Court Judge Jack Goertzen, chairman of the group spearheading the event.

Best known of the Los Angeles area entrants is Miki Gorman, a 42-year-old Japanese-American housewife who twice has been the top woman finisher in the Boston Marathon and most recently defended her women's title in this year's New York City Marathon with a winning time of 2 hours, 41 minutes and 10 seconds. Miki has won numerous other international women's events.

From the start at Seventh and Olive, the Mercury 10k Run will go north on Olive to First Street; west on First to Hope Street; south on Hope (which merges into Flower) to 33rd Street; west on 33rd to Figueroa; south on Figueroa to Santa Barbara Avenue; west on Santa Barbara to Menlo Avenue; north on Menlo to Coliseum Drive; and east on Coliseum Drive to the tunnel leading into the Coliseum.

Spectators wishing to view the end of the race will be admitted into the Coliseum without charge.

The winner's time in the race is expected to be 30 to 35 minutes. Last place finishers may take up to one hour.

As a special activity within the event, the National Athletic Health Institute (NAHI) is setting up monitoring stations at the finish line to perform "quick look" heart checks on all runners who wish to take part.

Runners interested in entering the Mercury 10k Run can obtain additional information by contacting the athletic office of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, (213) 625-2211, ext. 231.

A SMILING 'SHOE' — Willie Shoemaker displays a happy grin while talking with a fan prior to the start of a race at Santa Anita recently. 'The Shoe' has been racing professionally since 1949 and has had a banner campaign at S.A. this year.

Shoemaker at top of career at 46

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — The $64 million question: What athlete whose career began in 1949 still rides at the top of his profession?

Bill Shoemaker, at the age of 46, has brought eight horses to victory in $100,000-added stakes races this year. Winnings of his mounts in 1977 have reached $3.2 million.

Not bad for a guy who was 30 years old when Steve Cauthen was born. Career earnings of horses ridden by "The Shoe" have reached $64.3 million.

He made upwards of $2 million per year every year from 1956 through 1966, reaching $3 million for the first time in 1967, and again in 1975.

Cauthen, the riding sensation of eastern tracks the past year, recently surpassed $5 million in 1977 earnings by his horses. But the youngster has just two big stakes race victories so far — compared to Shoemaker's 127 victories in stakes races above the $100,000 level.

Two of Shoemaker's 1977 stakes victories have come on Forego, horse of the year in 1976 and a candidate again this year.

"I feel good right now," Shoemaker says, "I run a lot and play tennis, and I guess I'll keep riding until I don't feel like it any more."

His grey, thinning hair, and all-time status alongside such sports figures as Dempsey, Nicklaus, Tilden and Ruth are not the only things that set Shoemaker apart from the other jockeys at Santa Anita's Oak Tree meeting. Shoemaker rides only 4-5 mounts a day — compared to 5-7 for other leading jockeys — but a much higher percentage of his horses finish in the money.

Shoemaker and Darrel McHargue are competing for most victories in the month-long Oak Tree meeting that ends Monday.

At the much-longer Santa Anita meeting, Shoemaker was the leading jockey for 17 years consecutively until he suffered severe leg and pelvic injuries in accidents in 1968 and 1969.

He says there are no after effects of the near-crippling fracture of his left femur — considered the strongest bone in the body — which kept him out of action 13 months. Since then he has lowered the quantity of his riding, but not the quality.

Angels recall seven

ANAHEIM — The Angels reached the 40-man roster limit by purchasing the contracts of seven players, including six California residents, while outrighting the trio of players to Salt Lake City.

General Manager Harry Dalton announced the outright assignments of infielder Orlando Ramirez, righthander Pat Cristelli and outfielder Frankie George, all to Salt Lake City.

In addition, California will lose three players via the re-entry draft. The Angels have received notification outfielder Carlos May, a six-year player, has opted to become a free agent. Unsigned players Danny Briggs and Mario Guerrero also will be eligible for the November 4 draft.

Lansford, 20, hit .332 for the Diablos. His hit total included 18 home runs and 94 RBI's.

Kubski led the Texas League with 114 runs scored and 177 hits while fashioning a .324 average. Anderson was a .285 hitter with 18 homers and 73 RBI's. After being promoted from Salinas mid-way through the season, Rayford compiled a .295 average at El Paso.

Botting, 22, jumped from Salinas to El Paso by virtue of posting an 8-0 record with a 2.04 ERA. He was 5-7 in the Texas league.

Quintana, who has had brief trials with the Angels and Atlanta Braves, saved three games for Salt Lake City.

NFL roundup

Ray Guy to test Seahawks

By Associated Press

If you want to know about a baseball pitcher, ask the guy who has to swing against him.

If you want to know about a hockey goalie ask the guy who has to shoot against him.

And, if you want to know about a football punter, ask the guy who has to kick against him.

If you ask Bucky Dilts, who punts for the Denver Broncos, the best in his business is Oakland's Ray Guy, who'll be doing his thing this week against the Seattle Seahawks as the National Football League heads into the second half of its season.

Dilts watched Guy consistently pin the Broncos as Oakland handed Denver its first loss of the season last week and moved into a tie for first place in the American Conference West.

"Ray Guy is fantastic," said Dilts. "He discourages offenses with his punts. They hang up there 4.8 seconds or longer and they climb toward the third deck."

Guy averaged 49.1 yards for eight kicks against Denver and leads the league in his specialty. Dilts is not surprised. "He's the best!" the Denver kicker said.

Included in Guy's performance against the Broncos was a 72-yard kick, longest in the NFL this season. "We wanted to keep their backs to the wall and have them staring at 80 yards each time they got the ball," said John Madden, coach of the Raiders.

The Seahawks, coming off a 56-17 thumping of Buffalo, will have to deal with Guy's punts and the rest of the Raiders today while Denver faces Pittsburgh in a key AFC game that will affect the standings in the Central and West Divisions. The Steelers are one game back of Cleveland in the Central race with the Browns hosting Cincinnati, two games off the pace. Houston, also two behind in the AFC Central, is at home against Chicago.

Seattle set NFL highs in points and net yards (559) in destroying the Bills last week for the Seahawks' second victory of the season.

Washington plays at Baltimore Monday night.

After seven games, Dallas is the last NFL club with a perfect record.

RAY GUY . . .
. . . he's the tops

The Cowboys are off to their best start ever and lead the NFC East by a comfortable three games.

Minnesota is two games up in the NFC Central and in the West, Los Angeles and Atlanta are tied for the top at 4-3.

The races are tighter in the AFC. Besides the Oakland-Denver tie in the West, just two games separate the four clubs in the Central. And in the East, Baltimore, 6-1, is one game in front of both New England and Miami, both 5-2 and tied for second place.

Colts announce Monday sellout

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts say next Monday's night's National Football League game against the Washington Redskins is sold out.

A spokeswoman for the Colts said Tuesday more than 60,000 tickets had been sold for the Memorial Stadium clash, and that the nationally televised game will be carried on TV stations in the Baltimore-Washington area.

Home games must be sold out at least 72 hours in advance for the local TV blackout to be lifted.

It will be the second consecutive sellout for the Colts. Last Sunday's 31-21 victory over Pittsburgh was played before a Memorial Stadium record crowd of 60,225.

Tee to Cup

'Support your pro' week

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

This week has been designated "Support Your PGA Professional Week" in Southern California. Any golfer taking a lesson from a PGA country club pro from Nov. 7-12 will receive two season tickets to the PGA Cup Matches, Nov. 17-20 at Mission Hills C.C. near Palm Springs. The tickets are valued at $16.

The fifth annual PGA Cup Matches, sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Company, consist of competition between United States and a combined team from Great Britain and Ireland

Americans have walked off with the matches since play started in 1973.

Members of the U.S. team are Larry Gilbert, Brandenburg, Ky.; Tim Collins, Greenville, S.C.; George Bellino, Canfield, Ohio; Bob Duden, Portland, Ore.; Bruce Summerhays, Palo Alto, Calif.; Jim Albus, Staten Island, N.Y.; George Lanning, Tacoma, Wash.; Bob Galloway, Rock Hill, S.C.; and Jim Ferriell, Milford, Ohio.

The Andy Williams San Diego Open is scheduled this winter to be held from Jan. 25-29 at Torrey Pines. Defending champ is reliable Tom Watson.

It always amazes me that groundskeepers are able to keep Southland courses well-manicured in the winter. Lately, I have visited three courses — Hesperia, Chino Creek, and Via Verde C.C. — and all are in expert condition.

Hesperia's greens these days are a bit bumpier and slower than formerly, but the course is in superb condition.

I hope to take a gander today at Rancho California near Temecula. The course is remarkably well-groomed all year long. I have never played Rancho when it wasn't a real joy.

Recently, we published a list of the top golf courses in the United States. I have been working on a list of the finest golf courses in the Pomona Valley, but I'm not sure that I'll ever release the list.

It seems to me that the golfer has an almost impossible time of it judging a course completely objectively. I can honestly say that when I'm playing well the course looks much more attractive than when I'm hacking around. Anyway, it's fun to look at courses and play expert.

I'm reminded that the La Verne Chamber of Commerce will hold the fall tournament on Friday, Nov. 18 at San Dimas Canyon Golf Course.

Tee-off times are scheduled from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. A $20 entry fee includes green fees, cart, awards and dinner. Extra dinner tickets can be purchased for $5.25. A batch of awards will be given for low gross, low net, and calloway winners.

Persons interested in learning more about the event can call 593-5265.

Deane Beman, commissioner, PGA tour, appears sold on the new Pepsi-Cola Mixed Team championship arrangement. Set up for Dec. 1-5 at Bardmoor C.C., Largo, Fla., the competition calls for a male and female pro to play as a team.

Beman says, "The new tournament provides a change of pace for our players. Golf is meant to be played for fun. I know our players will enjoy the tournament. The team concept of a man and a woman will make this championship a refreshing event."

The 19th edition of the Bob Hope Desert Classic will feature a record $273,000 in prize money.

A daily total of $10,000 will be awarded in the pro-am portion of the '78 Hope, which will be played Feb. 8-11 on all four Classic courses, Bermuda Dunes, Eldorado, Indian Wells, and La Quinta country clubs.

The pros will finish up the fifth day of the tournament at Bermuda Dunes.

Men's Club members at Via Verde C.C. will hold their Las Vegas Night on Wednesday from 8 until 11 p.m.

Arnold Scott, assistant professional at Red Hill C.C. since 1954, died recently. Scott served with four head professionals and was often praised for his "efficiency, dependability, cheerfulness and pleasing manner."

He was regarded as a great asset to Red Hill C.C. by members and employes. He will be missed.

The 1977 Southern California Open, will be moved to Apple Valley C.C. and will be held from Wednesday through Friday, Dec. 14-16.

The popular tournament was held last year at Via Verde C.C. and Glendora C.C. Entries for the $12,500 event is $75 for amateurs, $100 for PGA members, and $125 for non-members.

Entertainment and sports personalities will gather at Yorba Linda C.C. on Monday, Nov. 14 for the first annual Tommy John Cystic Fibrosis Celebrity Golf Classic.

All proceeds will aid the research programs of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

The public is invited to attend the event for a $2 donation to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. The tournament is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. in shotgun fashion.

Johnny Miller talking about his disappointing 1977.

"It has been a crazy year. But there comes a time when you have to realize that no job is easy. You have to work at it and I wasn't willing to do that awhile ago. It's a little like the guy playing the slot machine. When he's winning, it's so easy he gets the idea he can keep winning even if he doesn't put any money in the machine. It doesn't work that way."

Just before the start of the final round of the Southern Open, Jerry Pate received a phone call from his good friend, Coach Bear Bryant. The Bear wished him luck, and just like the Crimson Tide, Jerry rolled, winning by seven strokes.

Darlene Jones won the President's Cup recently at Mountain Meadows Golf Course in women's match play competition. Runnerup was Arlene Waltersheild.

Irene Short won the vice president's cup with Jean Graham in the runnerup position.

Age doesn't bother Howe

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — There is a widely circulated report that Gordie Howe, the hockey player, is old. It has no basis in fact.

Yet it persists, simply because he was born some 49½ years ago, and is in his 30th campaign on ice.

Much is made of his age, particularly at this time of year, when his computer body rejects the idea of retirement as premature and he plunges ahead into another opening, another show.

Every fall, observers take note of the thinning, floppy grey-white hair which speaks of his years, recall that he was born when Herbert Hoover was president of the United States, and are variously amazed, amused, awed and-or envious. And always skeptical.

Well, forget the common ground rules. Gordie Howe hasn't yet acknowledged them. He is one of a nearly extinct breed of athlete who defies the human condition as a matter of course and simply overrules the calendar. The computer body is his yardstick, nothing else.

"When my body tells me it's time to quit, I'll quit," he says.

"I've had a few nights like that," he adds. "A few nights when it told me to slow down. But no matter how old your are, it proves one point and I've always been a proponent of this: You have to enjoy what you're doing. I still have fun playing hockey."

Some year, he'll be too old to play hockey. But meanwhile, performance will pass him, or flunk him out.

He's Mr. Hockey still. He's been Mr. Red Wing in the National Hockey League and Mr. Aero in the World Hockey Association. He's Mr. Whaler now. The Whalers and the WHA were turned back in their long, bitterly frustrating effort to become a part of the NHL, but the team and the league, thankfully, won the brushfire battle for Gordie and his two sons, Mark and Marty. They represent the foundation for new beginnings in the newer league, which has pledged to fortify itself with solid franchises and fight on.

Soccer doing a super selling job in United States

EDITORS' NOTE: There is little question that 1977 has been soccer's breakthrough year in the United States. Associated Press Special Correspondent Peter Arnett looked at the game's newly found success and found that old fashioned hard sell and enthusiastic women and children were part of the reason.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

Pele, the universally acclaimed king of soccer, has retired. But Martha Dinwitty, housewife and mother, and thousands of other soccer enthusiasts have only begun their love affair with the game.

Pele retired this year at age 36. Mrs. Dinwitty, around the same age, intends to stick with it and master her soccer skills, or at least outplay the two 50-year-old grandmothers on the defensive line of an opposing neighborhood team in suburban Dallas.

Mrs. Dinwitty's enthusiasm for kicking the checkered ball, despite bruised thighs and skinned shins, might be expected of a college kid, but she's the mother of two growing children.

Only a true believer would understand, and she doesn't have to look far to find them since there are 54 women's teams in her soccer league.

They are riding the crest of a wave that in half a dozen U.S. cities has seen professional soccer splash in from the backlots to become a major spectator sport.

In New York, the Cosmos have drawn sellout crowds of over 70,000 spectators. Strong local support has surfaced for other North American Soccer League teams such as the Tampa Bay Rowdies, the Minnesota Kicks, the Dallas Tornado, the Seattle Sounders and the San Jose Earthquakes.

Amateur soccer is also booming. Youth leagues will probably draw a million boys and girls this year, half as large as the enrollment for Little League baseball. There are now 429 college teams. And housewives such as Mrs. Dinwitty and their husbands in adult leagues number in the hundreds of thousands.

Soccer fans and players demonstrate a missionary-like certainty in their belief that America would finally catch up with the rest of the world and accept soccer as the No. 1 sport.

"We've been a stepchild too long," said John McKeon, the soccer coach at East Stroudsburg State College in Pennsylvania.

Too often in the past it was football that got the best college prospects, with rejected and second class players turning out for soccer, McKeon said.

The professional promoters in particular bear down on the underdog theme. "We have been downtrodden for so long now," said Francisco Marcos, chief promotions man for the Tampa Bay Rowdies. "I tell my people, in adversity you find strength in unity. Go out and sell, sell, sell."

The professionals have to sell themselves as well as the sport.

Soccer has been played for nearly six decades at New Haven, Conn. But only about 1,500 fans would turn out for games by the Bicentennials and the franchise was sold this year to Oakland.

An average of 6,000 attend professional games in Los Angeles even though 60,000 children are registered soccer players in Orange County alone.

The solid soccer successes in America have been in virgin territory where promoters have built up the sport, often in just a couple of years. The promoters also went to work in Dallas, Minnesota, Seattle and other west coast cities with success.

And it was the hard sell.

Marcos of the Tampa Bay Rowdies said he formed the Tampa Bay Area Soccer Association on May 18, 1975, soon after the club was created and recruited 617 youths into 60 teams. "We provided T shirts, shorts, socks. It was unique in professional sports in this country," Marcos said.

They went out into the community with films and demonstrations "like the Harlem Globetrotters. We asked them 'do you like soccer?' If they nodded we'd say sign here," Marcos said.

The Rowdies sold parents on soccer by showing that normalsized youths could play it. They also compared the injury rate to football and guaranteed that their children would play at least half each game "with a probable three minute possession of the ball," Marcos said.

Ten thousand youths have responded. "They have grown with us," said Marcos, whose Rowdies still completely control the league. Football is still popular in Tampa but one 16-school football league has turned almost entirely to soccer.

The Rowdies also launched an unprecedented promotional campaign, keyed by the contractual commitment of all its professional players to any necessary public appearances. "We told them, in England you train for two hours each morning, and play golf in the afternoon. In America, you are missionaries," Marcos said.

Rowdies star Rodney Marsh said: "We'd never do this back home in England," as he recounted numerous visits to supermarket openings, school soccer clinics, lunches and so on. Like other soccer stars interviewed, Marsh was unfailingly gracious and patient, obviously a student of the master himself, Pele.

The captive audience of youths and parents in Tampa have resulted in an average attendance of 20,000 per game.

"Sure we have an aggressive selling pitch," said Allan Cotterill, a vice president of the Fannies, the Rowdies' fan club. "But we have no apologies for it. Every kid can be as active as he wishes in soccer."

Ticket prices give the professional soccer teams an edge. At Tampa a family of four can see a Rowdies' game on a $10 family plan.

But beyond the promotion there is the game itself, described typically by Pele as, "a ballet, and women admire its beauty."

Having won the mommies and daddies and the kids in several major American cities, soccer has just one barrier left. It is not yet a Big Ten or Big Eight college sport.

Political timebomb is ticking away

Economic perils pose greater threat to 'national security'

WASHINGTON (AP)- Too many countries spend huge sums on defense while ignoring economic factors that pose a potentially greater threat to their national security, a new study released Saturday says.

Entitled "Redefining National Security," the study says a political time bomb is ticking away against the majority of governments which tolerate continuing "excessive human claims," on the earth's principal biological systems — fisheries, forests, grasslands and croplands.

The study was written by Lester R. Brown, director of Worldwatch Institute, a nonprofit research organization. It was funded by the Charles F. Kettering Foundation.

Brown says depletion of nonrenewable energy supplies is but one of the dangers that lie ahead for the global economy.

He notes that biological systems provide all food and all the raw materials for industry except minerals and petrochemicals.

"In fishery after fishery, the catch now exceeds the long-term sustainable yield," Brown says. "The cutting of trees exceeds the regenerative capacity of forests almost everywhere.

"Grasslands are deteriorating on every continent as livestock populations increase along with human population. Croplands too are being damaged by erosion as population pressures mount. Failure to arrest this deterioration of biological systems threatens not only the security of individual nations but the survival of civilization as we know it."

Brown writes that the overwhelmingly military approach to national security is based on the assumption that the principal threat to security comes from other nations.

The recent experience of Egypt, to take one example, suggests that this is not the case, he says.

He says that the riots that followed official attempts earlier this year to raise food prices in Egypt came closer to toppling the government of President Anwar Sadat than has Israeli military power.

It was a food crisis and famine precipitated by ecological deterioration — and not an invading army— that ousted the centuries-old dynasty in Ethiopia in 1974, Brown says.

He also notes that the Polish government was badly shaken a year ago by riots when it sought to raise food prices closer to the world level.

Brown cites these examples to suggest that "global food insecurity and the associated instability in food prices have become a common source of political instability."

The global economy, he says, depends on the biological systems.

"Anything that threatens their viability threatens the global economy. Any deterioration in these systems represents a deterioration in the human prospect."

During this decade, Brown says, food shortages have led to temporary rises in death rates in at least a dozen countries.

"Indeed, the lives lost to the increase in hunger may exceed the combat casualties in all the international conflicts of the past two decades," he says.

'Rent-a-gorilla'

Bodyguard industry is showing its muscle

PARIS (AP) — "Rent-A-Gorilla" firms are beating their chests in Paris, muscling in on the violence trend by offering male and female bodyguards for as little as $10 an hour.

Budo Brothers, a 3-year-old protection outfit, opened a women's branch called Budo Sisters early in 1977. A third firm, KO!, recently entered the field.

All offer employees skilled in a variety of martial arts and languages. Emphasis is also put on good grooming and athletic appearance.

"This is a profession like any other," Sully Desplan, director of Budo Brothers and Budo Sisters, said in an interview. "There's nothing secret or illegal about it. There's a problem of escalating crime and violence in the world, and the need for our service proves it.

"Businessmen, politicians, entertainers come to us when the police can't solve their protection problems. We're non-political, and we'll take clients from the left, right or center."

Desplan said budo is a Japanese word designating the ensemble of martial arts. He said he had 60 male and 15 female employees, and that fees range anywhere from $10 to $40 or up, "depending on the circumstances."

Desplan said business was booming but declined to give figures. Asked if his agents carried arms, he said, "only if the occasion calls for it."

One of the Budo Sisters, Catherine Pruvot, a 23-year-old secretary who speaks English and Spanish in addition to her native French, said she had joined the firm to supplement her income. Recent missions included guarding a businessman in Hamburg and a child in Paris.

Claudine Dory, a 23-year-old university student waiting for a job with an international organization as an interpreter in English, Italian, Spanish and French, said she too wanted extra money.

Reverse discrimination case confusing

Rigid racial 'quotas' exclusionary, unconstitutional, say most foes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Bakke's much-publicized "reverse discrimination" case now before the Supreme Court can be as confusing as it is important.

President Carter showed how confusing it can be in a letter to a national Jewish organization that wants Bakke to win his legal fight against a medical school admissions policy he says discriminates against whites by giving minority members unfair advantages.

Carter's letter thanked the American Jewish Committee for its strong backing of affirmative action programs aimed at giving preferential treatment to minorities to make up for past discrimination in education and employment.

The secret apparently is in understanding with just what forms of affirmative action the Carter administration is comfortable.

Carter's letter, made public recently at the Jewish group's convention in Atlanta, agrees with the AJC view that, in Carter's words, "rigid racial quotas are exclusionary and therefore unconstitutional."

Bakke, a white, 37-year-old engineer, was twice rejected for admission to a University of California medical school at Davis. He sued the school, charging that he was the victim of racial discrimination.

Bakke claimed that the med school's special admissions program reserving 16 of 100 openings in each entering class for disadvantaged minority students was a form of "reverse discrimination."

The Constitution's 14th Amendment guarantees "equal protection" or equal treatment for all persons.

The California Supreme Court agreed with Bakke, but the university appealed the state court's decision to the U.S. Supreme Court, which heard arguments in the case earlier this month.

Many civil rights leaders claim that a Bakke victory — even one fashioned on narrow legal grounds — could jeopardize the hundreds of affirmativ action programs in government, education and private industry across the nation.

In campaign for economic democracy

Hayden seeks to place public on land's 'corporate' boards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hayden, head of the California Campaign for Economic Democracy, has big plans for the group which seeks to place "public" members on corporate boards of directors.

But the onetime student activist, who won 37 percent of the vote in last year's Democratic primary for John Tunney's U.S. senate seat, says he is far less certain about plans for his own political future.

In a Los Angeles Times interview published today, Hayden said he hasn't decided whether to run next year for state controller, the state Board of Equalization or the state Senate, or not to run for anything but "to campaign for issues and to build (the) new organization."

Hayden admitted he would really like to run for the U.S. Senate again, perhaps when the term of Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, D.-Calif., expires.

Hayden, in Los Angeles for the opening of the California Campaign's new offices downtown, said he, his actress wife Jane Fonda, Rep. Ron Dellums, D.-Calif., and farm labor leader Cesar Chavez soon will send a joint letter "to the largest list of people in the state that we can afford" asking them to sign up for $15 annual memberships in the group.

"What they get in return for $15 is a newsletter, notices of local political activity, access to our summer camp that we're planning in Santa Barbara and so on," Hayden noted.

He spoke enthusiastically about the need he sees to "democratize" the nation's large corporations, and said he is thinking about proposals to allow the governor to name persons to corporate boards who have demonstrated a commitment to consumer affairs and product safety.

Helmlinger earns promotion

La Verne resident WILLIAM K. HELMLINGER has been promoted to consumer finance officer at the Temple City office of Lloyds Bank California.

Helmlinger joined the bank in June of this year with six years of experience in the financial field. Prior to his promotion he was in training at the bank's Wilshire-Westmoreland Office.

A native of Bremen, Ind., he holds a bachelor of arts degree in German from Central Missouri State University.

Greer Hydraulics Inc.

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Greer Hydraulics Inc. reported the highest first quarter in its history as earnings for the three months ended Sept. 30 rose 78.5 percent on a 24.5 percent increase in sales over a year ago.

Greer President A.A. Jacobellis said that net income for the three months rose to a record $293,636, or 26 cents a share, from net income of $164,534, or 15 cents, for the like period last year. Sales, meanwhile, rose to a record $4,714,586 from $3,785,991 a year ago.

Average number of shares outstanding was 1,131,358 for both periods.

Greer manufactures specialized hydraulic and pneumatic systems, pressure vessels and valves.

Proposed merger could have a major impact on 'finance' trade

The proposed merger of Allstate Savings and Loan Association, a subsidiary of Sears Roebuck Co., with Security Savings and Loan Association of Northern California, could have major impact on savings institutions as a whole, according to a study released by the Applied Financial Economics Center (AFEC) of Claremont Men's College.

Three factors make this outcome likely, the report states. The new company is expected to pioneer in the costly development of electronic fund transfers, regarded by many as the "money of the future." Further, by moving aggressively into the national capital market for funds and by opening up to savings associations the potentially lucrative field of multi-purpose consumer loans, Allstate's example could spur the industry to growth in new and profitable directions.

This scenario for the probable future implications of the Allstate merger is contained in a report funded by the Conference of Federal Savings and Loan Associations.

Prepared by a team of economists under the direction of James Meigs, director of AFEC and associate director John Rutledge, the 154-page report considers all the possible alternatives open to Allstate as a result of the merger and analyzes the full range of possible consequences.

The report lays to rest at the outset one of the concerns that prompted the study: namely, that Allstate would gain an unfair competitive advantage over other savings and loan institutions by opening new branches in every Sears retail store in California.

This is unlikely, the report argues, for two reasons: First, a branch application would have to be filed with the California Department of Savings and Loans for each store, an expensive and time-consuming process. Second, the experience of the industry strongly suggests that setting up branches in retail outlets is not cost effective.

"The market for new branches," states the report, "may be close to saturation in the next few years — the cost of deposit funds acquired through even a moderately successful new branch can be perilously close to the yield on mortgage loans. Expansion by this route would produce an ever declining net-worth-to-assets ratio."

The report sees little threat to the future of the savings associations in the merger itself. It states the merger does not violate any obvious antitrust guidelines, and would produce a firm smaller than several already existing California savings and loan associations.

If Allstate's management followed strategies typical of the rest of the industry, the most that could be gained would be the relatively minor effect of brand name recognition on deposit growth.

Rut would Allstate follow such well-worn paths?

Not according to John Rutledge, senior author of the report. "The proposed merger is only important in so far as it forms part of a larger game plan. And Distributed through Tandy Corp.

Naked mini computers to be sold for the first time

IRVINE, Calif. (BW) — Computer Automation's Naked Mini computers will be sold in retail stores for the first time this month through a new computer store operation of Tandy Corp., Fort Worth, Tex., operators of the national Radio Shack chain.

The two firms said they have entered into an agreement whereby Tandy will sell Computer Automation's low-priced minicomputers directly to the public through new retail outlets of the recently organized Tandy Computer division.

The Naked Mini computers will make their public debut in the first Tandy Computer Store, scheduled to open in Fort Worth this month, said George Dashiell, vice president and general manager of Computer Automation's Naked Mini division, and John Ratliff, head of the new Tandy division.

Tandy expects this to be the forerunner of a chain of separate (from Radio Shack) stores it will build to offer a full line of data processing products, Ratliff said.

The minicomputers will be sold over the counter in small business-oriented systems packaged by Tandy or as stand-alone units that professionals and sophisticated hobbyists will incorporate into their own systems, said Ratliff. The Computer Automation products will also be listed in Tandy's catalogue for the mail-order trade.

Ratliff said Tandy's emphasis on fully packaged minicomputers and systems aimed at small business and professional users will distinguish their stores from hobbyist shops offering kits and components to home computer buffs. He said that Tandy Already offers microcomputers to hobbyists through its Radio Shack stores.

"Our analysis of the overall marketplace indicates that our new stores will fulfill the small businessman's needs for low-priced minicomputer systems that will accommodate his specific applications requrements," he said.

The system packaged by Tandy will include Computer Automation's distributed input/output systems — using "intelligent" cables that enable the computers to work with virtually any peripheral device — as well as floppy disk controllers, operating systems and Fortran and Basic languages.

Applications programs for the small business systems will be supplied by Tandy, which also will provide customer service.

The Naked Mini LSI 4/10 computers to be offered by Tandy are general-purpose, 16-bit minicomputers with 4,000, 8,000 or 12,000 words of memory, expandable to 64,000 words.

"The Tandy agreement is the same as we have with our large-volume OEM customers, who either incorporate the Naked Mini into systems for resale or for their own use," Dashiell explained. "Tandy is, in essence, doing the same thing as our traditional customer base except that they are selling into the retail market.

(The Naked Mini computer is so-called because it was originally conceived as a low-cost computer on a circuit board that could easily be designed into a system as a component. Naked Mini computers are also sold fully packaged with chassis, power supply and control panel.)

Tandy views its new venture as an opportunity to occupy a "vast, untapped market" that exists between the level of the do-it-yourself hobbyists and that of the established business systems user, Ratliff said.

He feels that the demonstrated retail strengths of Tandy and the price-performance characteristics of the Computer Automation products represent a substantial force in penetrating that market.

Tandy, with some 6,000 Radio Shack outlets, recently posted year-end sales in excess of $949 million. Computer Automation, which has delivered more than 20,000 computers worldwide, had fiscal 1977 sales of $43 million.

Israelis sharing security tactics

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — El Al, Israel's national airline says it is sharing with at least 20 foreign air carriers the knowledge it has gained over the years on anti-hijacking tactics.

Its officials say that with the recent spate of hijackings they expect more foreign airlines to contact them for security advice.

One official said that while there is no formal course of instruction "we share our knowledge and security measures."

"I think it's common knowledge that we are one of the best in this field," he added.

El Al Prèsident Mordechai Ben-Ari is scheduled to lecture on security to 120 airline executives at an International Air Transport Association (IATA) meeting in Madrid on Nov. 8. Officials say he will repeat his call for international cooperation on air terrorism.

Although there have been several attempts to hijack El Al planes, the only successful operation was in 1968 when Palestinians hijacked an El Al to Algeria.

The airline's security system is mostly secret but plain clothes sky marshals are said to ride shotgun on every flight.

During one hijack attempt on an El Al plane to London in September 1970, sky marshals shot a terrorist and wounded his female companion, Leila Khaled, in a gunfight aboard the plane.

According to Israeli army figures, of the 208 civilians killed in terrorist attacks against airliners both in the air and on the ground between 1968 and the start of 1977, only seven of the casualties died during attacks on El Al planes.

A large part of El Al's overall security relies on its stringent security procedures at Ben-Gurion Airport and at its other terminals at foreign airports.

Passengers to and from Israel who use El Al have to be at the airport at least two hours before flight departures to go through multiple security checks.

Airline experts emphasize that ground security "is the most important aspect" of the hijack problem.

At Ben-Gurion each passenger leaving the country is questioned by a trained officer. Passengers are asked whether they packed their own bags or if anyone has given them packages to take abroad. Any suspicious person is taken away for further questioning.

Besides being subjected to body searches, El Al passengers walk through metal detector devices and their hand luggage is searched.

At Ben-Gurion Airport, where terrorists killed 26 passengers inside the arrival lounge in 1972, a motorized unit of border police meets each of the 25 or so daily flights that land in Israel.

Every incoming passenger is checked against a list and passengers with Arab passports are taken to a separate location for questioning.

Merger impact is studied—

As an alternative to branching, Allstate will probably seek new funds in the national capital market, where its familiar name and the backing of Sears will provide access to both commercial paper and mortgage-backed bond markets at favorable rates. Allstate may then be expected to grow at a faster-than-average rate without incurring the expense of new branches.

Such a real competitive advantage will force the larger savings and loans to turn to the same source for funds, the report predicts. In that event, smaller associations, which will not qualify for the favorable rates available to the larger firms, may be caught in a squeeze. The report suggests that federal regulators will have to decide if this course is a desirable one.

Against a backdrop of Sears Roebuck Co.'s record of vigorous and imaginative leadership, the report suggests a probable script for the next development in Allstate's expansion.

Because of the dramatic rise in real estate values in recent years, many California homeowners now have substantial equity in their homes. While this money earns them no interest, they have at the same time to pay interest rates of from 12 to 20 percent annually on consumer and installment debts.

Finding the key to unlock this sizeable horde of consumer wealth is ultimately what Sears has in mind, the report conjectures. Simply, the plan would be to use cheap money raised by Allstate in the national capital market to make loans to Sears customers, using their built-up equity in homes as collateral for the purchase of such major items as appliances, building materials, and home remodeling services.

Although interest rates on the refinanced mortgage would be higher than conventional mortgage rates, they would be substantially lower than the rates customer now pay when they use bank credit cards. Thus both the homeowner and Allstate would benefit, the former from lower interest rates, the latter from higher earnings and lower risk. Sears, too, would profit from increased sales of durable goods and home improvement services.

"If this happens," the report states, "we expect the other firms in the industry to quickly follow suit, offering inexpensive refinancing services to their loan customers."

The final step in the game plan imagined for Allstate would be the development and implementation of a fully automated credit-transfer system for California.

Allstate would place unmanned credit-transfer terminals in each Sears retail store. Funds could be transferred, at the customer's request, from his account (at Allstate or some other participating institution) to the Sears account at Allstate. Sears retail stores would benefit from these terminals by the reduced cost of processing transactions. They could keep less cash on hand and run less risk than with payment by check. Allstate would benefit by holding Sears funds on deposit and by receiving service fees from the Sears retail operation.

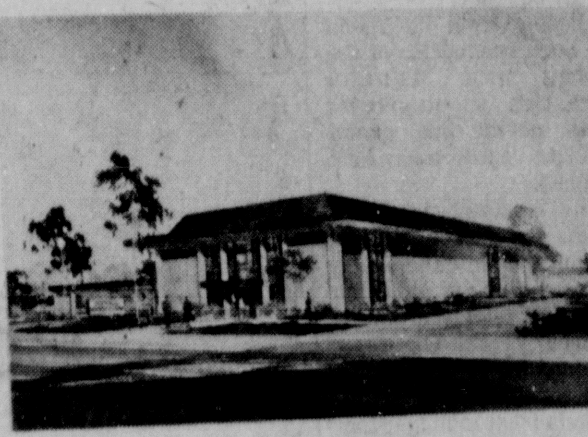
PORPOISE

. . . the valley's newest furniture store, held grand opening ceremonies Saturday and Sunday, October 29 and 30, with special store opening prices.

Located at 1705 West Garvey Blvd., former site of the Department of Motor Vehicles, the Covina store carries a complete line of flotation sleep systems and innerspring mattresses as well as solid wood, hand crafted bedroom, living room, and dining room furniture. According to store manager Gary Baylis, who also manages the original PORPOISE store in Pomona, "PORPOISE carries nationally known brands of contemporary as well as conventional furniture for today's varied lifestyles. The ultra comfortable bedroom is fast becoming the most important, the most lived-in room in the house, where one can totally relax."

"Our efforts at PORPOISE are to give our customers the widest possible choice of comfortable sleep systems and fine furniture."

For further information, call Gary Baylis at (213) 962-1038 or (714) 629-2511.



FOOTHILL NATIONAL BANK TO RELOCATE UPLAND OFFICE

Foothill National Bank announced today that it would be relocating its Upland Office to permanent quarters on Mountain Avenue just north of Arrow Highway. According to Wallace D. Gott, Chairman of the Board of Foothill National Bank.

The new two-story facility will be approximately 12,000 square feet, with six drive-up lanes.

Construction is expected to start next week (Nov. 1, 1977) with occupancy slated for summer 1978. The developer of the project is Lewis Development Co. an affiliate of Lewis Homes, Upland. The general contractor is Edwards Construction Co., Pomona. Herbert Kaiser and associates of Los Angeles is the architect.

The bank will be the first tenant in a new shopping center being built by Lewis Development Co. at the northwest corner of Mountain and Arrow. Foothill National Bank is a locally owned independent bank with assests in excess of $16 million. The bank's Upland office was established in 1974 and is currently located at 915 West Foothill Boulevard.

The crew at AutoWorks here in Pomona built this car to compete in the Bonneville Speed Trials held Oct. 2-8. Tony Stone drove the car at 175.78 m.p.h. and expects to do over 200 m.p.h. at El Mirage Nov. 6. The car is lubricated with Ams/Oil synthetic motor oil.

Camera angles: war photography

Lecture-study 'series' begins with a grim, serious subject

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

The International Center of Photography (ICP), New York City's only museum devoted solely to photography, started its fall-winter lecture-and-study program with a serious session on a grim subject: War Photography. Its first Sunday night "Interchange" discussion meeting — a nine-week series sponsored by Minolta — focused on two newly published books of war photos plus the personal recollections of ex-combat photographers whose adventures were reinforced by slides of memorable experiences.

The two books in the spotlight are: "The Russian War: 1941-1945" with an introduction by Harrison Salisbury, former New York Times correspondent in Moscow, a Dutton publication ($12.95); and "Life Goes to War" edited by David E. Scherman, a Time-Life Television Book from Little, Brown & Co., Boston ($19.95).

Cornell Capa, director of ICP, introduced John Macrae III, American editor of "The Russian War." He reported seeing the original edition of the book in Czechoslovakia and was moved to have it published in the United States. It contains 128 graphic examples of combat photojournalism from the cameras of 22 Russian photographers, a body of work that has not been seen in the West till now. It makes a powerful exhibition on display at ICP.

Unlike most American combat correspondents who were journalists, the Russian photographers were soldiers who often alternated between firing their guns and shooting with their cameras. They were involved in the fields of action, participating in the early defeats and severe deprivations that were suffered during the siege of Leningrad and the battle for Moscow before the eventual victories that led to the capture of Berlin.

Inevitably, some outstanding Russian photos bore striking similarities to some of our historic masterpieces. A 1942 photo by Russian photographer Max Alpert of a regimental commander urging his men into action, one arm raised and the other arm extended, has been compared to Robert Capa's classic 1936 image of a Spanish Loyalist soldier, with arms outstretched, at the moment of death. Another remarkable coincidence took place in 1945. Yevgani Khaldei's picture of a Red Army soldier waving the Soviet flag over the fallen Reichstag in Berlin was taken in May. It is the Russian equivalent of the famous photo made by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal on Feb. 23rd, showing Marines raising the American flag over Iwo Jima, a picture that won the 1945 Pulitzer Prize and every other photojournalistic award.

The ICP audience saw a slide show selection of the Russian war photography and also heard from a former Russian tank commander who often ferried photographers in their battle coverage. He said that in the early years of the German-Russian war when the tide of battle was against them, censorship prevailed which prevented publication of photos which showed death and destruction of the Soviet countryside. Later, to boost morale, inspirational photos like those by Alpert and Khaldei were wid- widely distributed in the Soviet Union.

It was noted that "The Russian War" was not published in the Soviet Union. Two Czech editors, Daniela Mrazkova and Vladimir Remes selected the photos and the book was first published in Prague. It is a powerful pictorial tribute to the stamina of the Russian people and the courage and ability of the Russian photographers.

"Life Goes to War" is an American view of World War II from its beginnings in the Spanish Civil War in 1936 until it ended nine years later with the Japanese surrender ceremony aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay. It is panoramic in its view, encyclopedic in its scope and shows a world at war through incidents and individuals at the areas of conflict and also at the homefronts.

Outstanding photos from the book were fleshed out with personal reports from some of the photographers whose contributions are part of the record:

David Scherman, editor of "Life Goes to War," was himself a combat photographer from 1941 to 1947. Ralph Morse, Life's youngest war correspondent, covered Gen. Patton's campaign in Europe; was the only civilian photographer who recorded the German surrender to Eisenhower; and he covered DeGaulle's triumphant entry into Paris. He also landed with the Marines at Guadalcanal and took part in Col. Doolittle's Shangri-La raid on Tokyo.

Slim Aarons enlivened the proceedings with his adventures as combat photographer for YANK magazine in Europe, Africa, Asia and the Middle East. W. Eugene Smith, world-famous master of the photo essay was eloquent but brief with his conviction of war's inhumanity and futility. He was at Saipan and Iwo Jima and was wounded seriously later at Okinawa by a shell fragment.

John Phillips covered Tito's partisans in Yugoslavia for Life and then continued shooting from behind the Iron Curtain after the war. His coverage in 1948 of the destruction of the Jewish quarter in Jerusalem was continued 27 years later with photos of Israeli survivors. The result: a brilliant book, "A Will to Survive" which has also become a globe-circling exhibition.

Life correspondents Bill Walton and Bernard Hoffman recalled being dropped behind enemy lines. Walton, over-equipped, threw away two cameras he was carrying for another photographer. Hoffman was with Merrill's Marauders in Burma and came through with thorough coverage and without a scratch.

It is generally agreed a combat photographer must be very courageous but some opinions vary. "Soldiers have to take orders," they say. "A combat photographer is a civilian and he has a choice. He does not have to go. He must be nuts!"

Elephant trunk is savored banquet

HONG KONG (AP) — A dozen select Japanese guests began savoring such delicacies as elephant trunk, bear paw, sturgeon intestines and deer tail today as they began a two-day, $20,000 re-enactment of an ancient Chinese imperial banquet.

Missing from the menu are such specialties of the Ching and Manchu dynasties as monkey's brain, gorilla lips, camel humps and peacock tongues.

The banquet is being eaten in a Hong Kong restaurant while the Tokyo Broadcasting System films it for a television documentary on Chinese cuisine to be shown in Japan Nov. 13.

Restaurant manager Lau Chor Pun said he's been preparing for the program for three months, assembling $8,000 worth of food, getting in special gold-plated tableware, redecorating one floor of his place with antique furniture, silk curtains and scrolls, and hiring an eight-man band to play classical Chinese music.

One eye-opening entree — the bear paws — will be served in a gilt dish atop six kinds of birds, including a sparrow, pheasant and quail, to symbolize the imperial "hand that rules the mountains and rivers."

The imperial banquet is said to have originated about 700 years ago with the Emperor Tsi Tzu of the Sung dynasty who treated his friends, ministers and generals to lavish feasts that lasted days.

The modern, two-day version is being served in four segments.

The first, lasting more than three hours, was called the Jade Fall Feast. It is modeled after the banquet given by an emperor to welcome noble guests.

Next comes the Dragon Door Feast, once used to entertain prime ministers and lords. The third banquet is the Golden Flower Feast, in honor of scholars who passed the palace examination. Last comes the Belling Feast at which generals and warlords dined.

Seattle air museum will feature 'early' planes

SEATTLE (AP) — Carl Gustafson worked on some of the first airplanes that rolled out of the Boeing Co.'s "Red Barn" almost 50 years ago. Now, he's helping restore the Red Barn as part of a $10-million aircraft museum.

The bespectacled, fair-haired Gustafson still dons his work clothes to create an airplane display or build a model control tower for the museum. He helped dismantle portions of the Red Barn for moving.

The Pacific Northwest Aviation Historical Foundation is planning the Red Barn Air Park for the southwest corner of Boeing Field, site of the first powered flight in the Puget Sound area by Charles Hamilton in 1910. Opening is set for early 1979.

Howard Lovering, project manager for the foundation, said King County was negotiating to buy the Boeing Field parcel for $700,000. The 5½ acres are occupied by a topless bar and a manufacturing firm.

"For the aviation buff, we hope to have just about everything," Lovering said.

Museum plans include a 70,000-square-foot modular building attached to the 20,000-square-foot Red Barn. It would include an observation deck and restaurant.

King County is supporting the project as part of an airport improvement program. The museum is being funded by private donations and public money.

The foundation now operates the Museum of Flight at Seattle Center. The group has been collecting aviation artifacts for the museum and now maintains a collection of about 20 aircraft in various stages of restoration.

One plane was retrieved from a garbage dump in 1960 at Anchorage, Alaska. The 1928 Boeing 80-A Trimotor biplane led to the birth of the foundation. Harl Brackin, director of the Seattle Center Museum of Flight, said the group was formed as a non-profit organization to raise funds for the project, begun by two Alaskans.

Brackin said the 80-A, with engines in the nose and on each wing, introduced stewardess service to commercial air travel.

"The number 80 played a magic tune with this plane," Brackin said. "It was called the 80; it cost $80,000; and the wingspan is 80 feet." Cost for restoring the plane to airworthiness is $800,000.

The 80-A is a major restoration job, Brackin says. "We'll pretty much have to start from scratch. It was in good shape with fabric still on the wings, but moving and time have caused deterioration."

The foundation still flies its 1933 Boeing 247D. That plane introduced multi-engine, allmetal airplanes to air travel.

Not all of the museum's planes are antiques. The Northrop YF-5A Freedom Fighter is still in use by the United States Air Force and NATO forces. The foundation has the prototype.

A missile and several sailplanes, including one that traveled both ways across the Atlantic, are now museum exhibits. Boeing's Space Shuttle mock-up is a sit-in exhibit for children at the Seattle Center Museum.

Brackin said most of the exhibits would be moved to the Red Barn museum.

The two-story, red-and-white building, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, was barged two miles up the Duwamis River to Boeing Field in 1975, after it was threatened by the expansion at its original location.

The building is now on county land next to the proposed museum site.

"Over there used to be the production room. There used to be a wall here," he remembered. The building interior changed with new projects.

Pointing to a picture on the wall, Gustafson said, "A bunch of women used to sit around a wing and sew on the fabric."

Greece records 'unusual' weather

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece this past summer lived up to its touristic slogan of the "Land of Sunshine," clocking many more sunshine hours than usual and making the season one of the hottest in the last 50 years.

By contrast, western Europe recorded one of its darkest and wettest summers.

Antonis Klisiotis, meteorologist of the Athens weather bureau, said that over the 92-day summer quarter of June, July and August, sunshine hours were up at almost all recording points in the country. Rainfall, at the same time, was down to an all-time low.

He said "an extraordinary combination of atmospheric changes" was responsible.

The weatherman said Athens during the summer recorded 1,069 sunshine hours, up 19 hours from its average. Ierapetra in the southernmost Aegean island of Crete recorded the highest figure of 1,136 hours, up 32 hours from its average.

In both cases, typical of the center and south of the country, it meant about 12 hours of uninterrupted sunshine per day.

Sole exception to the trend was northwestern Greece, the nearest part to the western European landmass. The city of Ioannina, for example, recorded 860 hours of sunshine, or 9.35 hours daily over the 92-day period, down 45 hours from its average.

"The general lack of rainfall," the report added, "made the summer one of the driest in years."

Taking the entire country, it said that during the 92 summer days there was one day of general rain, eight days of scattered rain, and 18 days of local rains, mainly in the north.

For the remaining 65 days there was "not a drop" recorded at the country's 112 weather stations.

Last year, to the contrary, there was some kind of rain recorded every single day in July.

Typical of western Europe's summer was Belgium's announced "darkest summer since 1888."

Carter's deputy is loyal to the boss

Federal management and budget office still in hands of Georgian

ATLANTA (AP) — Bert Lance has made his exit from the Washington scene but his old department, the federal Office of Management and Budget, is still in the hands of a Georgian.

Jim McIntyre, a 36-year-old native of Vidalia, is running the key federal agency as deputy director, and there has been speculation that President Carter will name him director.

It would not be the first time McIntyre served as Carter's budget chief. He ran the Georgia Office of Planning and Budget during Carter's tenure as governor of the state, while Lance was serving as head of the Georgia highway department.

"I'm not campaigning for the job," McIntyre said in a recent telephone interview.

"I'm not trying to be another Bert Lance. There's no one who can replace Bert. I'm trying to be Jim McIntyre and do the best I know how. The future of the directorship is entirely up to the president," he said.

Like many of the other Georgians serving in the Carter administration, McIntyre is loyal to the boss. He puts in long hours and is a member of the old Carter team that ran state affairs in the Georgia Capitol for four years and then moved into the White House.

Short and somewhat bookish looking, McIntyre does not possess the outgoing personality and booming voice of a Bert Lance. He is an intense man who can occasionally relax by exchanging barbed comments with those he knows well.

"He is level headed, competent and an excellent administrator" said one former coworker at the Georgia Capitol, where McIntyre was still head of the budget department under Carter's successor, Gov, George Busbee, when he was offered the job in Washington.

In presenting Carter's and then Busbee's budget proposals to an often critical legislature, McIntyre "never forgot he was the governor's man. He never went soft on a position," said the coworker.

"He wasn't loved by the legislature, but respected. He was not the type to get into fights. He handled himself in controversy without getting into personal disputes."

Now McIntyre is running the federal budget agency, concentrating on Carter's budget for the 1979 fiscal year and on reorganization. As with the budget, it is not the first time McIntyre has worked for Carter on reshuffling government agencies.

When Carter set about reorganizing Georgia's state government, he assembled a team of aggressive young planners, accountants and lawyers. McIntyre, a lawyer, served as a legal advisor and legislationwriter for state reorganization.

A graduate of Young Harris College and the University of Georgia, McIntyre's first job was with the Institute of Law and Government at the University. Later he became general counsel for the Georgia Municipal Association.

In 1970 McIntyre was named deputy state revenue commissioner and in late 1972 became director of the state Office of Planning and Budget.

The obvious difference between what he had been doing for Carter-the-governor and what he is doing for Carter-the-President is that the issues involved are much more complex and the monetary figures are far more staggering.

"The federal budget is very much an instrument of fiscal policy, and budgetary decisions have a real impact on our economy. I'm not sure that was true to the same extent in Georgia," McIntyre commented.

"Issues are extremely complex. A number of alternatives have to be carefully thought through, particularly policy implications."

Even with the complexity, he said, "I'm enjoying it. I'm having a good time."

And, he said, he's too busy to make future plans.

TM devotees conquer gravity?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The transcendental meditation movement has spent 20 years establishing credibility. Now some followers believe it is being threatened by a new claim. A claim which devotees are willing to discuss but not document. That they defy gravity.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

SOUTH FALLSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — They talk about smooth liftoffs and bumpy landings as pilot trainees, stewardesses and hang-glider addicts might.

But this is at the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, a handsome campus of the transcendental meditation movement, and "they" are advanced disciples who claim they can fly — levitate — with mind power as the sole propellant.

"We are in the beginning stages of flying," says John Konhaus, acting director of the TM movement in the United States. "It comes in stages. At first it looks like they're hopping like frogs. Then they become lighter and lighter as growth of consciousness develops."

Some devoted followers think the movement's credibility will be badly strained by the levitation claims. There's skepticism within TM.

Joseph and Devanie Wagner are meditators. She says, "I have no doubt that I will leave the ground." Her husband, a systems analyst for a research firm, says the whole business is a hoax.

Mrs. Wagner hasn't seen the flying but has heard it. "I saw a lot of them take pillows and foam rubber, and I stuck around by the door. I heard a lot of knocking and thudding."

The TM levitators assert they can rise one or two feet from the full lotus, a position with the left ankle on top of the right thigh and vice versa, and then move forward three, six, maybe 10 feet.

Could a skilled gymnast perform the feat? "No way," says Dick Mulvihill, director of the National Academy of Gymnasts in Eugene, Ore. "With the full lotus, there's no way to gain thrust."

In addition to the beginning, or hopping stages, TMers talk of reports about initiates actually hovering with greater mastery over gravity.

"At this stage, we have most control in taking off," says flier Gale Merman, secretary to magician Doug Henning. "Landings tend to be rough."

Says Allen Solof, a daily flier and one of 450 TM executive governors in the United States: "There is a great deal of group consciousness. If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up. It's like popcorn. Once it goes, they all start going."

Konhaus runs the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment near this Catskills community. The guests usually are serious professional men and women. The men wear three-piece suits, the women afternoon apparel or party dresses. The atmosphere is serene, the meals vegetarian and those who smoke must do so outside.

Visitors are welcome to see the flying rooms — one for men and one for women. The floors are covered with foam rubber, and there's more foam rubber stacked in the hallways.

Konhaus says he believes the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement who lives in Switzerland, eventually will allow a demonstration that will persuade the skeptic.

"We don't want to create a circus atmosphere," says Konhaus.

If you want to learn to levitate, as some early TM ads beckoned, bring money.

First, you enroll in preparatory classes from four to eight weeks, depending upon one's stage of meditation. That's Phase I and costs $245 a week, including room and board. Phase II is four two-week courses at $375 a week.

You don't get your money back if you don't fly.

Miss Chun spent $2,000 this summer at South Fallsburg and thought it was worth every penny.

TRANSCENDENTAL TAKEOFFS — "If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up," says Allen Solof, a daily flier, shown at the Transcendental Meditation center in Mt. Kosco, N.Y. Behind him in the center's foam-rubber-padded flying room are Carol Schecter, left, and Roger Deutsch. Solof is one of 450 TM executive directors.

regarding TM advertising has been filed. A student at the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, says he was told his course would take four weeks. Then he was told it would take eight.

"They promised levitation, and then halfway through they said come up with another $1,500," says Steve Rozman, an associate professor and chairman of the social science division at Tougaloo College near Jackson, Miss.

He complained to the Iowa attorney general's office and was blacklisted, he says. "They wanted me to operate on a show-my-faith basis. They told me I didn't have the proper attitude."

Julian Garrett, assistant attorney general in charge of consumer protection, says his office is investigating the TM claims but progress is slow. "We're inclined to think this is a very questionable claim, but it's a little difficult to get students to talk about it."

Konhaus says the advertising since has been toned down. "We're like any business. We use our advertising to attract the public." Though flying is a by-product, it does make people take notice ... maybe even sign up.

Patricia Carrington, psychologist, meditator and author of "Freedom in Meditation," wishes the movement would give a proper demonstration or quit talking about levitation.

"If you're serious about something, you must permit a controlled observation for the scientific community," says Dr. Carrington. "The TM movement has been a very conservative one up to this point. They did a world of good in spreading the word about the benefits of meditation. This is an about-switch.

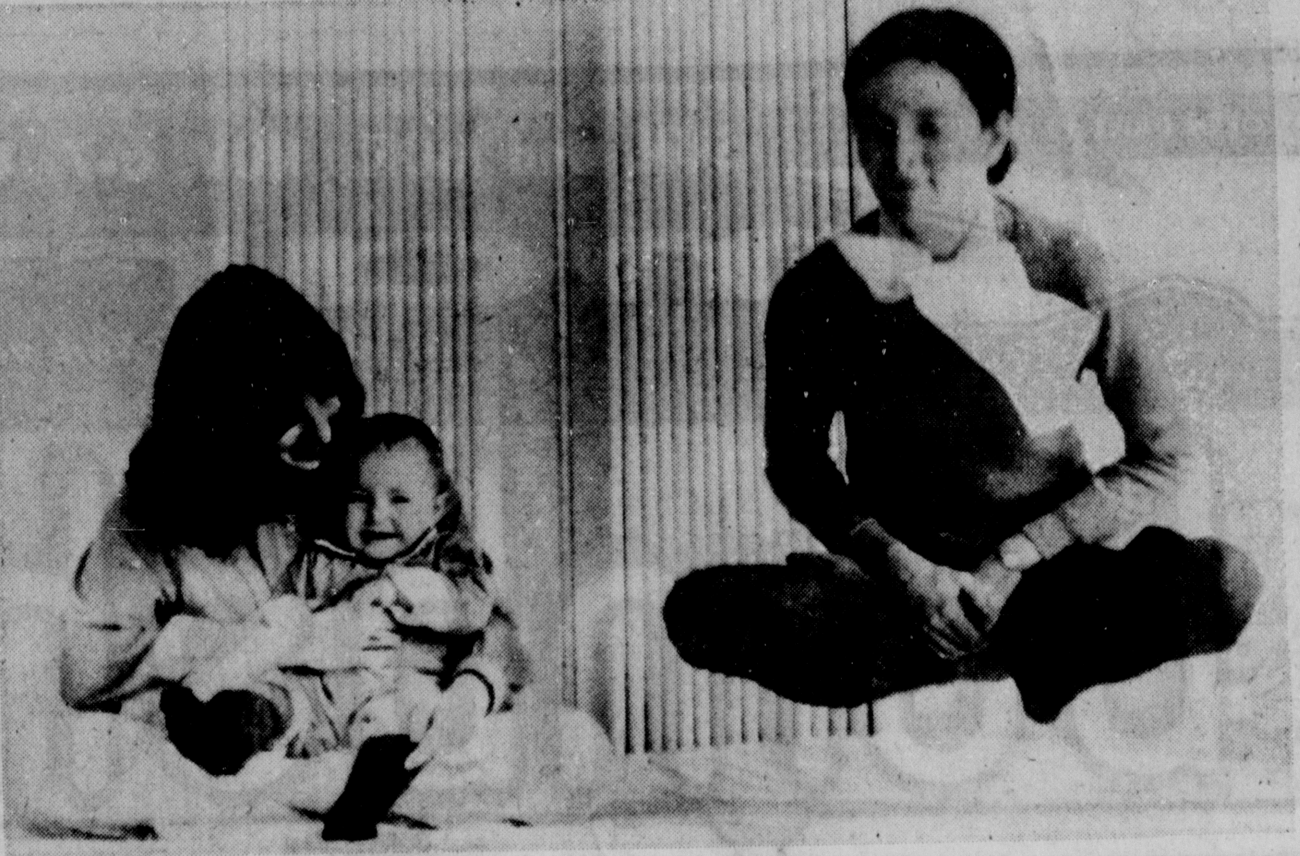
"Even Uri Geller allows himself to be studied. I am just bewildered by these claims."

Actually, the levitators did "show" once — last May at Iowa's MIU, which used to be Parsons College before the college went out of business.

Twenty-two persons — two of them non-meditators — were invited to the demonstration conducted by four young men. It got mixed reviews. Some of the meditators thought they saw levitation. Others thought they saw some hopping around that they figured a good athlete might be able to duplicate.

Dr. Herbert Spiegel, a Manhattan psychiatrist who teaches at Columbia University and is an expert on hypnosis, feels self-hypnosis might be the answer. The people who describe their flights believe they are flying.

Konhaus contends that physical laws have been disproven or suspended before, but Spiegel argues that "the law of gravity applies to everyone, regardless of creed, race, color and TM."



Bye, bye (?) gravity . . .

This photograph, provided by the Transcendental Meditation movement, shows what they say is a levitator, right, in "flight." Advanced disciples of TM claim they are at the beginning stages of flying, and that some followers at TM's campus in South Fallsburg, N.Y., the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment, are able to hover.

You can hunt wild boar

Ohio hunting preserve offers exotic wild game

ILESBORO, Ohio (AP) — You can hunt wild boar, Spanish goat or Barbado ram in a little corner of Ohio.

Keith Fox, a one-time soap salesman in Columbus, and his wife make it possible. They moved five years ago some 55 miles from Columbus to a picturesque spot in Hocking County. Since then they have made the hunting of such exotic animals possible for upwards of 200 persons.

"At first we really didn't know if we would like it, but we were willing to give it a try," said Joyce Fox.

Today, the couple — both in their mid-30s — sell the dream of bagging your own exotic wild game on their 500-acre spread, called the Hocking Valley Hunting Preserve, off Ohio Route 93, 10 miles south of Logan.

"We transplanted the boars from Tennessee, Georgia and Florida," Fox said. He said hunters traveled even farther, from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Michigan. But most come from Ohio cities.

From wherever, they pay a pretty penny if they are successful.

Although he has 420 acres under fence, Fox said that didn't make hunting easy.

"The boars hide in the hollows, and they're real smart," he said. "Sometimes you'll see two in half an hour, and sometimes you won't see one for two days."

The thick, brushy terrain is an ideal habitat for boars. But the brush is a problem for summer hunters because it makes tracking and seeing the prey more difficult, Fox said.

"It's a tough business. You have to work and it's always hard work," he added.

Fox said the real challenge to hunters was getting close enough to a 200-pound boar for a shot. Nearly 95 percent of the hunters are persistent enough to bring home some wild bacon.

Hunters must supply their own rifles, hand guns or bows and arrows. Fox said high-powered equipment is a necessity.

He emphasizes safety precautions for all hunters and stresses target practice before the hunt for novices. To date, there hasn't been an accident with a weapon.

"There's a real challenge to it," Fox said of the hunt. "The boar has the advantage. It's tough, unpredictable and fantastic."

Wagon 'plant' circles market

By LINDÉL HUTSON
Associated Press Writer

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Vern Barnett gives the impression he'd like to pull the covered wagons in a circle around his small factory here and try to isolate it from the modern world.

"I wish we could all be living back 100 years instead of the way we're having to live now," said Barnett, 62. "It's too fast. If we'd all slow down, we'd be better off."

His plant is called Arkansas Village and although its concrete buildings are modern, the equipment inside is old. The finished product is shiny and new, though from a bygone era.

His is probably the biggest plant in the country devoted exclusively to turning out wagons, carriages and other horse-drawn vehicles.

"You'd be surprised at the number of people who buy these things," said Barnett. "We sell all over the world. The buggy and surrey business is really picking up.

"I don't know what's happened, but the plant's making its own way. That's really all I cared about when I got into it. It was just something to play with, but now the darn thing's turned out to be a business."

The plant produces an array of vehicles ranging from a $1,300 pony-sized wagon to a $14,000 stagecoach.

Barnett and his son, Charles, 40, own and operate the factory. It was opened in 1966 when the elder Barnett acquired the assets of Arkla Village, which had a similar carriage-making operation near Hope in south Arkansas.

Arkla Village had purchased equipment from several small plants as the wagon business faded nationwide.

"We bought out the old Hoops Bros.-Darlington factory a few years ago in West Chester, Pa., said Charles. "They were the last wagon wheel factory in the United States. We had always bought our wheels from them, so when they went out of business we had to do something to get our wheels."

It was the Barnett plant that turned out the 61 vehicles used in the Bicentennial wagon train that crossed the country last year.

The inside of Barnett's plant, which has about 15 employes, is a collection of drills, presses, saws and piles of lumber. Barnett's vehicles are mostly wood.

In one corner, a stack of wheel hubs, part of the acquisition of an old plant, climbs nearly to the ceiling. Another corner holds a variety of unused wagon seats made around the turn of the century.

Some of the workers "grew up with wagons" and would "rather work than sit back and draw their pensions," Charles Barnett said.

Vern Barnett said the work fascinates him. "I can go back there and stay all day and just forget the outside world. I guess I can see now that I've lived too fast these 62 years. I can't see anything, especially for young people, better than something like this — a horse and buggy."

Lamps get red light

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota has banned decorative outdoor gas lamps, as a means of conserving natural gas.

Although widely promoted by utility firms a few years ago, the lamps are now viewed as a waste of natural gas needed for heating homes.

The ban was ordered by the 1976 state legislature but was postponed until Oct. 1, 1977, giving time for homeowners to convert their lamps to electricity.

Homeowners who don't comply can be fined up to $500 and given up to 90 days in jail, but there were no early reports of prosecutions.

The new law allows homeowners over 65 and certain other persons to seek variances, allowing them to keep their lamps in operation.

The ban also applies to any commercial use of decorative gas lamps.

A haven for almost all kinds of wrecks

Beyond a doubt, it is one of the most glorious junkyards

LEON, Va. (AP) — You have to hand it to Leon and Gloria and the boys. As Gloria said, "We built this from nothing."

What they built from nothing is beyond doubt one of the most glorious junkyards in the land. It is a 60-acre junkyard, 60 rusting acres of wrecked cars. Not just wrecked cars, but wrecked trucks, wrecked buses, fire engines, hearses, you name it, this junkyard has it, or part of it.

"I couldn't begin to say how many wrecks we have," Leon Thompson Jr. said. "I know that when we got rid of 2,000 of them a few months ago, you couldn't tell any were missing."

"We're not anxious to get rid of them," said Gloria Thompson, Leon's mother. "That's not the idea. In fact, my husband is out buying more right now."

That is because the Thompsons are in the used auto parts business. To do that, it is necessary for them to accumulate all these cast-away hulks, the midden of the mobile society. Indeed, Gloria Thompson scolded her son for calling it a junkyard.

But junkyard is what it is. As an eyesore it benefits from its setting.

You come upon it while driving across the rolling Virginia hills, lovely in their fading autumn plumage, gentle green hills where fat cattle graze and horses stand dumbly behind white-washed fences, every bend in the road another scene from a Sweet Lassy feed catalog.

Then you see it. Not all of it, because some of it is beyond the next ridge, and the next, but enough of it to realize.

This is no run-of-the-mill junkyard. This is a monument to ugliness, a work of art.

"Look at this," Gloria Thompson said. "It will give you an idea of what we have."

Probably somebody just took it from an airplane and came around and gave it to him."

The photo reveals there is some method in what seems from the ground to be pure madness.

Pathways separate the vast acres of wrecks so they look almost like planted fields. "My father just put out 50 head of cattle back there,'" Leon Thompson Jr. said. "They'll help keep the grass down." Nothing like tidiness.

Mother and son explained how the family built up the business, or rather heaped it up.

Leon Thompson worked for years as a carpenter, but cars were his hobby. "He always had one or two around, working on them," his wife said. "Then this piece of property became available, so he bought it and gradually went into the parts business. We still do a little farming, over near Lynchburg, but this is the main business. It keeps all of us busy, me, Leon Jr. and Tim. Leon Jr. is 23, Tim is 18. Tim only works when he is not in school"

Leon Jr. explained further.

"My father would buy cars, work on them, and sell them. When you get one you can't sell, you've got the beginning of a salvage business. I don't think he intended it to become what it is. I guess he was lucky.

"Of course there are some auto parts we don't have. You can't have everything. But every car made has its weakness. It might be the alternator in this model, the starter in another, and so forth. You get to know them. You try to buy wrecks that have those good selling parts. Sooner or later somebody will be in to buy it."

"When people come in for a part and we have what they want, they're always so excited," his mother said. "It's a good feeling."

So the parts hang around the lot, waiting to make someone happy: a heap of carburetors here, a mountain of hubcaps there, and wrecks everywhere, even lining the driveway up to the Thompson's house which is a distance from the shed.

But what about that old fire engine? You wouldn't think there would be many calls for old fire engine parts.

"Oh, that. I don't know why he bought it," Gloria Thompson said.

"I do," said her son. "He bought it because he didn't have one."

Upkeep counts in home renting

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Some homeowners fail to consider depreciation when they decide to offer their homes for rent. An owner must keep a good sum available for home repairs and emergency problems — big things like water pumps, boilers and water tanks. A hurricane also can do a lot of damage to roofs. But often it is little things that add up to a big cash outlay.

One family had been renting their former residence for a decade as they lived in another area of the country. When a vacancy coincided with their own vacation period, they decided to move back for a few months and refurbish the house.

It became an expensive fixup, clean-up, paint-up, even though they did a lot of the work. Through the years they kept up with appliance problems, but they assumed that tenants were keeping the place maintained. In reality many inconveniences were being tolerated, and maintenance had fallen behind. Some tenants fear a rent increase if they ask for service or new equipment.

To begin with, there was a $5,500 paint job for the 5-bedroom house, indoors and outdoors. Because no tenant had put up the storm windows which had been in a closet through the years, the windows had taken "quite a beating" and a lot of puttying and trim work had to be done, an expensive, time-consuming job. "And why in the world wouldn't tenants use storm windows in these days of high-cost energy?" asked the owner. It may not have been laziness, it may well have been ignorance.

The kitchen needed a major scrubbing, especially the ceiling which was heavily coated with grease, and three coats of paint were needed to cover the dark green walls, even after several washdowns. A bath wall needed a tile job because tiles had fallen off during the years and had not been replaced. Dogs may have had free reign in the house and several floors needed to be scraped and refinished. Weeds had come up around bricks on the large patio and a big job was required in that area using weed killer and realigning bricks.

As this owner pointed out, "You can't do a half-way job if you own a house. You must either do repairs regularly and keep everything in condition or you must be prepared to spend larger sums when you get around to general deterioration." That family opts for a regular checkup when a lease is renewed.

Owners of resort houses may have such problems compounded. A variety of tenants throughout a season can make a home particularly vulnerable to disrepair and even abuse. Some people are untidy, but others simply cannot cope wih simple household equipment. Owners should have directions for the operation of each thing pasted on the appliance itself.

In one house at the end of a renting season, there was a non-working self-cleaning oven; a range that didn't bake unless you were clued to turn the handle slightly to the right; the dishwasher knob had fallen off and needed to be replaced; a plastic door shelf in the refrigerator looked as if it had been smashed with a mallet, and its freezer section had a back panel which didn't quite meet its side panel.

Some problems may have been due merely to faulty equipment, one tenant said. But some problems may well have been due to a succession of tenants who simply did not know how things worked or should be used. A trash compactor was a challenge that no one had accepted — it was unused.

In that house, too, windows were propped open with pieces of wood and tenants were threatened with finger injury when they removed props and windows crashed down. Only the window glass took the brunt — many of the small, old panes had been smashed.

Could bury U.S.

It is estimated that there is enough salt in the world's oceans to bury the United States a mile deep, says National Geographic.

Importance of play

How important is play in our lives? Here's a chance to test your views on this subject:

1. Serious personal involvement usually improves any game, especially if lovers, or husband and wife, team as partners.
True ( ) False ( )

2. Men and women have different views of what play is.
True ( ) False ( )

3. Children should learn that in all play there are rigid rules.
True ( ) False ( )

4. Psychotherapy can help people learn how to play better.
True ( ) False ( )

5. Sports, especially in college, are an avenue to success for many.
True ( ) False ( )

6. As much as possible, parents should direct which sports their children play and how much time is devoted to them.
True ( ) False ( )

7. Some athletes feel guilty and afraid when they win.
True ( ) False ( )

8. To instill in a child a desire to win at all costs can be harmful.
True ( ) False ( )

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE: Deep personal involvement often invades a game, making it difficult for everyone. The greatest cause of stress when playing with partners is a sense of guilt and responsibility which destroys playing technique and can poison the atmosphere.

2. TRUE. This is changing, however, because more women are playing team sports in grade and high school. According to many experts, this will improve their chances in the working world if they choose business as a profession. Dr. Robert Shomer believes one of the problems in marriage is man's and woman's different conceptions about what play is.

3. FALSE. Children at every age should enjoy some play that is free, wide-ranging, unfettered and that helps them learn about their own capacities. This kind of creative play is just as important as the kind that tests their skills against those of others.

4. TRUE. Serious and successful psychotherapy has been the key to restoring the confidence and security of many professional athletes. Psychotherapy also helps those who avoid all play to discover why. Play is fundamental in everyone's life. The inability to play, or to enjoy play, usually indicates other problems.

5. FALSE. Studies indicate that college athletes may be big men or women on campus, but they don't fare any better in the job world than non-athlete fellow students. These studies raise questions about whether college athletes wouldn't do better later in life if they spent more time on academic subjects and less on athletics. It apparently is a myth that atletics is a steppingstone to success.

6. FALSE. Dissatisfied with their own roles, parents may try to change them vicariously through their children. They may push them into sports in which they, themselves, wanted to excel. They also can give a boy a feeling that he's not good enough and should have been a girl, or that a girl should have been a boy. Parents should encourage their children, but should try to help them fond their own way in play as in other areas of life.

7. TRUE. Often players demonstrate inhibition and guilt because they haven't resolved their problems about aggression. This can get in the way of their game and in the way of their life, as well.

8. TRUE. People who feel they must win are self-destroyers, according to French psychologist and linguist Dr. Jacques-Olivier Grandjouan. To instill an I-must-win-at-any-cost attitude in a child is to dehumanize him, not in a game, but in life.

ROSEMARY DONOVAN AND PLATES

Program on plates scheduled by club

"Collectibles" is the title of the program Mrs. Rosemary Donovan will present for the Wednesday Afternoon Club of San Dimas Wednesday at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Stanley Plummer, 416 N. San Dimas Ave., San Dimas.

Luncheon hostesses will be Mmes. W. F. Hathaway, Gordon Oliver, Harold G. Wright and Eric DeMoulin.

Mrs. Donovan, owner of Rosemary's Plate Rail in San Dimas, will discuss and display limited editions of fine plates, crystal, lithographs and bells.

As a commemorative of the treasures of King Tut's tomb to be displayed next February at the Los Angeles County Art Museum, Mrs. Donovan will feature a fine, handblown crystal King Tut plate, a crystal bell and a crystal thimble.

Her program will highlight new 1977 plate editions of "She Walks in Beauty," "Rainy Days," and two plates from the Don Ruffin series.

Mrs. Loren Wendt, Mrs. Robert Jensen and Mrs. Thomas Gore are announcing the programs for the remainder of the year.

A dine-out meeting is planned Dec. 14 for members and husbands. The program will be presented by a Barbershop Quartet.

On Jan. 11 the program will be "Achievements of American Women" with member participation. The Rev. John Hewitt of Arcadia Presbyterian Church will show slides and speak on the Holy Land on Feb. 8.

Loren Wendt will present "Magic" on March 8 and on April 12, a music program and luncheon will be held at Cal Poly as guest day.

Club members have voted philanthropic contributions for the 1977-78 club year to the Recording for the Blind, the San Dimas Christmas Basket fund, McKinley Boys Home and the Order of Merit. Special memorial funds were made in honor of deceased members, Mrs. G. F. Harbin and Mrs. Mary Rowbotham.

At-home sewing

Good results can be achieved with permanent press fabric or home sewing if a few simple guidelines are followed, points out the Soap and Detergent Association.

First, check pattern envelope to be sure a permanent press fabric is suitable. Choose a style with straight lines and minimum seams and details. Avoid frills and fullness. Cotton-covered polyester thread is desirable; it "gives" with the fabric. Preshrink zipper, tape and any interfacings used. To prevent seam puckering when garment is laundered, relax the tension on the sewing machine and guide fabric through very gently, without forcing or pulling. Ease zipper in to reduce chance of puckering. Steam press seams with an iron, testing first with a scrap of material for amount of heat which can be applied. For care after use, wash the garment with other permanent press clothes. When tumble drying, promptly remove the item as soon as the appliance stops, to prevent wrinkling.

Luncheon scheduled Tuesday

Claremont United Methodist Women will meet in the Round Building of the church Tuesday at 10 a.m. The meeting will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the organization.

During the session new members who have joined the unit during the last year will be honored. Mrs. Ruth Fiske will direct a short memorial service and pledge service.

Child care will be available upon request by calling Mrs. James Lightfoot, 621-2103.

Claremont club to hear vocalist

The program for the Woman's Club of Claremont luncheon at noon, Wednesday, in the clubhouse will be presented by Adrienne Biggi. A mezzo-soprano, she will entertain with music in colorful costumes and with imaginative props. She will be accompanied by the widely known pianist, Jean Waste.

A native Californian, Miss Biggi majored in music at Bakersfield College. Her appearances in numerous musical comedies and light operas have included "Brigadoon," "Naughty Marietta," "The Mikado," and "South Pacific."

Mrs. Lewis Craswell is chairman for the luncheon, and reservations are to be made with Mrs. Azalea George, 624-7495.

Rothe-Senoglio

Wayne Book photo

MRS. JONATHAN ROTHE

Padua Hills garden theater was the setting for the marriage of Miss Debbie Lee Senoglio of West Covina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Senoglio of Claremont, to Jonathan Rothe of West Covina.

The afternoon ceremony was read by the Rev. John Gingrich.

Maid of honor was Miss Karren Ganstwig of Van Nuys. Flower girls were Amy Rothe, Christi Rothe and Rebeka Rothe. Bill Rothe was the ring bearer.

Tony Sandell was best man.

A reception in the theater garden followed the ceremony.

Question is: who pays what?

Of all the problems involved in planning that perfect wedding, one of the knottiest can be: who pays for what?

Although custom is rapidly falling by the wayside in these times of upheaval, it's a good idea to be aware of traditional rules regarding financial responsibility for wedding expenses, if only for use as guidelines.

For instance, the bride's wedding dress, probably one of the first expenses involved after the engagement ring, is purchased by the bride's family. (The groom-to-be is responsible for the engagement ring, of course.) Her trousseau is also purchased by her family, as are the wedding invitations and announcements.

The bride's family is virtually responsible for the wedding itself, being expected to pick up the tab for rental of the church, fees for the organist, flowers and carpet for the church, not to mention the entire cost of the reception.

The groom's family, on the other hand, gets off lightly with paying for the rehearsal dinner, if they wish. If not, guess who gets to pay the bill: the bride's family, again.

The bride herself is expected to assume some expenses: gifts for her attendants, the groom's wedding ring and gift, plus accommodations for her out-of-town attendants.

The groom is responsible for the wedding ring, the marriage license and clergyman's fee, plus flowers for his mother and her mother, as well as boutonnieres for the men in the wedding party. He also pays for the bride's bouquet and gifts for the bride, best man and ushers.

If he wishes, the groom will pay for a bachelor dinner, and of course, he is expected to pay for the wedding trip.

The attendants' obligations extend to their own clothes for the wedding, plus any travel expenses that they may have.

The families of the bride and groom are not expected to pay for any travel expenses incurred by wedding guests, nor are the bride and groom.

Fortunately, the rules are no longer hard and fast regarding the many expenses involved in a wedding. The bride often has been working prior to her wedding and is able to assume some of the costs for her family, and it is not unusual for the groom's family to offer to share some of the expenses with the bride's family.

Common sense, coupled with consideration, can help all concerned over those financial bumps on the way to a beautiful wedding.

Spencer-Scharf

Miss Darlene M. Scharf of Pomona and Stephen M. Spencer of Pomona were married in St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Pomona.

The daughter of the Donald B. Scharfs of Pomona and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Spencer were wed in an afternoon ceremony by the Rev. Peter Dennis.

Honor attendant was Miss Lynda J. Knipping of Pomona. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Becky Moro, San Dimas; Miss Leslie Pott, West Covina; Miss Carol Spencer, Pomona; Mrs. Tammy Tucker, Pomona; Mrs. Lupe Spencer, Upland; and Miss Robyn Gordon, Pomona. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Lynn Scharf and Miss Nancy Spencer of Pomona.

Jay Mingus of Pomona was the best man and ushers were Tony Moro, San Dimas; Joel Fahres, Pomona, John Reilly, Upland; John Spencer, Upland; Gary Lindberg, San Dimas; and Don Scharf, Pomona.

Flower girls were Kassey Amundson and Jenny Russikoff.

Following the rite, a reception was held at the Knights of Comumbus Hall in Pomona.

The newlyweds have established a home in La Verne.

MRS. STEPHEN SPENCER

DeSanto-Gunderson

Miss Deborah Ann DiSanta of Chino and Ricahrd Gunderson of Costa Mesa are engaged.

The bride-elect, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sabitino DiSanta of Chino, was graduated from Pomona High School. She is employed by Electro Services in Fullerton.

The future bridegroom, son of Maj. and Mrs. Eldon Gunderson of Irvine was graduated from University of California UC Irvine. He is employed by Interactive Computer Systems in Costa Mesa.

A Jan 14 wedding is planned.

Gary-Wright

Miss Marilynn Patricia Wright of Glendora and William Gary Jr., Claremont, were married recently in Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Claremont.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wright of Glendora and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gary were wed by Monsignor William Barry.

Mrs. Nannette Mansell of Glendora was matron of honor and bridesmaid was Miss Cindy Zedak of Glendora.

Standing as best man was Hernando Hennings of Claremont and groomsman was Dave Dominguez of Montclair.

A reception for the couple will be held in the parish hall in December.

The newlyweds have established a home in Upland.

'Thank you' notes deemed essential

After the bride has "oohed" and "aahed" over her many gifts, she will want to thank her family and friends in as charming a manner as possible.

"Thank you" notes are the traditional way to take care of this pleasant duty.

Bridal consultants suggest that the bride write her thanks as each gift arrives, to avoid both confusion and hours of writing later on. If this is not possible, a record of the gifts, with the names of the senders, whould be kept.

When writing your note, refer specifically to the gift and how you and the bridegroom plan to use it. If you are acknowledging a check, mention what you have purchased or plan to purchase with the money.

Unless you know the gift-giver well, include your surname with your signature. When writing to a couple, notes are traditionally addressed to the wife but the husband's name should be mentioned somewhere in the note - after all, he may be paying the bill!

A little thought and care will ensure that your notes are a proper, delightful way of saying a sincere "Thank you!"

Lawrence-McDonell

Newly wed Mr. and Mrs. John Patrick McDonell have established a home in Del Mar following their marriage at St. Monica's Catholic Church, Santa Monica.

The former Miss Lynda Ann Lawrence is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis A. Lawrence of Upland. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. McDonell of Woodland Hills.

Honor attendant was Mrs. Douglas Stotts of Brentwood. Best man was Mike McDonell of San Diego.

Other attendants were Mrs. Kerry Keller, Mrs. Edward Bell, Miss Cindy Bedwell, Miss Linda Roed, Miss Susie McDonell, Lance Evans, Drew Schlossberg, Brad Geis, Ed Jacobs and Van Riley. Sarah Riley and Johnny Lawrence were flower girl and ring bearer.

The couple left the garden reception at the home of Mrs. Suzanne Joyce in Pacific Palisades for a wedding trip to Maui, Hawaii.

MRS. JOHN McDONELL

Selecting apparel for rites

Throughout the year, many people are faced with the perplexing problem of what to wear to a wedding.

Most men will shrug and assume that a nice dress suit will be appropriate for a formal and semi-formal wedding. Unless black tie or other dress is specified on the invitation, a man is correct in wearing a suit to most weddings if he is a guest. However, he may still be required to rent the traditional gray cutaway coat and striped trousers if he is asked to be an usher at a formal daytime wedding. Or, he may be asked to wear the black tuxedo with tails, a formal tux or dinner jacket for a formal dinner wedding.

More contemporary formal weddings feature the groom, best man and attendants in pastel tuxedos and ruffled shirts for spring and summer weddings while dark Edwardian or Windsor style jackets are worn during the winter. A casual suit, sports jacket or blazer is accepted at informal daytime weddings.

Women attendants have it easier since the bride chooses gowns for her attendants. Formal and semiformal daytime and evening weddings feature bridesmaids in long gowns.

Women guests can wear long or short dresses to evening and daytime weddings.

Women are not expected to wear hats or gloves to formal weddings; however, they may be worn if so desired. White and black clothes may be worn to weddings; however, black should be reserved for evening weddings. Bare, halter or thin strapped dresses should be worn with a jacket or shawl during the wedding ceremony.

While traditional weddings will always be popular, many young couples are planning less formal weddings which take place in a private home, country setting or in a park. When weather permits, a wedding may be held at lakeside, in the mountains or by the seashore. Guests should dress according to the location and the time of year for informal weddings held outdoors.

Bridal shower survives

Wedding customs have changed with today's lifestyles, but one of the nicest and most useful traditions to survive is the bridal shower. Shower gifts are a meaningful "dowry" for the young couple, helping with the major expense of establishing a home.

Both the necessities and small luxuries that make a house a home are appropriate gifts. Today's bride-to-be will appreciate many of the traditional gifts of linen, pottery, glassware and crafted items that her grandmother received.

Gifts that are functional as well as decorative are doubly welcome. One idea for shower or wedding is the carpet sweeper.

Boasting a long tradition of its own, the sweeper dates back to 1876 when the first model was created to clean up sticky sawdust in a crockery shop.

A time-saving, energy-saving present for the bride is a thoughtful gift that will be appreciated through many anniversaries.

On tipping

Who gets what at the end of a meal? According to an article on tipping in the November 15 Family Circle, you can count on adding the following percentages to your restaurant check: 15 percent is the norm for restaurants, but unusual service or an elegant atmosphere may merit a gratuity of 20 percent. Headwaiters don t have to be tipped unless there are special arrangements and then $2-$5 is suggested. The magazine also recommends adding 15 percent to the wine bill for the wine steward and giving the bartender 15 percent of the bar bill.

White-Ariaz

KATHY WHITE

Mr. and Mrs. John F. White of Pomona announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathy, to Fred W. Ariaz of Upland.

The bride-to-be is an EDP control clerk at Hub Distributing Inc., Ontario. She is a 1971 graduate of Pomona Catholic Girls High School and attended Mt. San Antonio College.

Mr. Ariaz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ariaz of Compton, is operations manager at Hub Distributing Inc., Ontario. He is a graduate of Dominguez High School, Compton Junior College and Cal Poly Pomona.

The couple will be married March 4 at St. Madeleine Church in Pomona.

Fogle-Kubanis

DEBORAH FOGLE

Miss Deborah Anne Fogle of Ontario and Dennis Francis Kubanis of Covina will be married Dec. 3 in the First Baptist Church of Ontario.

The future bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell F. Fogle of 1317 W. Princeton, Ontario, graduated in 1976 from Chaffey High School. Miss Fogle is attending night classes at Chaffey College.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kubanis of Azusa the groom-to-be is a 1965 graduate of Azusa High School. Mr. Kubanis graduated in June from Citrus College. He served 4 years in the military and is employed by Rusnak Porsche Audi in Pasadena.

Zavala-Hill

ELIZABETH ZAVALA

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Zavala of Claremont announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Ann, to Jeffrey Michael Hill of La Verne.

The bride-to-be attends Mt. San Antonio College and is employed at Vons in La Verne. She is a 1977 graduate of Claremont High School.

Mr. Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Hill of La Verne, is employed at Betty Zane Corporation in San Dimas. He is a 1976 graduate of Bonita High School.

The couple will be married Jan. 28 at Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Claremont.

Davises honored on 25th year

Mr. and Mrs. George Davis of Pomona celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary last week at a reception given by family members for 50 guests.

The couple has three sons, Donald Kleen, George and Robert Davis, all of Pomona, and one daughter, Mary Lou Davis of Monterey Park. There are 11 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The Davises were married Oct. 31, 1952, at Wickenburg, Ariz. Mr. Davis came to this area from Crane, Mo., in 1923 and Mrs. Davis came to the valley from Phoenix, Ariz., in 1945.

Mr. Davis was employed by Loud Machine Shop for 19 years before retiring.

Dyers celebrate 25th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Glenn Dyer of Upland celebrated their silver wedding anniversary recently at a surprise party held in Fullerton by their sons, Richard Alan Dyer and Gary Jai Dyer and Mrs. Dyer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins of La Verne.

There were 50 people waiting to greet the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Dyer were married Oct. 27, 1952, in Gary, Ind.

At the same party, Mr. and Mrs. Berl Ranenberg announced the engagement of their daughter, Jan, to Richard Dyer, son of the honored couple. Their marriage will take place March 11.

Mr. Dyer is a native Pomonan and principal at Serrano Junior High School in Montclair. Mrs. Dyer owns and operates Uncle Otto's Boutique in Claremont.

Handcrafted glass often bride's choice

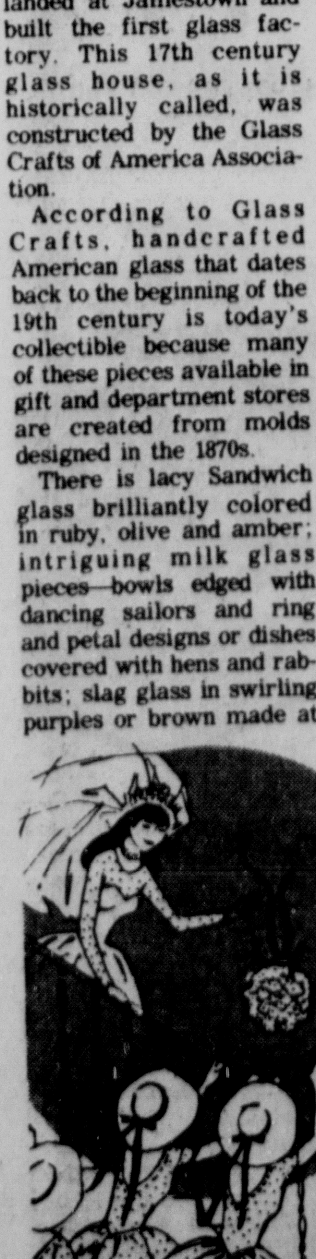
Brides have been receiving gifts of sparkling handcrafted American glass for years—for more than 200 years. Today's bride, circa 1977, can have that same sparkling glass so deeply rooted in America's past in reproductions of Early American designs or totally modern pieces.

Whatever the bride's style—traditional and Early American, sleek and modern, or an ecclectic mix of both — a gift of American glass is a treasure trove reflecting America's past as well as making a bold statement for today's entertaining styles.

It was our forefathers' artistry and skill that shaped the history of American glass starting in 1608 when these settlers landed at Jamestown and built the first glass factory. This 17th century glass house, as it is historically called, was constructed by the Glass Crafts of America Association.

According to Glass Crafts, handcrafted American glass that dates back to the beginning of the 19th century is today's collectible because many of these pieces available in gift and department stores are created from molds designed in the 1870s.

There is lacy Sandwich glass brilliantly colored in ruby, olive and amber; intriguing milk glass pieces—bowls edged with dancing sailors and ring and petal designs or dishes covered with hens and rabbits; slag glass in swirling purples or brown made at the end of day by glass workers; and iridescent carnival glass so named because it was given away at local carnivals.



The original pitchers, punch bowls, candlesticks, goblets, compotes and plates created from these famous types of glass command high prices by collectors, but the reproductions, ideal as gifts for brides, are moderately priced from $5 to $35.

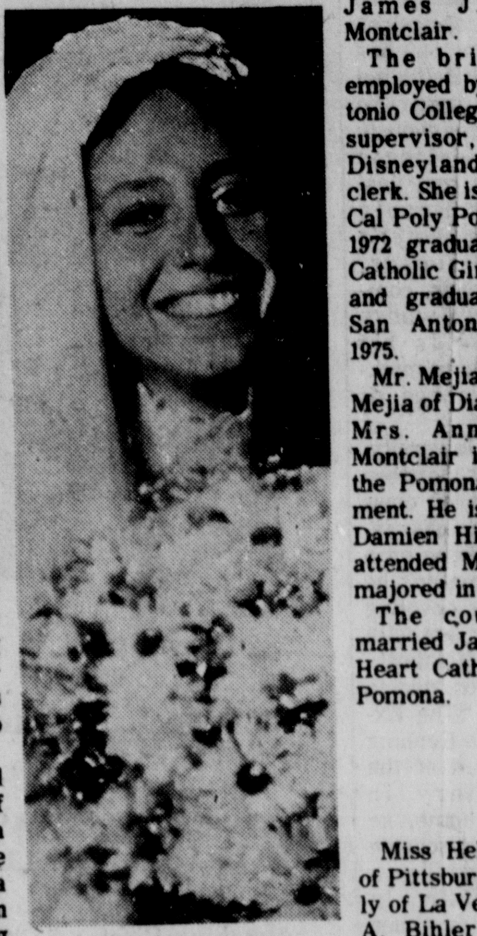
The uniqueness of handcrafted American glass means that it has been blown or pressed by hand, be it antique crystal stemware, a pitcher, terrarium or candy dish. The handblown method probably started in Egypt and American glassmakers are still creating wine glasses, decanters and compotes with the same care and craftsmanship practiced centuries ago.

These bueatifully blown pieces, so much a part of young lifestyles, are created with an iron blow pipe in the hands of a skilled glassblower assisted by a gatherer. As with the reproductions, modern pieces are moderately priced and readily available.

About 1825, American ingenuity created a way to shape designs by hand pressing molten glass into a mold with an iron former. Hand pressed glass has softly rounded outlines, often in eye-catching decorative patterns such as moon and star, daisy and button, bull's eye and New England pineapple. In vibrant shades of ruby, olive, amber and bright blue, hand pressed glass was originally intended as a substitute for the very expensive cut glass of the day, but these arresting patterns made it highly sought after.

The artistry of American glass lives on. From original pieces that command high prices by collectors, to the reproductions sought after by lovers of Americana, to clean lined wine glasses and decanters so much a part of today's entertaining, American handcrafted glass adds beauty and charm to any home.

Mayo-Baum



MRS. WADE MAYO

Sandra Lynne Baum and Wade Hampton Mayo were married in a double-ring ceremony performed by Rabbi Hilel Cohn, Congregation Emanu El, San Bernardino.

The couple was attended by Lisa Gorton of San Diego, maid of honor, an Clay Mayo, brother of the bridegroom from El Paso, Tex. In keeping with tradition, both sets of parents stood with the bridal pair.

The ceremony was followed by a garden reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Baum, Redlands. The bridegroom's parents, who attended the rites, are Mr. and Mrs. John Shelby Mayo of El Paso.

A graduate of Redlands High School, the bride received her B. S. degree and secondary teaching credential from UC Riverside in 1975. She teaches mathematics at Ontario High School in Ontario.

Mr. Mayo graduated from the University of Texas, El Paso, with a master of science degree in physics and holds a master's degree in electrical engineering from USC. He is employed as a senior research engineer at General Dynamics Pomona Division.

Attendants' gifts take careful thought

Next to the bride and groom, the most important "members of the wedding" are the favorite relatives and closest friends the bride and groom choose to make up their wedding party, reports the Jewelry Industry council.

And for such a special occasion, the bride and groom express their sentiments and appreciation with a warm thank-you note and a gift. The bride chooses mememtos for her maid of honor, bridesmaids, and flower girl. The groom expresses his thanks to his best man, ushers, and page with suitable gifts also.

What to give to accompany the thank-you note from the wedded couple needn't be a problem, the Council advises, reminding the young couple that jewelry stores carry a wide selection of items specifically suited for weddingparty gifts.

A bride can select a strand of lovely cultured pearls, or a birthstone ring for her maid of honor. Matching pin and earrings make another ideal gift suggestion, as do fashion watches or pins in gold or silver. As for the bridesmaids, it is traditional to choose the same gift for each, and that might be a charm bracelet with a heart charm to commemorate the occasion, earrings, gold-filled bracelets or stone pins. The flower girl will delight in a sterling silver barrette, a gold-filled locket or baby bangle bracelet.

The groom — who may like his bride to help him select gifts for his attendants — could give his best man an initial ring or birthstone ring, karat-gold or sterling silver tie bar, cuff links or tie tac, or an engraved lighter, or even an engraved pen and pencil set.

The groom might choose such wedding mementos for his ushers as money clips, initialed silver key chains, belt buckles initialed or engraved, or engraved ident bracelets and gold-filled pendants. As with the bridesmaids, the same gift is usually given all the ushers. The groom's page might be given a brush and comb set or religious jewelry.

Gifts from the groom to his ushers and page are usually made at the rehearsal dinner or bachelor dinner, while the bride gives her presents at the wedding rehearsal dinner or maids' luncheon or trousseau tea, or just before leaving for the ceremony, the Jewelry Industry Council notes.

Groom has gift for bride

While much of the wedding spotlight focuses on the bride, it does take two, and the groom does come in for his share of gift-giving and receiving.

Perhaps the gift with the greatest sentimental value is the gift the groom gives to his soon-to-be wife when she accepts his marriage proposal.

While most think of the engagement present as the traditional ring, it does not necessarily have to be so.

With conventions constantly changing and most couples eager to do their own thing, this gift can also be another piece of jewelry or some other beautiful thing she's fond of. Maybe a painting or lithograph, or an exquisite piece of porcelain would be a suggestion.

The groom also gifts his attendants in the wedding party. Again, this gift should be a thoughtful and personal expression with a more elaborate choice for the best man and identical gifts for the ushers.

Popular gift ideas for the attendants include small silver objects like lighters or pocketknives or leather accessories. An extra special thought might be a shaver.

Of course, the most important gift the groom gives is the wedding ring. While this suffices as a wedding present, he can choose to give her another special token of affection, again, usually a piece of jewelry, but there is no hard and fast rule. Whatever the groom feels she would like in most cases is the best choice.

Ramos-Mejia

STELLA RAMOS

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ramos of Pomona announce the engagement of their daughter, Stella, to James J. Mejia of Montclair.

The bride-to-be is employed by Mt. San Antonio College as a tutorial supervisor, and also at Disneyland as a sales clerk. She is also attending Cal Poly Pomona. She is a 1972 graduate of Pomona Catholic Girls High School and graduated from Mt. San Antonio College in 1975.

Mr. Mejia, son of Claudio Mejia of Diamond Bar, and Mrs. Ann O'Toole of Montclair is employed by the Pomona Fire Department. He is a graduate of Damien High School and attended MSAC where he majored in fire science.

The couple will be married Jan. 14 at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Pomona.

Bihler-Keeth

MRS. WAYNE BIHLER

Miss Helen Jean Keeth of Pittsburgh, Pa., formerly of La Verne, and Wayne A. Bihler of Pittsburgh were married in an afternoon ceremony at First Brethren Church in La Verne.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Keeth of La Verne and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Bihler of Pittsburgh, who were present at the wedding, were wed by the Rev. Orville A. Lorenz of Claremont.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Janet Bohart of Thousand Oaks and Mr. Bihler was his son's best man. A cousin of the bride, Miss Jami Childress of Santa Maria, circulated the guest book.

Ushers were Fay H. Copeland, uncle of the bride of Covina, and David Belcher of La Verne.

Following the ceremony a dinner and reception were held at the church reception hall.

When the couple returned from a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands, they established a home in Pittsburgh.

Tier cake originated in France

We can thank the French for the tiered cake that is customary at weddings today. Originally, small cakes were piled on a table at weddings and the bride and groom would kiss over the stack of cakes, trying not to knock them over. A Frenchman got the idea of icing all the small cakes into one large one.

Origin of honeymoon

Throughout Europe in the Middle Ages, mead, a fermented drink made partially of malt and honey was imbibed. On the occasion of a wedding, mead was drunk for a full-moon's time, that is, for a month after the actual ceremony. This time was then called the "honey moon."

Shaw and Roth

Rich potential, poor performance

By CAROL FELSENTHAL
American Library Assn.

Two talented writers have new novels out this fall — both of which are overwritten stories full of overworked characters and themes.

Irwin Shaw's "Beggarman, Thief" is a sequel to "Rich Man, Poor Man," the novel that sold six million copies and was adapted into a successful ABC mini-series.

In a note to the reader, Shaw makes it clear that there is no connection between this sequel and the television sequel, Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II, which ABC ran last season in order to cash in on the stupendous success of Book I. Under the terms of his contract, Shaw was powerless to prevent ABC's writers from taking the Jordache family fate into their own hands.

While "Beggarman, Thief" will undoubtedly maintain Shaw's reputation as a best-selling writer, it won't do much for his reputation as a crack storyteller. The Jordaches seem tired and so does the plot.

In fact, the only people who may find the sequel satisfying are those who wept unashamedly in front of their TV sets when Rudy was shot to death at the end of the television version. The book has a completely different — and happier — denouement.

The sequel, which opens in 1968 with Tommy's burial at sea, lacks the qualities that made "Rich Man, Poor Man" such an absorbing tale — the sprawl of three decades and three generations, Rudolph, Tommy and Gretchen Jordache's valiant struggle to survive and surmount their dreary, violent upbringing in a small Hudson River town.

Furthermore, Tommy, "Rich Man, Poor Man's" most compelling character, is dead. Rudy has changed so drastically — from a man devoted to helping himself to a man devoted to helping others — that one suspects Shaw's memory of his original in 1970) has grown hazy.

But the crippling weakness of "Beggarman, Thief" is that it focuses on the younger generation of Jordaches — Billy (Gretchen's son) and Wesley (Tommy's son). The cousins are flat characters — pale reflections of their parents.

Depending on the acuity of your memory, you may find Shaw's devices for reminding you of what happened in "Rich Man, Poor Man" annoying or helpful. But you'll almost certainly find them clumsy. After a while, Rudy's regular reminiscing rankles. And Wesley's literal search for his dead father by crossing the country talking to Tommy's friends and enemies often results in tedious rehashes of "Rich Man, Poor Man."

"Beggerman, Thief" ends with Rudolph's and Gretchen's futures fixed, while Billy's and Wesley's are still floundering. And the lives of the youngest Jordaches — Tommy's son, born within months of his father's murder, and Rudolph's daughter — are totally unexplored.

Obviously, there's potential for a sequel to the sequel, but not much promise in the possibility. After "Beggarman Thief," it's hard to care what happens to the Jordaches.

Philip Roth's new novel, "The Professor of Desire," is also a sequel — well, actually, it's an antecedent since it focuses on the early years of David Kepesh, last seen as the hero of "The Breast," the bizarre story of a man of mountainous sexual appetites who is finally — and literally — transformed into a mountainous mammary.

In a recent interview, Roth said that he'd tried to write a sequel to "The Breast" but gave up because he couldn't tolerate contemplating his character's imprisonment. So instead he wrote "The Professor of Desire" in which David is still your average, guilt-ridden, neurotic, suffering Jewish professor.

So what else is new? Kepesh is Roth's standard antihero — Alexander Portnoy of "Portnoy's Complaint" and Peter Tarnopol of "My Life as a Man" revisited. Kepesh suffers the same eternal struggle between lofty ambitions and low lusts; between being a professor of comparative literature and a professor of desire.

Growing up in his parents' Borscht Belt hotel (Kepesh's Hungarian Royale) David assiduously studies and collects stamps, but his real passion is for Herbie Bratasky, the hotel's "social director, bandleader, crooner, comic and emcee" whose claim to fame is his terrific talent for mimicking the whole range of bathroom noises.

At Syracuse University, David alternates between playing the role of class Casanova and class intellectual. In London on a Fulbright scholarship, he wavers between devoting himself to kinky sex with Birgetta and Elisabeth, two exotic Swedes, and to his research on "The Excessive Use of the Kenning in the Latter Half of the Twelfth Century in Iceland." Back home, he goes through a miserable marriage followed by a magnificent affair. In other words, life is either sheer delight or sheer disaster. Dr. Klinger, Kepesh's analyst, responds to David's contention — 'I should have gone all the way and become Birgetta's pimp. I'd be a happier, healthier member of society.". — with "Yes? You would rather be a pimp than an associate professor?"

True, you've heard it all before, but it's never sounded so good. Roth's prose is genuinely funny, frequently moving, and he has the best ear for dialogue this side of George Bernard Shaw. Best of all, Roth's Jewish mothers (and fathers) are finally characters — not caricatures; quite an accomplishment for the creator of Sophie Portnoy.

THE COUNTRYSIDE IN CHINO—LEWIS HOMES DEVELOPMENT

Although still several weeks away from its formal opening, more than one-third of The Countryside's single-family residences have already been spoken for by buyers, it was reported by Lewis Homes.

"The only way we can account for this heavy advance selling is The Countryside's pleasant, rural-like environment and its relatively low price scale compared with homes of like value in similarly attractive locations," said the building company's vice president of marketing Randall W. Lewis.

The community centers on Carbon Canyon Road, one block west of Pipe Line Avenue in Chino. Lewis noted that its convenient commuting distance is attracting Orange County home seekers.

"Everything from cedar shake roofs to microwave ovens" is the boast that Lewis Homes makes for its Countryside residences. Purchase price is scaled from $64,000 to $85,000, with possession obtainable on VA or conventional terms.

The homes are designed in one-story and two-story elevations as well as split-level stylings. Floor plans range from 1,416 to 2,223 square feet in addition to two- or three-car garages.

Double front doors, ceramic tile entries, cathedral ceilings and hand-crafted wood-burning fireplaces are decor features noted.

Selection is made from a variety of floor plan arrangements with three or four bedrooms, family room, breakfast nook or eating counter and a private master suite bath as well as a second family bathroom. Some plans incorporate an additional half-bath.

The Countryside is reached by taking San Bernardino Freeway 10 or Pomona Freeway 60 to the Corona Freeway 71. The route continues south on 71 to Pipe Line Avenue in Chino, south on Pipe Line to Carbon Canyon Road and west (right) to the sales information center.

Home prices rise twice as fast as other goods, services

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average sales price of single-family homes in Los Angeles has risen at twice the rate of other goods and services in the area since 1975, says the Community Analysis Bureau.

In a report released this week the bureau said that while home prices rose about 14 percent from the first half of 1975 to the same period last year, the price of other consumer commodities rose only 6.8 percent.

In 1975, the average single-family home was priced at $44,800, with last year's price jumping to $51,100, the report said. It added the figures compare to a 1965 average of $27,800.

The bureau also concluded that home prices increased most rapidly during 1975-76 in areas including the Harbor and San Fernando Valley. Last year, the bureau said, the average price of Harbor and Valley houses was $42,000 and $48,000, respectively.

On the other hand, areas where house values have declined since 1970 were Highland Park, North Hollywood, Van Nuys, Sylmar, Echo Park, Westlake, West Adams, Palms, Westchester and Leimert Park, the bureau added.

Real estate

Seminar-workshop slated

Can't sell because the tax man will get you? Attorney Marvin Starr will present solutions to this and numerous other familiar tax related real estate problems during his nationally popular seminar-workshop on "Tax Free Exchanging and Installment Sales."

The two-day event will be held Nov. 11 and 12, 1977 at the Scottish Rite Masonic Hall in San Diego, and runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. The workshop is designed for real estate practitioners, escrow officers, estate planners and investors, and covers the definitions, rules, explanations, court cases, exceptions and transaction mechanics of Tax-Free Exchanging and Installment Sales. A special section on the new Tax Act is also included.

Attorney Marvin Starr is well known in California, being a featured speaker at the California Association of Realtors annual statewide convention, the legal counsel for several Bay Area Real Estate Boards and Title Companies, and is a favorite lecturer at real estate conferences and seminars, and Universities. He is senior partner in the Oakland law firm of Miller, Starr & Regalia which specializes in real estate law and taxation, as well as co-author of the widely-referenced three volume text "The Current Law of California Real Estate."

The course is one of several in the seminar/workshop series currently being offered throughout the country by Professional Educational Foundation of Leucadia, California.

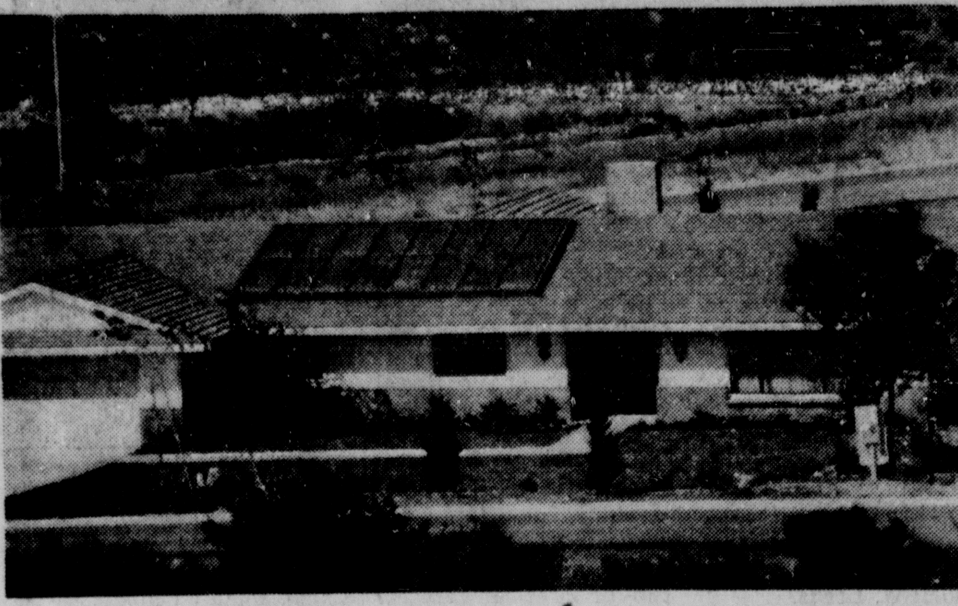
First solar house on display



FIRST SOLAR HOUSE — Opening to the public this weekend at San Diego Country Estates is the first solar house in San Diego County, using air instead of water for space heating.

The first solar house in San Diego County using air rather than water for space heating will open for public inspection this weekend at San Diego Country Estates, 39 miles northeast of San Diego.

Called Casa del Sol, this trend-making 2,547-square-foot furnished home is a Solar Energy Demonstration Project of San Diego Country Estates and San Diego Gas & Electric Company, partially funded by a grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Bill Watt, co-developer of San Diego Country Estates, said that Casa del Sol is the second solar demonstration house at the Estates, where property owners are offered the incentive of a $1,000 reduction in the cost of homesites if they build solar-heated homes.

"Our first solar house uses a water system for space heating, as do several other solar-heated homes at the Estates," Watt said. "Casa del Sol, with its new hot air solar system, is a step forward in solar technology and will give us the opportunity to compare both types of systems."

The air solar system in the $135,000 Casa del Sol was designed and installed by Solaron Corporation of Denver, Colo., through their San Diego distributor Southwest Supply Company. SDG&E, consultants in the installation, will monitor the $11,500 system for two years after the house is occupied to evaluate the performance.

"Our projections indicate that the system will result in tremendous savings in space heating and domestic water heating cost," John Hamrick, vice president of marketing for SDG&E, said.

The solar system will bear 70-80 percent of the annual energy load, with an energy saving electric heat pump available for use during rare periods of extended cloudiness," he said.

Casa del Sol's solar system uses 312 square feet of solar collector panels incorporated in the roof design, and a hot rock storage bed located in an equipment room on the corner of the house.

Air in the collector panels is warmed by the sun and fan-blown either to the interior of the house, if needed, or to the hot rock bed for storage. The degree of heat circulating in the house is thermostatically controlled, just as in any other forced air system. Warm air from the collector panels also is used to heat domestic hot water.

According to SDG&E engineers, the hot air system appears to have several advantages over solar water systems. The air system is not subject to freezing or corrosion. In addition, the air system draws air directly from the interior of th house and back again, thus eliminating the need for that heat exchanger required in water systems.

Located on a large corner lot with mountain and countryside views, the one-story residence presents an attractive exterior of white polyester-fiberglass shake siding with earth-tone polyester-fiberglass shake roof and brick trim.

The non-flamable polyester-fiberglass shakes are a new energy-saving, fire and wind resistant product called CeDurShake. They wiegh 70 lbs. per 100 suqare feet compared to 350 lbs. for natural cedar shakes, and provide a strong blanket of insulating foam. Double-pane windows also help to conserve energy.

San Diego Country Estates may be reached from San Diego via Interstate 8 and Highway 67 to Ramona, following signs to the community; and from Los Angeles via the San Diego Freeway to Highway 78, east to Ramona and south to San Vicente Road.

'Urbanite' groundbreaking slated

RIVERSIDE — Final arrangements are underway for groundbreaking ceremonies at the site of 'The Urbaniet' — a group of new single family and duplex homes for low-to-moderate income families. The event is scheduled to take place on Nov. 10 at 4 p.m.

Officials of the city government and the Riverside Redevelopment Agency will be joining members of the community in kicking off the final phase of the city's acclaimed neighborhood restoration program in the Eastside Redevelopment Project.

"This is a groundbreaking in a two-fold sense," Joshua White, President of Biddle/White Housing and Development Corporation commented. "With the Urbanite project we are also breaking new ground in bringing additional decent quality, reasonably priced housing to a long neglected segment of the population."

'The Urbanite' project marks a new milestone in the redevelopment of Riverside's Eastside area, in which government and private enterprise are joining forces to revitalize older neighborhoods.

"One of our primary redevelopment objectives is to stimulate private investment and reinvestment in underdeveloped areas of the city," stated Douglas Shackelton, Executive Director of the Redevelopment Agency in Riverside. "We have succeeded in doing this with the Urbanite project and look forward to more participation on the part of private enterprise."

Apartment construction studied

Negotiations for nearly 100 apartments and condominiums throughout San Gabriel Valley are now under way by the new Development Division at Herbert Hawkins Realtors. Property for an additional 90 units in Chino has just been purchased, according to Thelma Schultheis, assistant to the president.

Several projects have passed the feasability study phase and four are in the design stage at J.H. Hedrick Company, San Gabriel builders. Among the properties in escrow are land for 12 apartments in El Monte, 12 condominiums on Ontario, 45 apartments in Duarte, 18 condominiums in Covina and 12 condominiums in West Covina.

Last summer Herbert Hawkins Realtors entered into a joint venture association with Hedrick Company to build and sell income units. This new Development Division is located in the Hawkins corporate headquarters, 5770 N. Rosemead, Temple City.

Milos cited as top earner

John Milos of Herbert Hawkins' Temple City sales office was named top earner among the firm's San Gabriel Valley offices for the third quarter. Awards were presented at a Quarterly Awards Breakfast held at Griswold's in Claremont. Over 400 sales associates attended.

The Alhambra sales office received an award as top producing office among all 100 Hawkins sales offices as well as in the Western division of Region 1 with sales of $15½ million for the quarter. The Glendora office was named top producer in the Eastern Division, Region I, with quarterly sales of $5½ million.

Richard LaBella, Audrey Mills and Dave Harryman tied for the title of top listor for the quarter.

Hawkins scores record year

In a record-breaking year at Herbert Hawkins Realtors, sales from 100 branch offices in California totaled more than $½ billion by the end of the third quarter.

As of October 1, total sales volume was reported at $551,422,582, including cooperative sales, according to a spokesman at the firm's corporate headquarters in Temple City. Sales for the month of September alone were $54,904,523.

The Alhambra office again topped the company roster in September with sales over $4 million, said sales manager Jim Papararo. Other branches listed among the firm's top ten for September were North Arcadia, the Granada Hills office on San Fernando Mission Blvd., Temple City, Glendora, Arcadia, Altadena, Pasadena, Upland and Covina.

We're kicking off the Grand Opening of our 3rd and final phase.

It's a fact of life that a good new home for the middle income buyer is hard to come by. For exactly that reason, M. J. Brock & Sons has built the very affordable Centennial Homes in La Verne.

Each carefully created home has all the features growing families want and need. Things like efficient forced-air heating, carpeting in selected areas, butcher-block laminate counter tops, sliding glass doors, laundry service areas, and smoke detectors.

The single-story homes have three and four bedrooms, and one to two-and-a-half baths, depending on the model. The garages are attached, with room for two cars.

Homes are on large lots averaging 7,200 square feet.

❝It's the great big lot that got me. Mine's more than a half-acre — others are even bigger, some smaller. I have that wide open country feeling here and yet, I'm less than two minutes from the Pomona Freeway to Orange County. I've got a boat and camper space behind the 3-car garage — (out of sight!) and we're starting the pool next week. There's plenty of value packed into this community!❞

❝Beautiful quality - that's what I've got. Ceramic tile in the entry. In my kitchen, General Electric range and ovens, dishwasher, disposal and even a compactor! The family room is great with the fireplace, family breakfast bar and all the big outdoors shows through the wide glass sliding doors. And in the back, dad and the kids want a pool, I want a jacuzzi — there's room enough for just about anything! Another thing: the builder set up a guaranteed sale of our other home!❞

❝Now, I can have my horse, and he can have his big corral and stable. And we can ride out the back gate right into the super trail system, then all around to our own Saddlewood Equestrian Center. It's a great meeting place for friends. There's a training ring, washdown and a trailer turn-around when 'Star' and I go to the horse shows.❞

❝If I'm not playing ball at the park or with my family barbecueing at Saddlewood's picnic grounds right next to the Equestrian Center, well, then I'm playing out back. Even with the horse, the camper, the boat and soon we'll add the pool there is more yard left than we had altogether at the old house all the kids love it!❞

Saddlewood located on the western-most side of Chino is extra close to the Corona Freeway, within a mile of the Pomona Freeway, 6 miles from the Riverside Freeway and a "million miles" from the crowded up-tight feeling of so many other developments.

YMF slates tryouts

The Young Musicians Foundation will hold auditions Feb. 5 for conductor/music director-in-training with the YMF Debut Orchestra, beginning with the 1978-79 season. The conductor selected will succeed Calvin Simmons, who is in his third and final year with the foundation. Conductors must be under 26 years of age to qualify. The position is supported by a grant-in-aid from YMF, and is renewable up to three years. The deadline for completed applications is Dec. 1.

The jury for the auditions will include Leonard Rosenman, composer/conductor and YMF president; Ernest Fleischmann, executive director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; Samuel Krachmalnick, UCLA conductor; John Green, composer/conductor and Simmons.

Further information and application forms can be obtained by calling (213) 659-3766.

FONZIE FROLICS — Henry Winkler, the Fonzie of TV's Happy Days, gets a laugh from Dinah Shore during the taping of her show, "Dinah!" It will be aired by KTLA at 3:30 p.m. Nov. 14.

Tryouts set for 'Ramona'

The Ramona Pageant Association invites actors and actresses, professional or amateur, to audition for the lead roles of Ramona and Alessandro in the 1978 production of the outdoor play, "Ramona."

Open auditions, casting, rehearsals and performances are held on Saturdays and Sundays.

Preliminary interviews will be held on Saturday mornings, Nov. 19 and 26; Dec. 3, 10 and 17 and Jan. 7, 14 and 21 beginning at 9:30. Those desiring to audition must send in a resume and photograph (these are returnable) and specify which date they prefer for a preliminary interview. Interviews are held at the Ramona Pageant Amphitheater in Hemet. Correspondence should be mailed to the Ramona Pageant Association, Box 755, Hemet, 92343.

Final casting will be held Jan. 28 beginning at 9 a.m.

Further information may be received by phoning the Pageant Office at (714) 658-3111 mornings.

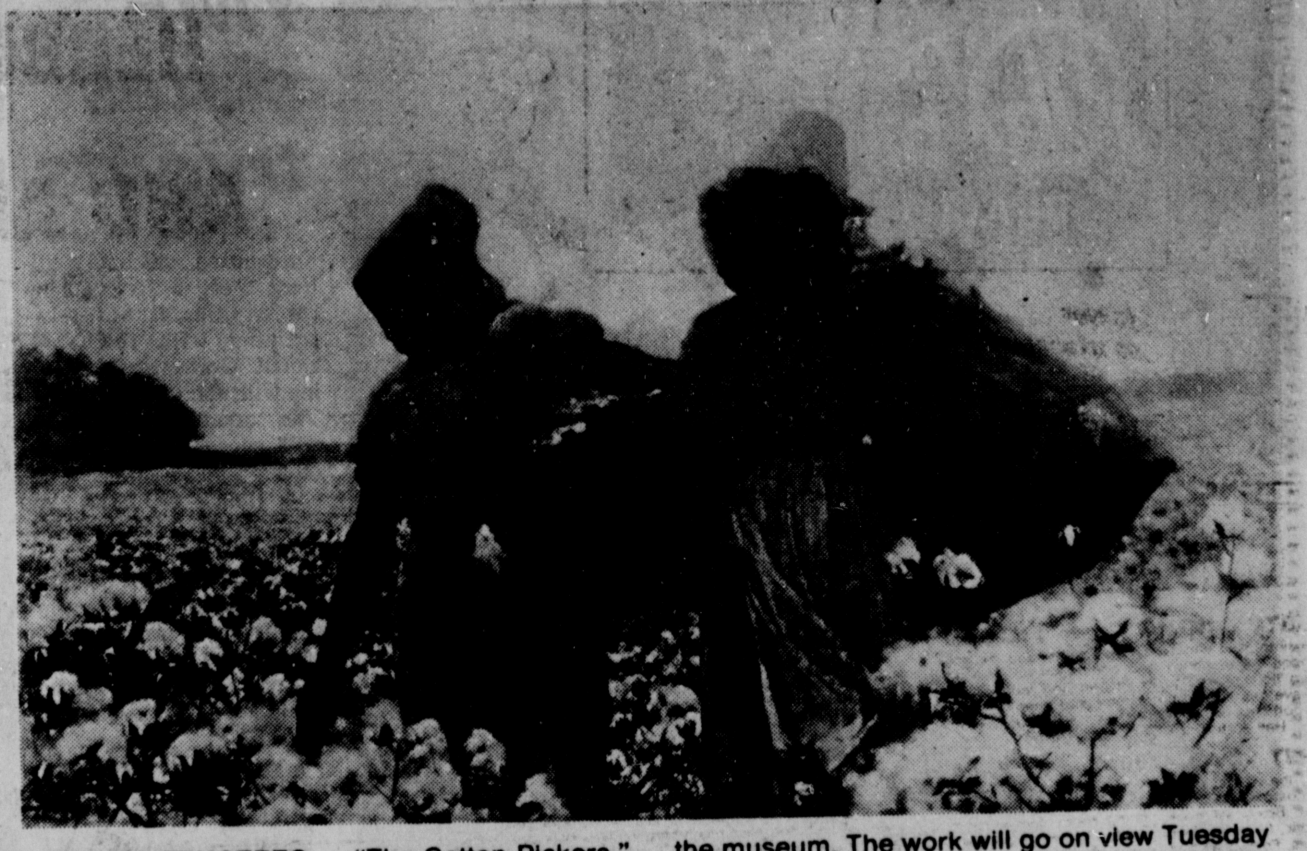
Guild to hear artist

Artist Mike Wienkauf will demonstrate landscape painting at a meeting of the Diamond Bar Artists Guild at Chaparral Intermediate School, 1405 S. Spruce Tree Drive, Diamond Bar, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Wienkauf's art career started at age nine when he completed his first oil painting. Since then he has spent years studying with William Alexander, while teaching English and coaching football at Canyon High School in Orange County.

Wienkauf and his paintings can be seen every Sunday at Griswold's in Claremont, and he also shows and coordinates the art shows at Edwards Mansion in San Bernardino. He still finds time in his busy schedule to teach classes and workshops throughout the San Gabriel Valley.

The demonstration will use the "magic white" technique originated by Alexander.



GIFT OF TRUSTEES — "The Cotton Pickers," an oil by Winslow Homer, has been presented to the county Museum of Art by 15 trustees of the museum. The work will go on view Tuesday in the Recent Acquisitions Gallery of the Ahmanson Gallery. Admission is free.

MUSIC — ART — DRAMA

At Pomona College

Dr. Seuss exhibit

An exhibition of 130 original drawings and watercolors by Dr. Seuss (Theodore Geisel) will open Friday at Montgomery Art Gallery, Pomona College. Admission is free. sion is free.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Galleries of the Claremont Colleges and the George G. Stone Library of the Claremont Graduate School. It is on loan from the UCLA library.

Among the drawings will be examples from the books "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins," "The King's Stilts," "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," "On Beyond Zebra," "McElligot's Pool," "Happy Birthday," "Thidwick the Big-hearted Moose," "The Cat in the Hat Returns" and "Yertle the Turtle." All of the drawings for the book "Horton Hatches the Egg" will be on display. There will also be examples of mock-up books which preceded the printed volumes and four examples of books printed in braille with raised illustrations by other artists.

Also included will be some of Dr. Seuss's work for advertising, including examples from the Flit campaign ("Quick Henry the Flit!") and examples of drawings for political cartoons he made during the second World War.

There will be two unusual features of the exhibition. First, there will be several series of drawings which show the evolution of images from the first rough pencil sketches to the highly finished drawings from which the reproductions in the books were made. There will also be several examples of different images for a project, only one of which was finally chosen. For example, there will be six different cover designs for "Dr. Seuss's ABC," each with different lettering.

Secondly, there will be a section to show how four-color reproductions are made, using examples for the cover of "Happy Birthday." There will be the initial drawing, the finished watercolor and the separations for each of the four colors (red, yellow, blue and black) as well as a trial proof and the final cover.

The exhibition will be on display until Dec. 21. The Gallery is open 1-5 p.m., daily, including Saturdays and Sundays, and Wednesday 7-9 p.m. It will be closed Thanksgiving Day.

A children's party to celebrate the exhibition, "The Wonderful World of Dr. Seuss," will be held Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

After seeing Seuss's drawings with their parents, children will be able to draw imaginary animals or whatever strikes their fancy, inventing names to go with them. These drawings will be pinned up in the gallery and later will be sent to Dr. Seuss.

Gallery slates art exhibition

An exhibition of oils and watercolors by Hollywood artist William R. Gatewood will open with a reception at the Edward-Dean Museum of Decorative Arts in Cherry Valley at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The public is invited.

A former resident of Ontario, Gatewood graduated from San Jose State University and earned a bachelor of fine arts and a master of fine arts degree at Otis Art Institute. He received the Elsie De Wolfe Scholarship Award.

Gatewood taught in Mannheim, Germany, while serving with the U. S. Army and now teaches at San Fernando Valley College and the Palos Verdes Art Center.

Gatewood has had shows in Beverly Hills, Scottsdale, Ariz., New York City and Seattle, and his works are in numerous private and corporate collections throughout the country.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

S & L shows oils

Oil paintings by Ferne Doll are on exhibition through Nov. 30 in the Lobby Gallery of Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association, 399 N. Garey Ave., Pomona.

Mrs. Doll has been painting for 11 years, taking art instruction in Detroit, Oklahoma City, Dallas and California. Some of her instructors have been Laura Campbell, Kwok Wai Lau, Althea McLaren, Jan Muse Crummer, Helen Reed, Thelma Smith and Nona Taylor. The exhibit is made up of still lifes, florals and landscapes.

S.F. Ballet due at Bridges

The San Francisco Ballet, the oldest classical ballet company in the United States, will appear at the Claremont Colleges' Bridges Auditorium Nov. 18 at 8 p.m.

The company is building a repertoire to include works representative of all the great living choreographers and seeks to develop local creative talent, performing new works created by its own artists.

It began in 1933 as the San Francisco Opera Ballet, providing dancers for San Francisco Opera performances. In the same year, the San Francisco Ballet School was founded as a permanent source of well-trained talent for the company. It was the first American dance company to tour the Far East in 1957, and the first to perform the full-length "Nutcracker" in the United States in 1944.

Directors of the company are Lew Christensen and Michael Smuin. Says Smiun, "The San Francisco Ballet is entering a Golden Age. It now has the creative force, leadership and talent to become a company of international status — a company that will set trends, not follow them."

The program includes "Concerto Barocco," choreographer, George Balanchine; "Airs De Ballet," choreographer, Lew Christensen; "Gershwin-A Suite of Dances," choreographer, Robert Gladstein, and the Southern California premiere of "Media," choreographed by Michael Smuin.

Tickets are available at the central box office and Mutual ticket agencies. Student and group rates are available.

Local artist honored

Jerry Stevenson, art teacher at Alta Loma High School, has had one of his pieces of sculpture accepted for exhibit in the San Bernardino County Museum in Redlands. It is a life-size head in clay, called Cynthia and will be judged by William A. Smith, an artist from Pineville, Pa.

The exhibit will be open to the public until Nov. 27 during usual museum hours.

Stevenson has studied at Otis Art Institute, where he learned this medium of sculpture. His recent additional work has been done with Betty Davenport Ford.

Soyer art on display

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-eight drawings and watercolors and five oils by artist Raphael Soyer are on display at the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution, through Nov. 27.

Hemet artist to talk

Artist/teacher Kolan Peterson will give a talk and demonstration at a meeting of the Associated Artists at the Ontario Public Library, 215 E. C St., at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Peterson resides in Hemet where he maintains his studio and instructs watercolor classes.

Peterson's serious approach to watercolor began 10 years ago under the instruction of Robert Bannister of Moreno and Robert Landry of San Diego. His paintings are featured at Chriswood Gallery in Rancho California where he has won several awards in invitational outdoor shows

The San Bernardino Traditional Artists also selected one of his works for the Purchase Prize in 1975. He is a member of the American Masters Society, a group of professional artists who have as a goal the perfection of skill in their craft. This group recently hosted shows at the San Bernardino Hilton and the Edward-Dean Museum.

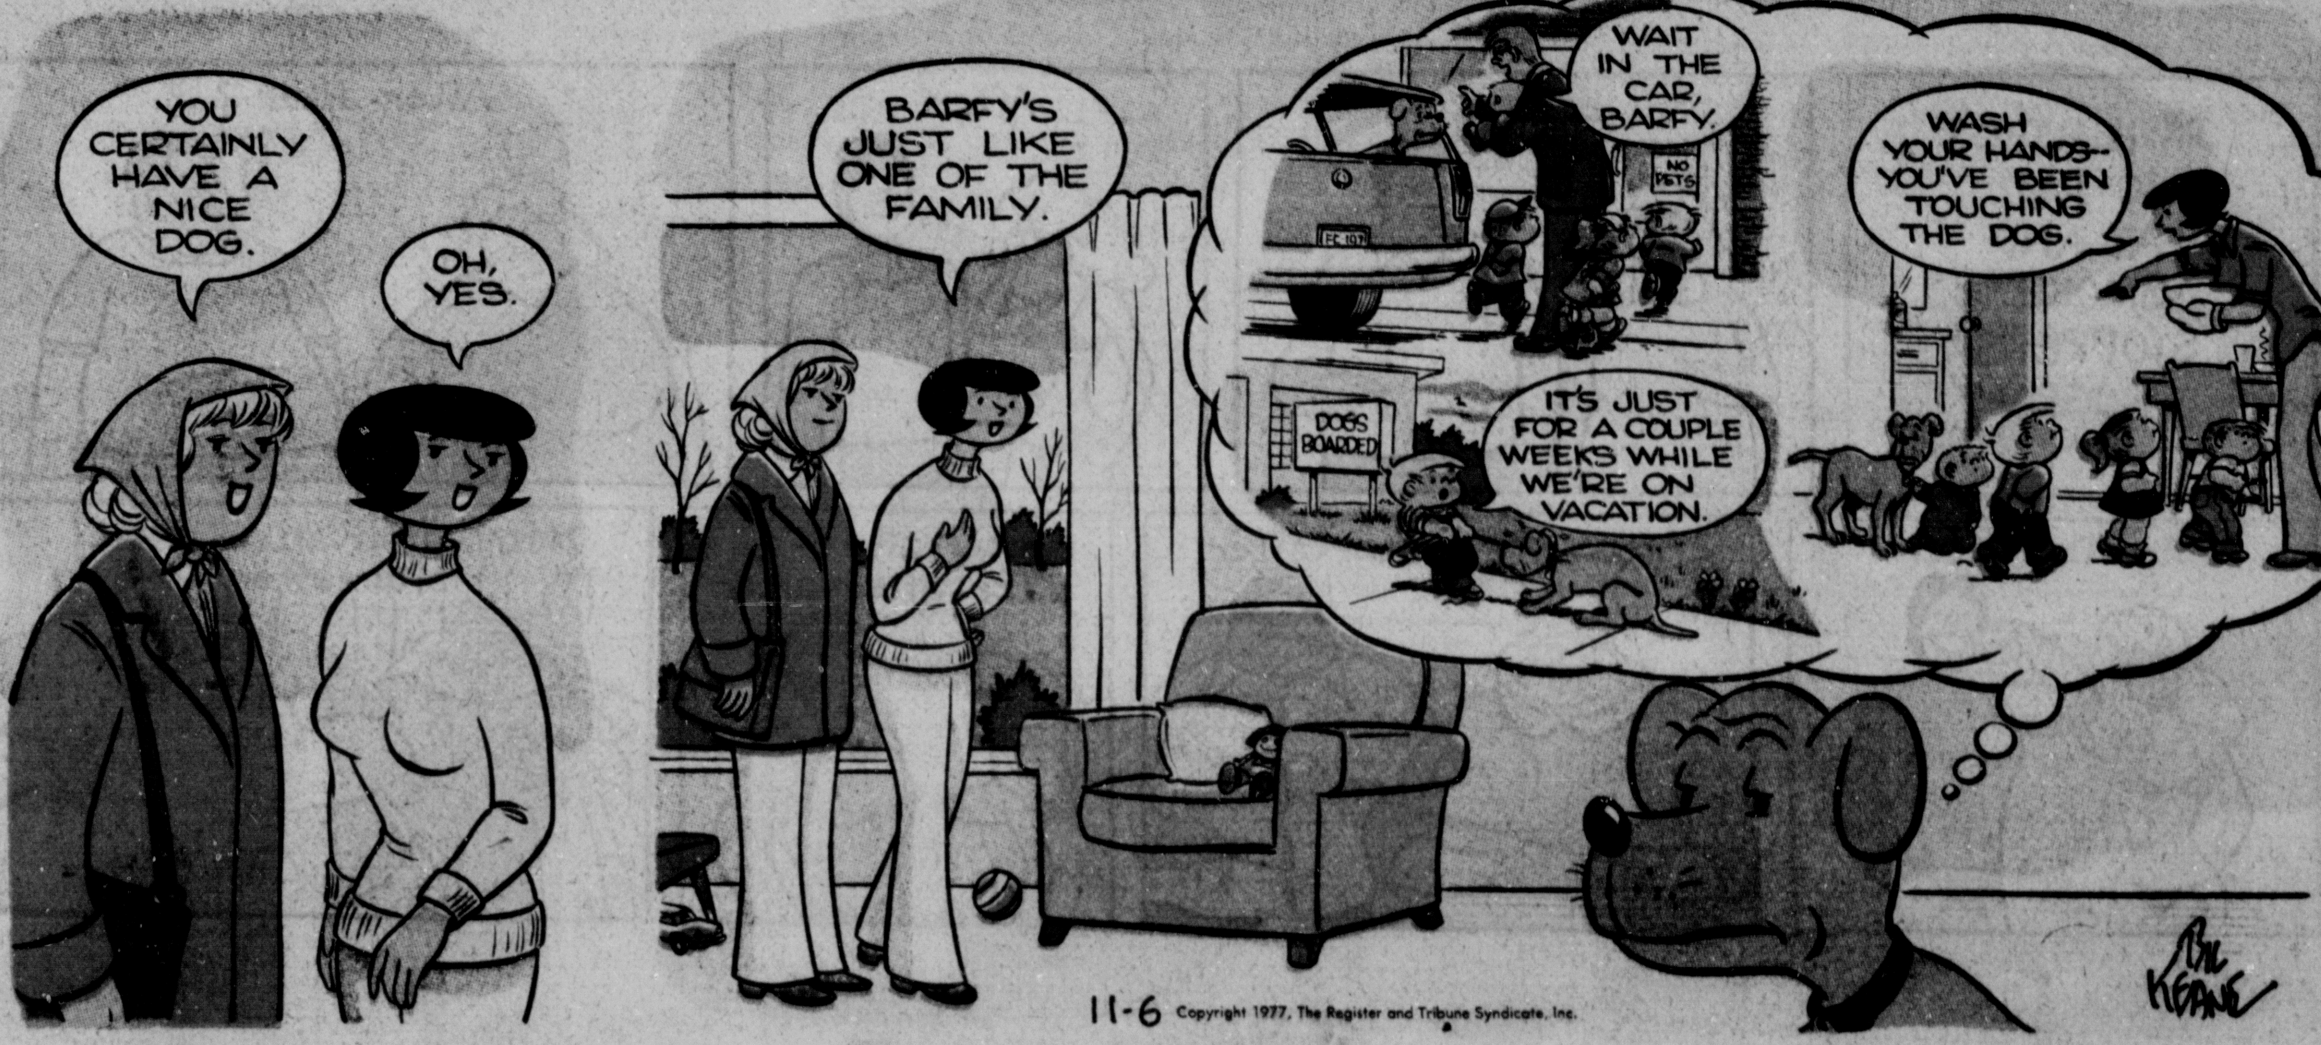
THE FAMILY CIRCUS®

By Bil Keane



YOU CERTAINLY HAVE A NICE DOG.
OH, YES.
BARFY'S JUST LIKE ONE OF THE FAMILY.
WAIT IN THE CAR, BARFY.
NO PETS
EC 197
DOGS BOARDED
IT'S JUST FOR A COUPLE WEEKS WHILE WE'RE ON VACATION.
WASH YOUR HANDS— YOU'VE BEEN TOUCHING THE DOG.

IT'S REALLY GETTING CHILLY IN HERE WITH THE POWER OFF, SKYLER...
SURE IS, UNCLE COSMO... MAYBE WE SHOULD LIGHT A FIRE
THAT WOULD BE NICE, BUT I'M NOT VERY GOOD AT BUILDING FIRES.
BUT I MAY HAVE SOMETHING IN MY LIBRARY THAT MIGHT BE USEFUL...
AH, YES... HERE IT IS.
A HANDBOOK ON WILDERNESS SURVIVAL... SEE IF THAT WILL HELP YOU BUILD A FIRE.
YEP... THAT'S GOT IT STARTED, NOW HAND ME A COUPLE OF VOLUMES OF THE ENCYCLOPEDIA..

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Sturdy denim marble bags can be made by cutting off the legs of old jeans. Leave the hem in and sew up the other end and then run a shoelace through the hem. They are really quite nice. — M.S.

DEAR POLLY --- Paper towels are getting so expensive, so we use cut-up clean brown paper bags for draining bacon and other fried foods. This is an excellent way to recycle paper grocery bags. --- M.D.W.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY --- My cat sometimes chases birds. As this bothered me, I slipped a little jingle bell on a thin piece of elastic thread around her neck, so now the birds can hear her coming. This is better than a collar with a bell. There is no danger of her getting caught on something and choking. The elastic thread will break from her weight. --- CHRIS

DEAR POLLY --- When I make iced tea for those who like lemon and sugar in it, I add a lemonade fruit drink to suit my taste. --- MRS. H.S.

(Polly's Note: When making a big pitcher of iced tea I find it easy to add one undiluted can of frozen lemonade.)

DEAR POLLY — When making French toast I always make more than is needed. The extra slices are laid out on a cookie sheet and put in the freezer and, when frozen, put in a plastic bag and returned to the freezer. — STACY.

ON BUSY MORNINGS USE FROZEN FRENCH TOAST

DEAR POLLY — I have been saving choice samples of my childern's school work since kindergarden, as well as programs and momentoes of special events they took part in. These are kept in a special box for each and when they graduate from high school I plan to present each one with his box for a keepsake. — JOAN.

DEAR POLLY --- Instead of using liquid fabric softener when washing nylon hose, we rub on one of those fabric softener sheets and also do this on our hair when it is full of static electricity after washing. -- LILISE

DEAR POLLY --- My neighbor has many outside chores, so during the cold weather he fills a plastic detergent bottle with very hot water and carries it in his hip pocket while working outside. When his hands get very cold he takes out the little hot water bottle and rubs his hands over it. Thought some might like to remember this for the coming winter. --- MRS. M.E.

VISITING HIS WIDOWED AUNT MAY, TO ANNOUNCE THAT HE'S MIAMI-BOUND TO SEE MARY JANE, PETER PARKER'S ELATION IS SUDDENLY DAMPENED AS HE SEES...
AUNT MAY! WHAT IS IT? WHAT'S WRONG?
NOTHING, DEAR! I-- I'M FEELING A BIT BETTER NOW!
BETTER THAN WHAT? YOU'RE SO PALE-- SO FEVERISH! WHAT HAPPENED TO YOU?
YOU-- MUSTN'T WORRY, PETER! I'M AFRAID I-- FAINTED-- IN THE STREET! THE DOCTOR BROUGHT ME HOME-- SAID I NEED REST!
OH, NO! SPIDER-MAN HAS BEEN HELPING STRANGERS-- WHILE MY OWN AUNT--!
HOW COULD I HAVE BEEN SO SELFISH?
LOOK, THIS MONEY I GOT FROM THE PHOTOS I SOLD TO "THE BUGLE"-- I WANT YOU TO TAKE IT! GO TO THAT QUIET LITTLE SPA IN THE MOUNTAINS!
I CAN'T, DEAR! YOU'VE-- WORKED SO HARD FOR IT! AND I KNOW-- HOW YOU NEED IT-- FOR THE FARE TO VISIT MARY JANE!
STAN LEE + JOHN ROMITA 11-6
HEY, SHE'LL BE BACK SOON-- AND ANYWAY, I BLISTER WHEN I GET TOO MUCH SUN!
IT'S NOTHING, AUNT MAY, TO WHAT I REALLY OWE YOU... FOR ALL YOU'VE DONE FOR ME!
PETER-- DEAR PETER! THERE ARE NO WORDS--
BUT "BUGLE" PUBLISHER J. JONAH JAMESON ALWAYS SEEMS TO HAVE SUFFICIENT WORDS...
YOU SOME KIND'A NUT, ROBBIE? WHAT D'YA MEAN YOU WANNA SEND THAT KID PARKER TO MIAMI?
HE'S THE ONLY PHOTOGRAPHER WE CAN SPARE RIGHT NOW, J.J.!
HIM I CAN SPARE ANY-TIME!
BUT NO VACATION AT MY EXPENSE FOR THAT YOYO!
VACATION? THINK, JONAH! PHOTOS OF KRAVEN NOW WILL GIVE US THE JUMP ON EVERYONE WHEN HE HITS NEW YORK NEXT WEEK.
YOU MEAN-- KRAVEN THE HUNTER?!!
FORGET PARKER! I JUST HAD MY GREATEST IDEA!
KRAVEN'S JUST WHAT WE NEED-- TO FINISH OFF SPIDER-MAN!

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:
VURTRICIA BROOKS OF GASTONIA, NC, ASKS:
"DO GOATS EAT TIN CANS?"
GOATS WILL TRY TO EAT PRACTICALLY ANYTHING, BUT IT ISN'T TRUE THAT THEY EAT TIN CANS. A GOAT WILL LICK OR CHEW ANYTHING THAT CONTAINS MINERALS. THE NEXT TIME YOU SEE A GOAT RUMMAGING AROUND A PILE OF CANS, TAKE NOTICE AND YOU WILL SEE THAT IT IS ONLY LICKING THE LABELS OFF THE CANS TO OBTAIN THE GLUE ON THE BACKS, AS WELL AS LICKING THE CAN FOR ANY FOOD IT MAY CONTAIN.

"SERVING THE POMONA & SAN GABRIEL VALLEYS FOR 15 YEARS"

TEEN-AGE PONY EXPRESS RIDER

Leif Garrett, current teen-age singing sensation, stars as a 15-year-old Pony Express rider who must outrun Indians, then battle fatigue, rough trails and the elements to carry the mail from the Nebraska Territory to the West Coast, in "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion," airing on NBC Sunday (7-9PM).

An NBC program development project, the action-adventure movie was filmed on location at sites in New Mexico, including the San Ildefonso Indian reservation.

Fifteen-year-old Peter (Garrett) lives on a trading post operated by his family in the Nebraska Territory in 1861. His father, Jethro, is a stern, embittered but honest man who feels Peter's mother is over-protective of him.

After an unsavory character named Lefty Slade leaves a foal at the trading post in payment for a horseshoeing job, Peter raises the animal and eventually breaks him for riding.

Peter learns that the Pony Express is seeking accomplished young riders for a difficult and hazardous new route to California and he wins a job after demonstrating his horsemanship.

DIRTY WORK IN ANCIENT ROME

The political and personal intrigue, corruption and lust that toppled the glory of vainglorious Rome unfolds on Masterpiece Theatre when "I, Claudius" begins Sunday at 9PM on KCET, Channel 28.

Based on Robert Graves' best-selling novels about dirty work in ancient Rome, the Mobil-funded PBS series lavishly depicts the society of the all-powerful Claudians, the family whose business was ruling the world. In their egomaniacal pursuit of power at any price, they underestimated Claudius—a dribbling lame spastic whose mind, they assumed, was as deficient as his disease-riddled body.

Starring is Derek Jacobi as Claudius. Sian Phillips portrays Livia, the breathtakingly beautiful, murdering Mother of Rome. John Hurt is the mad Caligula; Margaret Tyzack is Claudius' mother, Antonia. Sheila White, Brian Blessed, George Baker, Patrick Stewart and Stratford Johns also star.

Bob Arthur has been signed as writer and Gary Pudney has been signed as Executive in Charge of Talent for "ABC's Silver Anniversary Celebration," a four-hour television special, it was announced by producer Bill Lee.

The special, which will preempt all prime time programming on the ABC Television Network, Sunday, Feb.12, 1978 (7:00-11:00 pm,EST), commemorates the first 25 years of the American Broadcasting Company's current corporate structure.

Bob Arthur has been writer and producer of many major television presentations including "The David Soul Special," "The American Music Awards," and "The Entertainer of the Year" special.

Executive producer for the telecast will be Dick Clark, who has been closely associated with many ABC programs during the company's first quarter-century.

ADULT COMEDY SERIES

Soap, the bright, new half-hour continuing adult character comedy airing on ABC, Tuesdays at 9:30PM, follows the lives of two sisters, Jessica Tate and Mary Campbell, whose zany families have more than their share of problems and secrets.

Chester Tate, the father, is a pompous business man with a roving eye. His wife, Jessica, is an eternal optimist and for her, life would be perfect if it were only set to music. Jessica and Chester are the parents of three children: two daughters, Corinne and Eunice, and a son, Billy.

The girls have decidedly different personalities. Corinne is vivacious and has a zest for life while her sister, Eunice, is more of a traditionalist and quite conservative. Billy, 14, is a bright teen-ager struggling through the problems of adolescence. Living with the Tates is Jessica's father, the Major, who still is fighting World War II. Working for the family is their servant, Benson, who has been with his employers for a number of years. Benson knows everything about everyone. His tart remarks about the Tates and the Campbells add a not of hilarity to their situations.

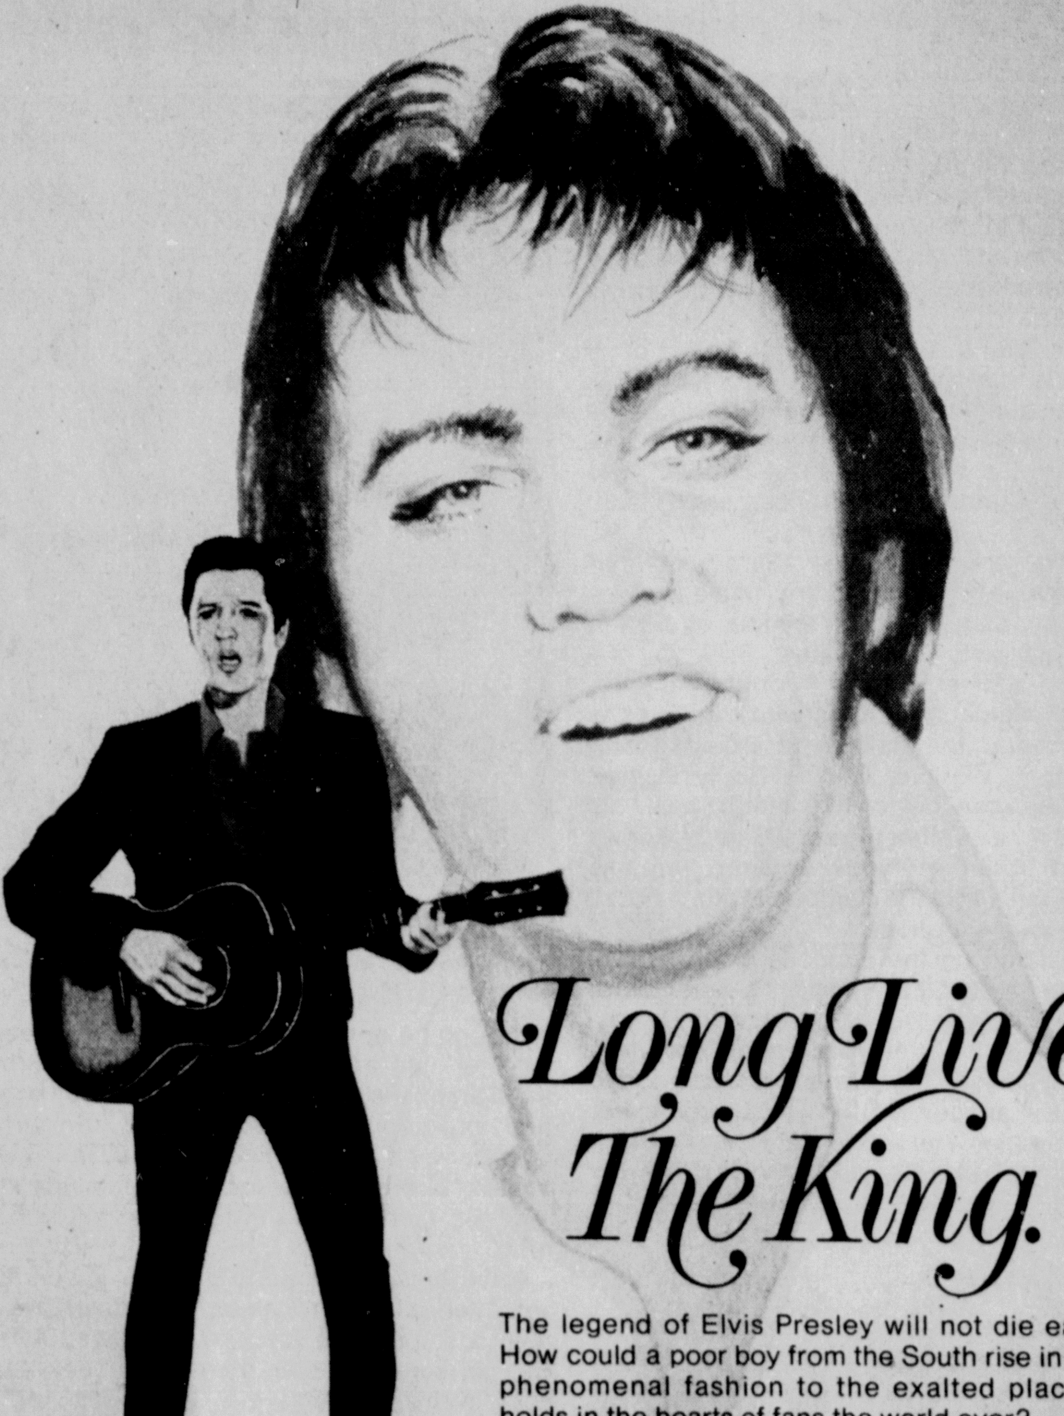
And, residing on the opposite side of town, are the Campbells: Mary, Jessica's sister; Burt, her husband; and sons, Jodie and Danny. Mary's life is a little more organized than Jessica's. However, life hasn't been too good to Mary, a woman determined to overcome her many adversities. Her husband, Burt, is a hard-working man who loves Mary very much. Although he does not make as much money as Chester Tate and will never be "upper crust," the Campbells, too, have their share of secrets and problems. Burt's biggest concern is accepting his stepsons, Jodie and Danny. Burt finds it hard to acceptJodie's special life style, and the fact that Danny is involved with the mob.

Cathryn Damon (l.) and Katherine Helmond are two fine actresses who portray Mary Campbell and Jessica Tate, sisters, whose zany families have more than their share of problems and secrets.

Each episode of Soap consists of multiple, yet interlocking storylines that delineate the relationships of the Tates and the Campbells (as well as some of their friends) as they unfold each week. Through the Campbells and the Tates, many of today's social concerns are dealt with in a comedic manner.

Starring in Soap are Jimmy Baio as Billy, Diana Canova as Corinne, Billy Crystal as Jodie, Cathryn Damon as Mary, Robert Guillaume as Benson, Katherine Helmond as Jessica, Richard Libertini as the Godfather, Robert Mandan as Chester, Richard Mulligan as Burt, Arthur Peterson as the Major, Kathryn Reynolds as Claire, Jennifer Salt as Eunice, Robert Urich as Peter and Ted Wass as Danny.

The series was created and written by Susan Harris, who also produces. Executive producers are Tony Thomas and Paul Junger Witt. Jay Sandrich is the director. Filmed before a studio audience, Soap is a Witt/Thomas/Harris Production.



Long Live The King.

The legend of Elvis Presley will not die easily. How could a poor boy from the South rise in such phenomenal fashion to the exalted place he holds in the hearts of fans the world over?

This week, Regis Philbin will probe the wonders of the greatest success story in show business history and the people responsible for it.

The King is dead.

But his melody lingers on.

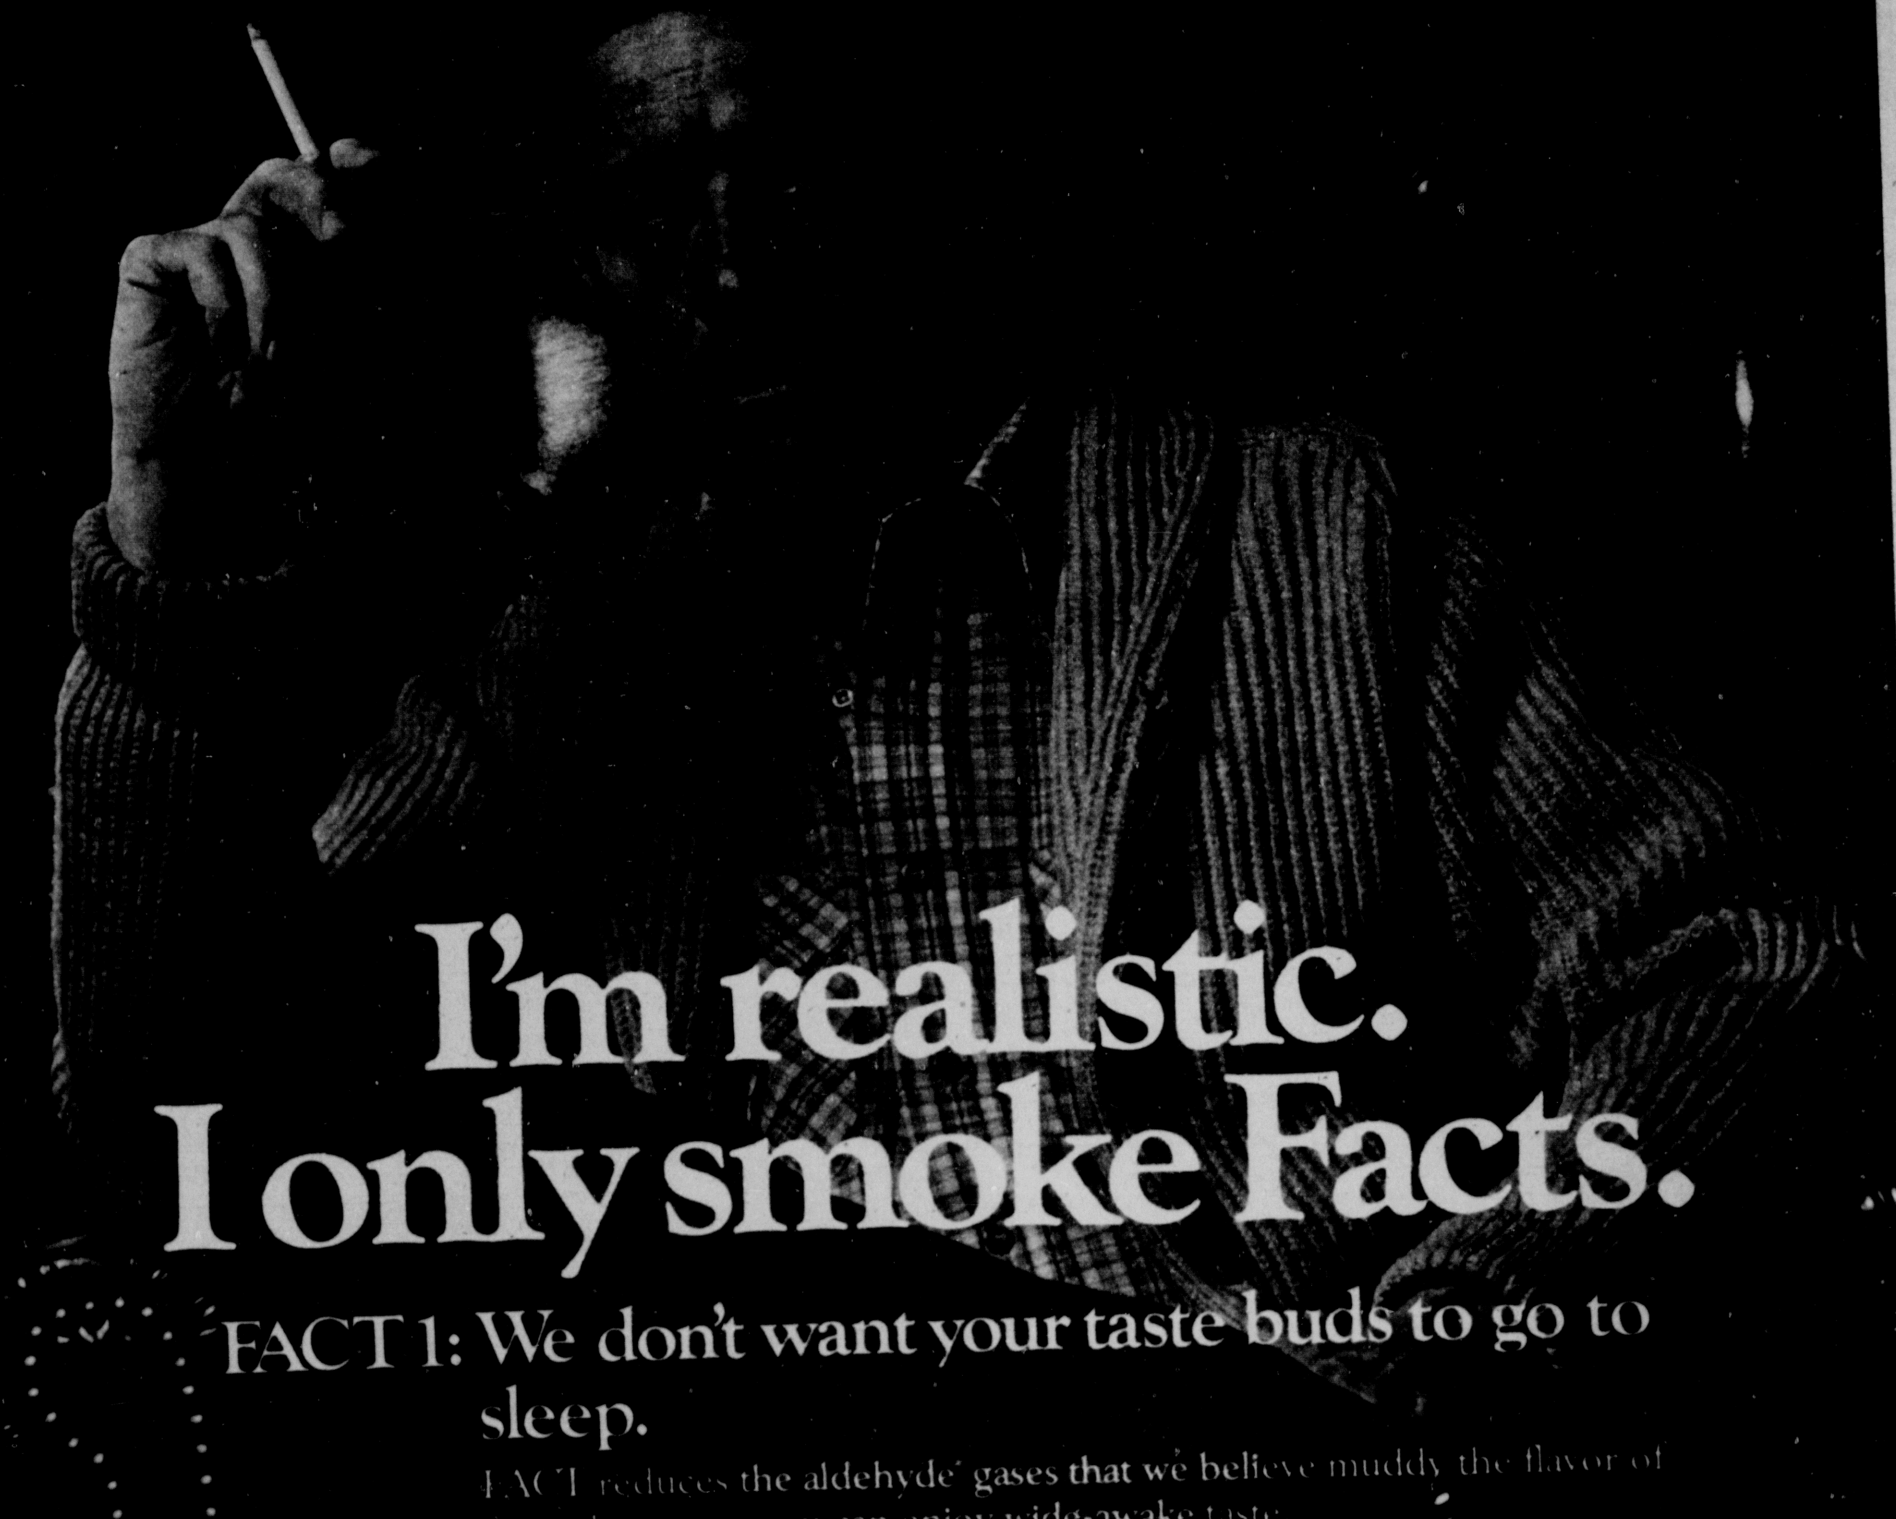
BIG BILL WALTON: LONER, VEGETARIAN, ACTIVIST — AND LOVED BY FANS

WHAT IF YOUR CHILD JOINS A RELIGIOUS CULT?

HOW SHELLEY DUVALL BECAME A MOVIE STAR

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.



I'm realistic. I only smoke Facts.

FACT 1: We don't want your taste buds to go to sleep.

FACT reduces the aldehyde gases that we believe muddy the flavor of fine tobaccos so you can enjoy wide-awake taste.

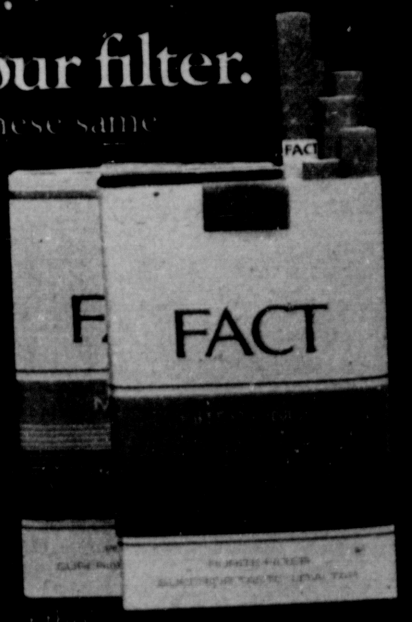
FACT 2: We have smoke scrubbers in our filter.

These Purite scrubbers work like magnets to reduce these same aldehydes and let the fine flavor come through.

FACT 3: We have a patent on flavor in low 'tar' cigarettes: #3828800.

Our Purite filter helps deliver flavor in a way so new we've been able to patent it.

Add it all up. Low gas, low 'tar,' great flavor.
That's a FACT.



Available in regular and menthol.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR PETE ROZELLE, commissioner, NFL

What will happen to the football field when we go over to the metric system? —June Smith, Bridgeton, N.J.

● We contend, and those who are coordinating the change to the metric system agree, that football should be exempt and the game should remain measured in yards. Football, more than other team sports, is based heavily on measurement — first and 10, third and three, etc. And to convert each football field from 100 yards to the longer 100 meters would be impossible because of space limitations in many stadiums.

FOR MICHELLE PHILLIPS, star of Valentino

Which of today's movie stars will be remembered by the next generation, the way Valentino is today? —O.L., Twin Falls, Idaho

● I don't think anyone will be. I don't want to slight Robert Redford, Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman or any other outstanding actor of this period, but it seems unlikely to me that 50 years hence, a major motion picture will be made on the life of any star of today. They're just not made of the same enduring stuff that Valentino, Gable, Bogart, et al were made of.

FOR JOHNNY MATHIS, singer

● Because no one else sounds like me. I'm not being bigheaded, but my style is unique. I'm in good physical shape — that's as important as being in good vocal shape — and I haven't capitalized on my fans. I respect them and don't want to get rich from them by putting out novelties like T-shirts with my name on them — a fast way of my getting richer and their getting poorer.

FOR JUNE POSEN, cosmetician and beautician

Some of my friends believe in long, hot baths and others don't. What's your opinion? —Cathy Lane, Canton, Ohio

● I never take them because prolonged exposure in a hot tub causes excessive perspiration. The loss of moisture brings on flaking, itching and wrinkling, which leads to premature skin aging. If you want to protect your skin as winter approaches, keep away from steaming baths — if you don't, you'll have dry skin and add a few years to your face and body.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips seem such a dull couple. Have they ever said or done anything to make them seem less stodgy? —I.B., Lowell, Mass.

● Gossip lovers had a field day recently. While in Germany, Anne curtly ordered her husband to dance with her, in spite of the fact he'd hurt himself that day horseback riding. She also snapped at him during dinner when she asked for wine and he suggested she stick to orange juice. Seems Anne's nose was out of joint because Mark had struck up a conversation with a German girl at the stables.

FOR SHIRLEY JONES, actress and mother of Shaun Cassidy

How do you feel about your son being in show business? —M.C., Cumberland, Mo.

● I wish he'd chosen something else. I was more discouraging than approving. Our business is unstable and insecure, especially the acting part. I'd rather he'd become interested in the nonperforming areas, such as writing or producing. However, I could see his heart was set on it, and once I know my kids are serious, I'm with them all the way.

FOR ALAN ALDA, actor

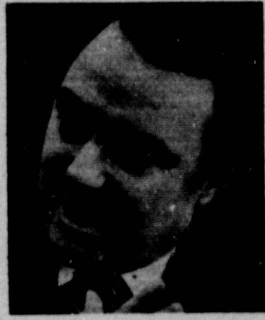
Can you remember when you first felt you were making it in show business? —M.H., Mankato, Minn.

● The obvious answer is when my press interviews started picking up. I figured if people wanted to read about me, then I was starting to make a name for myself. But on a more domestic level, I felt secure when I realized I'd reached the point where I could decently provide for my family.

FOR PHYLLIS GEORGE, sportscaster

What got you hooked on sports? —H.A., Rome, Ga.

● If a Texas girl doesn't like sports, she can't live in the state. We had the Texas Longhorns and the Dallas Cowboys, and I grew up worshipping both of them. I was a cheerleader for six years in school and later in college. I'm an athlete, dated athletes and did everything from table tennis to water-skiing. I was introduced to games by my dad, who refereed football whenever he got the chance.



FOR JOSEPH A. CALIFANO, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare

Would you like to see HEW split into three separate divisions? —A. Pally, Albany, N.Y.

● No. I do believe, however, that we have to integrate our services better, as states are doing increasingly with their departments of human services. By setting up separate agencies, you make it more difficult for them to work together. From the President's perspective, he needs fewer, not more, people reporting to him. By the way, there is no truth to the often-repeated allegation that HEW is "unmanageable."

FOR MR. BLACKWELL, designer

What is the biggest miracle that the fashion industry has performed? —G.A., Bangor, Maine

● The advent of the mini-skirt. The greatest miracle to come will be the fashion industry saving itself from its own self-inflicted wounds. As with all other businesses, we make mistakes, and we don't always know we are making them.

PRO AND CON

Should Federal Judges Continue To Receive Lifetime Appointments?

PRO Sen. Birch Bayh (D.-Ind.)

When the framers of the Constitution declared that Federal judges were to hold office indefinitely, during good behavior, they did so with the conviction that lifetime tenure was essential to preserve the delicate balance of power. Congress was to reflect the will of the people. The Judiciary was to insure individual justice through standards of law tested over time, without regard to popular will, and to act as a check on Congressional or Executive actions. The President and Congress were given checks on the Judiciary through appointment, confirmation and impeachment. Only by insulating judges from the political pressures exerted on elected legislators could the framers hope to maintain this system of checks and balances.

CON Sen. James B. Allen (D.-Ala.)

Rather than having a Government of three coequal branches we face the danger of the Federal judiciary being the most powerful branch of Government. There must be meaningful and lasting reform to restore balance in our Government without compromising the fundamental independence necessary for judges to interpret the Constitution and to apply the statutory law fairly. I have proposed a constitutional amendment requiring the reconfirmation of Federal judges at designated intervals, but there would be no limit to the number of terms that may be served. I simply do not believe it is in the best interest of the American people to have any public official appointed for life and to be accountable to no one.

WHAT IF YOUR CHILD JOINS A CULT?

By Jo Anne Parke and Carroll Stoner

A Hare Krishna wedding. Elizabeth Reuther, daughter of United Auto Workers founder, was the bride. Alfred Ford, of the Ford family, is at the right.

Entertainer Steve Allen with his son and granddaughter at a religious commune in Seattle. Ted Patrick (right) is a famous deprogrammer of young cultists.

At one point, former Eagle Scout Michael Fischer seemed destined to spend his life chanting on street corners and in airports with the yellow-robed, shaven-headed Hare Krishnas.

When Michael's mother found him working in the basement of the Krishna's Brooklyn temple, she says she was shocked at his poor health. She took her son home to Chicago, where he was hospitalized and fed intravenously to counter the acute malnutrition he suffered while a member of the Krishna sect. Eventually Mrs. Fischer persuaded her son to leave the Krishnas.

Dr. Eli Shapiro, a Boston physician, and his wife were not so successful when they tried to get their son Edward to leave the offbeat Eastern sect. The Shapiros had their son kidnapped. He fled back to the Krishnas.

Still worried about Edward's health — he is a diabetic — Dr. Shapiro recently asked a Massachusetts court to appoint a legal guardian for him. In spite of Dr. Shapiro's pleas that his son may even die without guidance, the court said Edward — who is 23 and married — is an adult with a right to live his life as he chooses.

Since the late 1960's, scores of new religions have appeared on the American scene. And, instead of fading away, many of these new cults have become well established. At a national conference on the new religions,Dr. Jacob Needleman, a professor at San Francisco State University, observed, "The new religious movement can no longer be taken as a transitory cultural aberration but rather as a central force in the profound change through which American civilization is passing."

The cults provide a way of life that, he says, fills a void for many young people. For one thing, the groups offer what appears to be a purposeful existence to youths who can't find jobs or who are at a low point in life. Whatever the organization, the recruiting techniques have much in common, as we discovered on our year-long investigation of the cults. As we toured the country, posing as potential converts, we found that recruiters first get prospects away from familiar surroundings, often inviting them to country retreats or communes. Yale psychiatrist Robert Jay Lifton calls this essential element in psychological coercion "milieu control."

In the camps and communes everything the recruit sees, hears and does is controlled by already fervent believers. Yet the process is not nearly so dramatic as the term brainwashing suggests. The change is gradual and begins when a recruit starts to conform, long before he starts to believe the teachings of the cult leaders.

Just who are some of the self-proclaimed prophets and messiahs who command the attention of so many sons and daughters of the American middle class?

- Sun Myung Moon, who heads the Unification Church, is a multimarried Korean industrialist and recent American religious leader who was born in 1920 in what is now North Korea. This man, whose followers believe him to be divine, lives in superb luxury on a Westchester County, N.Y., estate.

The young Moonies, as they are called, live communally in Unification Church centers in every state or travel with mobile fund-raising teams. They work long hours each day selling candy, flowers, peanuts or candles to raise money for the Moon cause.

- The spiritual leader of the Hare Krishnas, A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada, is a retired Indian pharmaceutical executive. After the swami arrived in New York in the 1960's, he caught the imagination of the media with his colorful parades and ceremonies.
- Guru Maharaj Ji, the corpulent young man who is the "Perfect Master" to thousands of Divine Light Mission "premies" (as the devotees of this movement are called),was brought to the United States from his native India by a band of Boulder, Colo., benefactors when he was a pudgy little boy. They set him up in a tepee on the side of a mountain so he could teach them and their buddies how to "bliss out" without drugs.

Today the multimillion-dollar-a-year Mission is administered from an office building in downtown Denver. The boy-guru lives on a quarter-of-a-million-dollar oceanside estate in Southern California with his wife, a former airline stewardess who became a Mission devotee, and their two infant children.

The mission premies often live communally, in houses the group calls ashrams, and spend their time either working full time for the Mission or working outside and turning over all their money to the movement in exchange for the privilege of living in one of its communities.

Many parents who become estranged from their children eventually turn to "deprogramming." Most of these middle-class parents know they are breaking the law when they kidnap and forcefully deprogram their adult children. They are usually law-abiding citizens who have never had so much as a speeding ticket. Yet they feel justified because they believe their sons and daughters are prisoners who have been brainwashed or hypnotized.

Just what is deprogramming? It is, simply put, any method used to undo cult influences and may involve anything from persuasion to threats. Many parents first learned about it when they read news accounts of the work of a former California civil servant named Ted Patrick, who described deprogramming techniques in his book, Let Our Children Go. His particular technique is one of force and intimidation.

Deprogramming often fails, thus widening the gulf between parents and child. Sometimes the rift becomes almost irreparable, as it has in the cases of young people who have taken their parents to court.

Another deprogrammer, Joe Alexander, has been remarkably successful in getting courts to grant parents temporary conservatorships — guardianships — over their often "adult" children so that the young people may be deprogrammed legally. Alexander and his wife Esther run the Freedom of Thought Foundation, a center for former cult members near Tucson.

Father Kent Burtner, Roman Catholic chaplain at the University of Oregon, and Rabbi Maurice Davis of the Westchester Jewish Community Center in White Plains, N.Y., use none of Patrick's fright tools, and yet they have convinced many young people to abandon religious cults.

Deprogrammings can be expensive. While clergymen who do it usually don't charge, a deprogramming by a well-known "professional," coupled with the legal costs of a conservatorship, can run thousands of dollars. Parents have taken second mortgages on their homes and spent savings intended for college educations to get their kids back.

Former cult members have described life in a cult to be a severe regime in which leaders make all decisions. "We were told when to sleep, when to get up and when to eat. We were told what to do every hour we were awake." In the Hare Krishna cult couples don't engage in sexual relations in marriage unless the temple president thinks it's time to bring another Krishna baby into the world. Even so, scores of Krishna babies have been born in the United States in the last 10 years. They are the first batch of "pure" American Krishnas, untainted by the worldly temptations their parents had to overcome to find bliss in the cult. Khrisna life is not strange to them. They don't go to public schools. They've never seen television or a movie. They've never tasted hamburgers, pizza or an ice-cream cone.

Ultimately, it may turn out that the cult question isn't one of religious freedom at all. It may be a question of who first violates the civil rights of these kids: the cults that entice them or their parents who want them back.

Jo Anne Parke and Carroll Stoner spent a year on the road investigating cults. They are the authors of All God's Children: The Cult Experience — Salvation or Slavery? (Chilton).

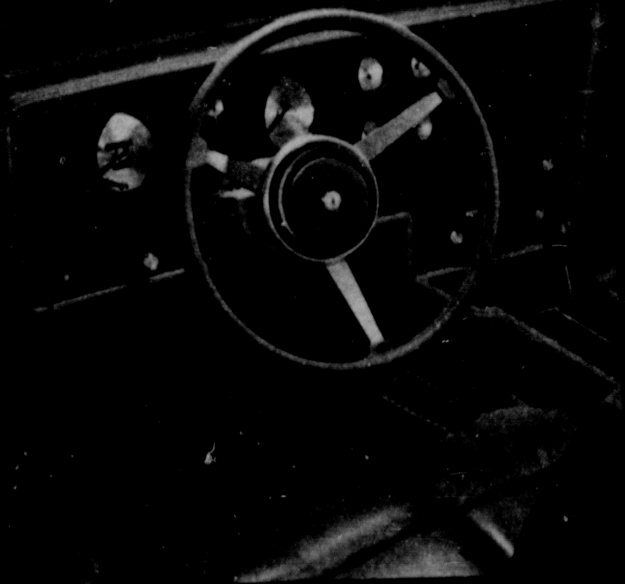
Introducing the 1978 Pontiac Grand Prix.

Grand new looks. Grand new luxury. Grand new Prix.

Most scientific design in Grand Prix history! We used computers to design a new full frame to isolate road noise. Special body mounts help damp out vibration. New door and body seals help seal out noise. All to give you a smooth quiet ride.

New luxury appointments! Available new loose pillow design seating that's richer than ever. An available bucket seat that's a GP exclusive. A new cockpit style dash.



New maneuverability. This trim new Grand Prix is amazingly agile when you put it in a tight city corner. Or even those tight city parking spots.

Grand Prix is equipped with GM built engines produced by various divisions. See your Pontiac dealer for details. Talk to him about buying or leasing this incredible new Grand Prix.

It's destined to take its place beside the classic Grand Prixs of the past.

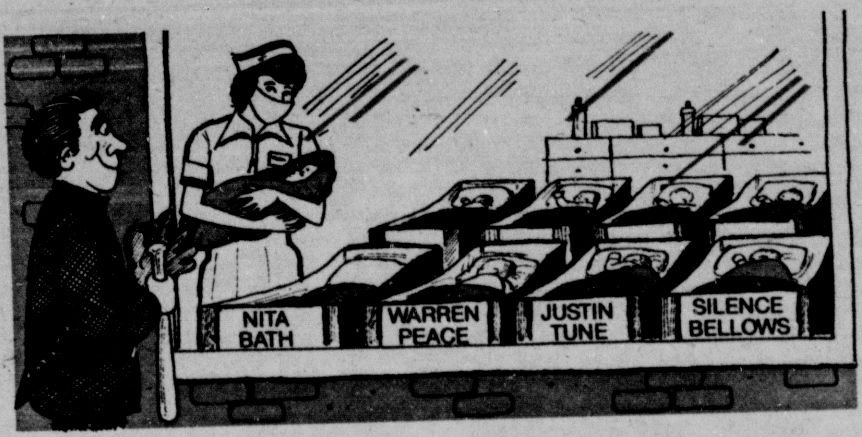
HOW DO YOU LIKE YOUR NAME?

Rate your own for beauty and euphony alongside Gaston J. Feeblebunny or Gisella Werberserch-Piffel.



Mac Aroni was a real person. So were Cigar Stubbs, Hyacinthe Ringrose and Toilet Jacobs, not to mention Goody P. Creep, an undertaker, A. Moron, who was commissioner of education in the Virgin Islands, and Dr. Zoltan Ovary, now a noted New York gynecologist. All these names and many others — some of which can hardly be believed, much less repeated in polite company — are included in the new book, Remarkable Names of Real People.

In the book's preface, humorist S.J. Perelman writes, "…many of the names included have a distinct poetic or lyrical rhythm, and I can well imagine chanting oneself to sleep by repeating Sugarporn Poopatanna and Madonna McClung. I note with regret that the chronicler has seen fit to omit a heroine of my youth, Ming Toy Epstein, whose name had the sweet, tinkling purity of temple bells."

The book publishers plan another edition, and nominations from readers are encouraged, especially if official proof of the unusual name is available. Some interesting names submitted to the publishers but yet unverified as real are Heidi Yum-Yum Gluck, Sexious Boonjug and Zita Apathy. What follows is a partial list of notable names from persons living and dead:

If you still haven't quite found a name to suit your fancy, think about Buncha Love, Cardinal Sin, Rev. Christian Church, Sir Cloudsley Shovel. (But we guess you wouldn't want this last one. Seems he ran the British fleet on the rocks in the Scilly Islands in 1717, drowning 2,000 men.)

If you want your child to be a doctor, here's a shoo-in: by recent count there were 13 doctors Doctors, Docter or Dokter in the U.S.; five doctors Bonebreak; one Bonecutter and 18 Butchers. Dr. Fillerup, obstetrician, lives in California, and Dr. Screech lives in British Columbia.

And if it's a lawyer you'll be wanting, try Cumming or Gooing from Louisiana. That'll getcha — either way.

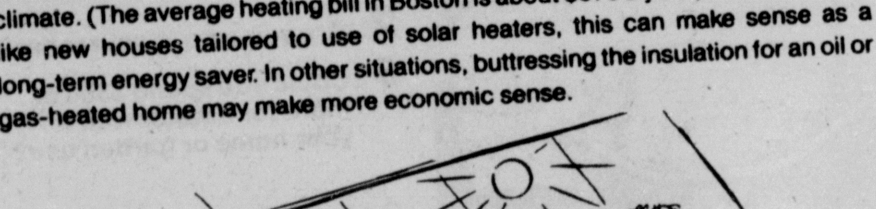
Observations

Rays of hope. They come from the sun, the versatile star that warms the earth, grows our food, tans our skins, and supplies almost all the energy used by man. Oil, gas, coal—they all represent solar energy that was trapped millions of years ago. You can warm your feet by the fireplace on a cold winter night because the blazing log releases energy it stored from sunlight. And when you consider how much solar energy falls on the U.S.—enough to supply the nation's energy needs 500 times over every year—you realize why scientists want to harness more of it.

How practical is solar energy? There's a lot of wishful thinking on that score. Solar energy is here now—for supplementing your home heating. But it's expensive. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that a unit costing $4,875 would supply 40 percent of the average family's heating needs in Boston's climate. (The average heating bill in Boston is about $675 a year.) In some cases, like new houses tailored to use of solar heaters, this can make sense as a long-term energy saver. In other situations, buttressing the insulation for an oil or gas-heated home may make more economic sense.



"Well, what do you know? It works."

Needed: an engineering breakthrough. When scientists talk of the great potential of solar energy they're looking beyond home heating—to use of the sun to generate electricity at reasonable cost. That's where the technology is still only partially developed. What's needed are more economic ways to convert the sun's energy to electricity and store it so it's useful 24 hours a day, rain or shine. Mobil alone is spending $30 million on developing solar electricity through a joint venture (Mobil Tyco Solar Energy Corporation). But we've got a way to go, for costs thus far are 30 times those of conventional electricity.

Light in the tunnel. We think that solar cells using silicon ribbons to convert the sun's energy to electricity offer the most hope. If the manufacture of such cells can be improved through large-scale research, mass-production could be possible by 1990. According to the Energy Research and Development Administration, solar cells could represent 20 percent of all the electricity generating capacity added annually by the year 1990. Promising as solar energy is, it offers no immediate easy solutions to the nation's energy problems. And if politicians put too much hope in it helping soon, we could all be burned.

IS THE STOCK MARKET FOR EVERYONE?

The trick is in learning to buy when the "specialists" buy — and to sell when they sell.

Edward C. Topple

An overall view of the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

By Richard Ney

Most investors are totally unprepared for the market's predictable turmoil. So, unsurprisingly, they ultimately discover they would have done far better had they kept their money in the bank.

My view is that a stock exchange is nothing more than a giant supermarket whose stock prices are controlled by merchants (called specialists) who, in most respects, are no different from department stores whose basic aim is to buy inventory (stock in the specialist's case) at wholesale and sell at retail. What the investor must do if he wishes to be successful is learn to buy when these merchants buy and to sell when they sell. Unless you're willing to approach the market from this premise, I believe you should answer the question, "Is the stock market for me?" with a resounding and final "No!"

Why do so many investors suffer losses in the market? Examine the following investor profiles to see if you recognize yourself.

1. I'm sensible; I don't trade; I'm an investor. I only buy the best stocks, and eventually they always go higher.

2. I need monthly income, so I'm going to buy stocks that pay good dividends.

3. I'm going to try to play it smart. I'm going to give my broker a price to sell at so that I can let my profits rise but cut my losses fast.

4. I'm a technician. I use charts and time my purchases so that I buy as new highs are being established and sell when a stock's price moves down to a new low.

5. I believe in fundamentals. I believe I can safely make money if I buy stocks only when a company's earnings forecast is on the favorable side.

What's wrong with the preceding profiles? They sound quite sensible. Let's examine how, in each of the foregoing categories, investors have adopted an approach that virtually eliminates their chances of making a profitable investment.

1. This investor may have been successful buying stock and never selling it during the 1940's and 1950's, but as we moved into the 60's, a different kind of market came into being. Fluctuations in stock prices became more violent, and the long-term investor discovered that he was separated from more and more of his money. Did you know that the stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange are, on balance, lower now than they were 20 years ago? If you do not want your investments eroded by time (not to mention inflation), you must learn to time your purchases and sales to major market swings. That is not trading; that is prudent investing.

2. Those who invest in high-yielding stocks because they need income are generally unaware that they can do just as well without having to accept the risks of the market by investing in bank savings certificates. If you need income from your investments, you shouldn't be in the market. Not only can high-yielding stocks have their dividends cut but they also can become even higher-yielding when the stock's price drops, thereby eroding your capital base.

3. A wise investor never surrenders by appointment. Yet, that's just what you do when you enter stop-loss orders on the specialist's book. If the specialist observes a bunching of orders at a specific price level, he will handle the orders in the manner most advantageous to himself. A stop-loss order tells him that you will surrender your stock if he drops his price to where you have entered your order. Many an investor has told his broker something like, "If my stock drops under 40, I want to get out of it, so enter a stop-loss order for me at 39." He then sees his stock drop to 39 (where the specialist buys it for his account) just before it takes off for new highs.

A former actor, Richard Ney is a Beverly Hills investment adviser and the author of three best sellers on the stock market: The Wall Street Jungle, The Wall Street Gang and Making It in the Market.

4. Those who invest in stocks solely on the basis of charting techniques are playing the specialist's game. He knows all the tricks of the trade. Specialists know they can precipitate heavy buying by taking a stock to a new high. Each specialist, therefore, will advance his stock to a new high; chartists (among others) will charge into the market to buy it, and when the specialist has sold his inventory and sold short ("borrowed" stock to buy later at a lower price), he will launch a major decline in the stock. Conversely, when specialists wish to accumulate stock, they drop stock prices to new lows knowing that chartists will dump their stocks thereby enabling specialists to buy these stocks before they rally prices.

5. Probably the worst reason for buying a stock is on the basis of "sound fundamentals." Specialists know investors buy stock on good earnings announcements. This buying enables specialists to sell at higher prices the stock they bought at lower prices. The fact is, once specialists have completed their selling, you'll find more stocks dropping on good earnings than bad earnings. It has been a simple matter to condition the public to buy on the basis of good earnings since this approach seems entirely logical. However, the only factor affecting a stock's price is the specialist's inventory position or objective.

Now that you know what is wrong with what I believe are the most commonly held and most damaging investor beliefs, you have probably decided that specialists are no-good scoundrels who are too tricky to compete with and that the market is not for you. Specialists are not too tricky to compete with. Indeed, it is because the market is controlled by them in predictable ways that the average investor can invest his money safely and profitably.

In analyzing the market, the investor should keep in mind that specialists are merely merchants who wish to buy stock from investors at wholesale and then, employing the most resolute and ingenious salesmanship, sell it back to them at retail. They differ from the department stores in one major respect: when the stores conduct a sale, they lower prices; when stock-exchange merchants conduct a sale, they raise prices — sharply, and it is the excitement and optimism generated by sharply rising prices that cause the public to charge into the market. Similarly, when the specialist wants to accumulate inventory, he drops prices sharply because he knows that sharply falling stock prices will frighten the public into selling.

Elizabeth Gee

Investment expert Richard Ney.

Investors who adhere to the following simple rules and guidelines will be able, I believe, to develop the ability to compete successfully with the specialist:

1. Only buy high-quality stocks. They provide a degree of protection that will produce more consistent gains over the long term.

2. Study the volume figures (amount of shares traded daily) listed in your daily newspaper for at least a six-month period or until you become familiar with what is low, average or high volume for a stock. Increased volume and big blocks (transactions for 10,000 shares or more) are the signals that specialists are either accumulating or distributing stock.

3. After a period of advance (or decline), if there is a sharp jump (or drop) of a point or more for one to three days to the accompaniment of an increase in volume of 50 percent or more, you should anticipate the possibility of a short or intermediate term reversal.

4. If the previous advance (or decline) has been of an extensive nature and a sharp jump (or drop) in price occurs followed by an increase in volume of 100 percent or more over a period of three or more days, a reversal of major proportions may be in the offing.

Many of the difficulties of investing vanish once the role of the specialist is understood. If you can learn how to time your purchases and sales to conform to his, you will come to the conclusion, as I have, that the stock market is, indeed, for you. ■

RICHARD NEY'S DEFINITION OF A SPECIALIST

Specialists are the financial elite. On the New York Stock Exchange, for example, there are approximately 350 specialists divided into about 100 specialist units. Each unit is registered in 10 to 40 or more stocks. Most specialists inherited their job from their fathers, who in turn inherited the job from their fathers. Although you might be able to buy a seat on the NYSE for $40,000, you couldn't buy a specialist's "seat" for any amount. Specialists are allowed by their own regulations to trade in competition with their customers. In theory they are supposed to "maintain a fair and orderly market" by matching public buy-and-sell orders. If, however, you want to buy or sell, say, 100 shares of stock, the specialist can execute your order higher or lower than the last sale price depending on the direction in which he wants prices to move. When he dramatically raises his stock price, he receives more buy than sell orders. The specialist will sell from his inventory of stock or sell short to supply the excess demand. Conversely, when he drops his stock's price dramatically, he receives more sell than buy orders. Again it is the specialist who buys the excess.

Thus, specialists are able to accumulate large inventories of stock at wholesale price levels for their personal investment accounts, "which then gives them the incentive" (according to a 1963 SEC Staff Study) to advance stock prices in order to sell at a profit.

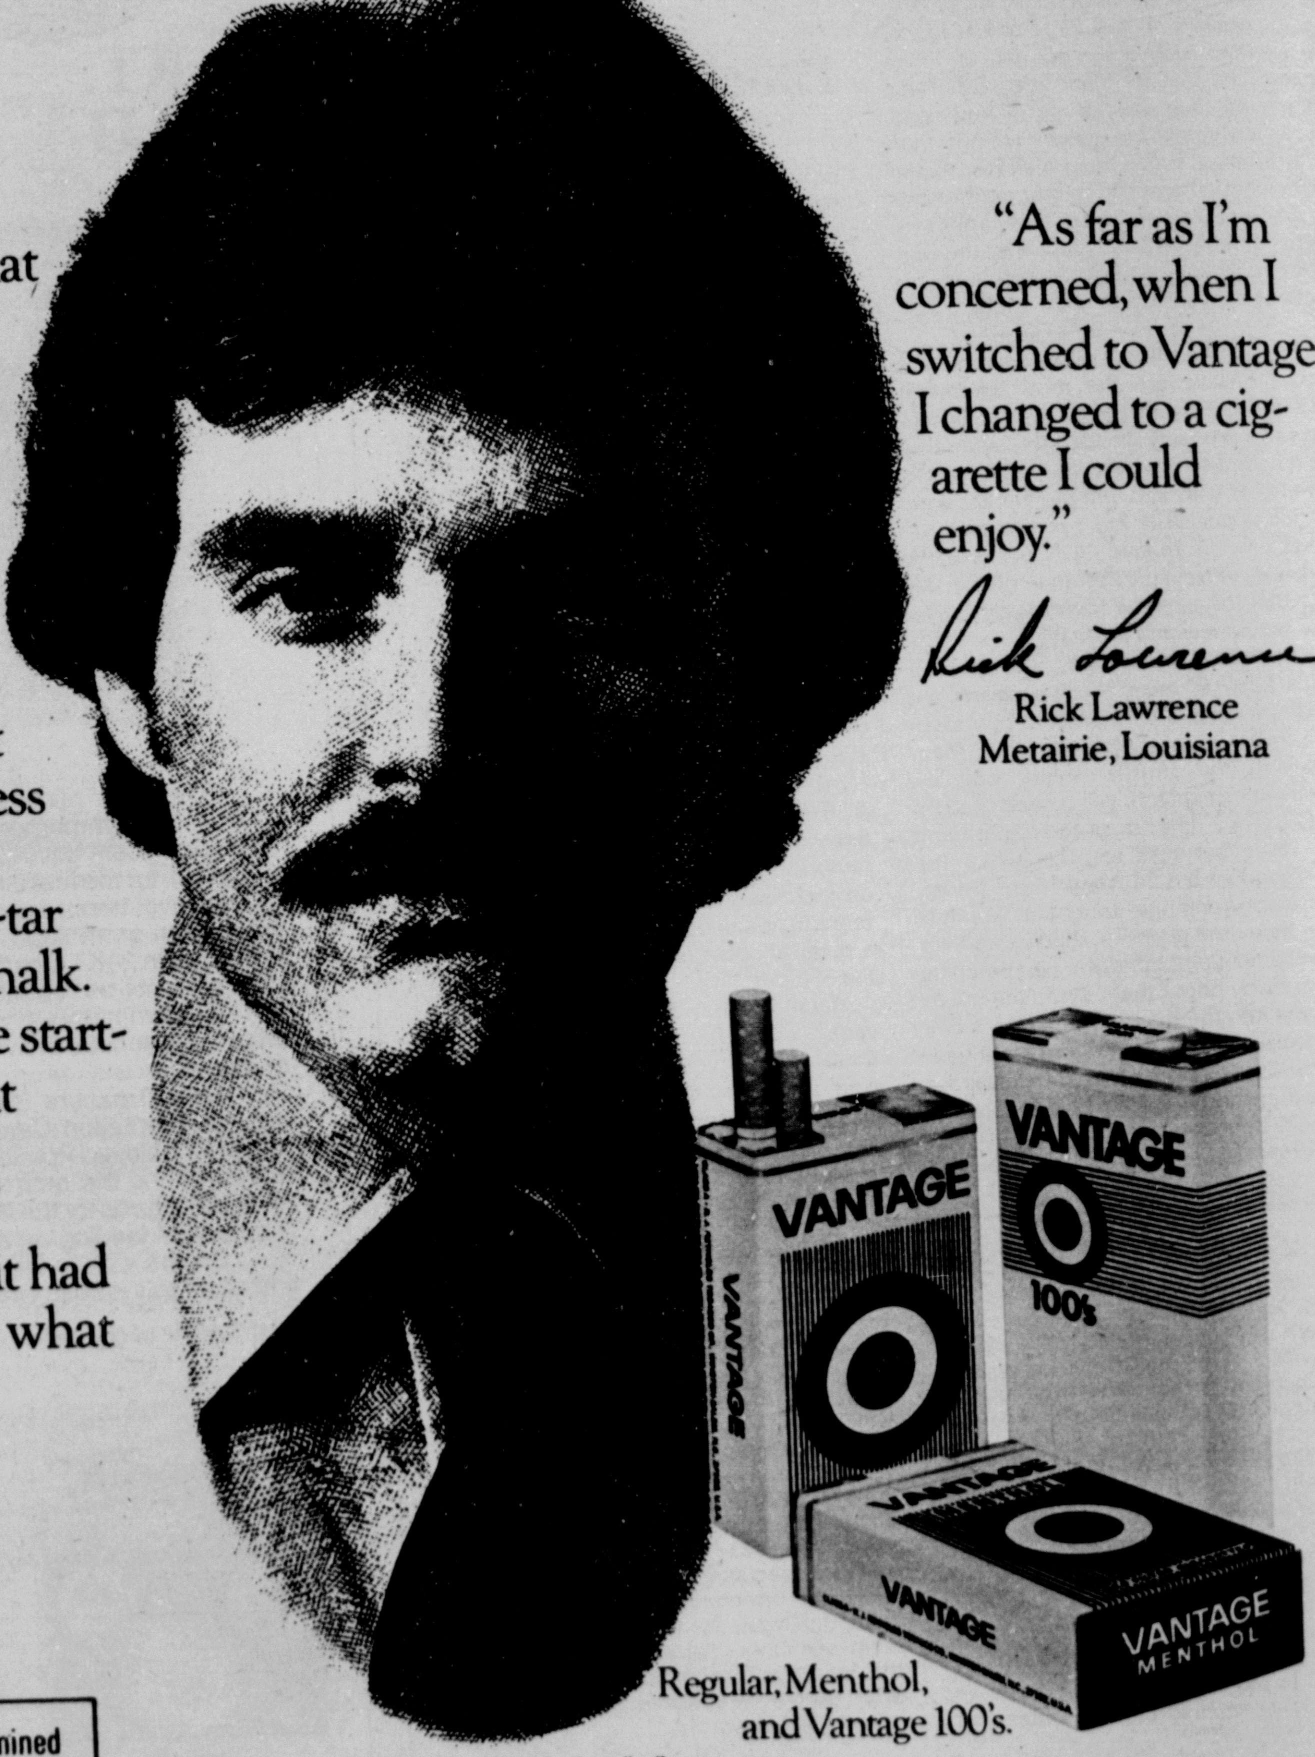
"Vantage is changing a lot of my feelings about smoking."



"I like to smoke, and what I like is a cigarette that isn't timid on taste. But I'm not living in some ivory tower. I hear the things being said against high-tar smoking as well as the next guy.

"And so I started looking. For a low-tar smoke that had some honest-to-goodness cigarette taste.

"It wasn't easy. The low-tar cigarettes I tried tasted like chalk. And high-tar cigarettes were starting to taste rougher as I went along.

"Then I tried a pack of Vantage. It was smooth yet it had taste. And a lot less tar than what I'd been smoking.

"As far as I'm concerned, when I switched to Vantage, I changed to a cigarette I could enjoy."

BIG BILL WALTON: NOT YOUR TYPICAL AMERICAN SPORTS HERO

By Barry Abramson

Dick Darcey/Camera 5

F.O.S.

He has proved that an athlete's life and attitudes don't have to reflect our stereotyped image of the jock.

He was known as a radical and a nonconformist. He made statements calling the FBI "the enemy" and urged rejection of the United States Government. His long, red beard and ponytail, along with his lumberjack clothing, offended some people. He was reported to dislike the weather and atmosphere of the Pacific Northwest and to be feigning injuries to get out of his contract with the Portland Trail Blazers so he could return to sunny Southern California. He was usually inaccessible, except when he wanted to sound off about a social issue. Letters complaining about him poured into the offices of the team and local newspapers.

Today Bill Walton, the 6'11" captain and center of the Trail Blazers, is the hero of heroes in Portland and such a box-office draw that the team expects to sell out all its home games this season. It has even arranged for overflow crowds to see the games via closed-circuit TV in a theater near its Memorial Coliseum. Those who criticized Walton before now say he's a changed person. And what everybody talks about regarding him is his stunning achievement in leading the Trail Blazers to their first National Basketball Association title last season.

The new Walton cut off his ponytail, trimmed his beard and made sure his public comments were confined to basketball. His friend and former teammate, Steve Jones, has commented, "Bill's war with the people is over. At some point, he realized he's a basketball player first, a political activist or whatever next."

The somber, introverted attitude that once characterized the big center was nowhere in evidence last June when the people of Portland staged a parade to honor their championship team. Walton led the parade on his 10-speed bicycle, cheerfully doused the mayor with beer while that official was at the mike, and then joined his teammates in tossing basketballs into the crowd. He signs as many autographs as he can and praises Trail Blazer fans as "great people who help us play better because of their support."

Walton plays down the idea that there has been a great change in his personality or attitudes. "I still say what I believe and do what I believe," he says. "When you're winning games, folks don't seem to care what you say."

As he sees it, the major difference between the Walton of today and the one who spent two unhappy years with his team is that he has been free of injuries. Far from feigning them during those two years, he suffered grievously, and they affected his attitude and feelings. He had nine broken bones, tendonitis and underwent two operations.

Basketball — and indeed all competition — was always fun for Walton as a youngster in La Mesa, Calif. His dad, a welfare department official, and his mother both encouraged competition in the household. They organized foot races up the hill to their house for their three sons and one daughter and held a contest to see which one could hold open a spring clothespin for the longest time. Mrs. Walton recalls one instance in which the children were asked to jump and try to touch the ceiling. "The contest ended when Bill began touching the ceiling with his elbows," she says.

At Helix High School, Bill was no great shakes as a basketball player until his junior year, when he shot up six inches to 6'7". He started to dominate games and led Helix to a string of more than 30 consecutive victories. His brother Bruce, a year older and the strongest in the family, acted as Bill's "bodyguard" when he played with him. In one game, a rival center kept banging Bill under the boards, so Bruce flattened him with an elbow to the throat. When Bruce went to UCLA, Bill followed him there, although Bruce gave up basketball to concentrate on football.

Under its incomparable coach, John Wooden, UCLA had already built a championship tradition. Walton enhanced it by leading Wooden teams to near-perfect season records and two NCAA championships. It was at college that he first became known as an individualist and a social activist. He was a vegetarian who didn't believe in killing animals for food. He was active in rallies denouncing America's role in Vietnam, practiced transcendental meditation and took up acupuncture to relieve pain in his knees. In his spare time, he rode his bike along the beaches and went backpacking in the mountains. He would psych himself for games by listening to hard rock music.

One thing that made it hard for Walton to adjust to Portland during his first two difficult seasons was that he had been accustomed to playing on winning teams. The team's great turnaround in his third season changed everything. Although his improved physical condition was the prime factor, it wasn't the only one. The arrival of a new coach, Jack Ramsay, proved to be significant. He had heard the controversial things about Walton, but he wanted to get to know his players for himself and arranged to talk to each individually. He spent over an hour with the center and then said, "I found him a sociable, likable person who didn't want to lose. I couldn't ask for anything more."

Walton was impressed with Ramsay's determination to stress team play rather than a star system. "No matter how much an individualist Bill Walton is off the court, he's dedicated to the idea of team play on the court," a friend of his from college points out. "At UCLA he preferred passing the ball to making scores himself. And he would give advice, direction and encouragement to the others and openly knock himself if he flubbed a play. He was always close to his teammates."

To build the team he wanted, Ramsay sold or traded players who had been concerned more with individual statistics than with team success. He brought in seven new players who would blend with Walton's special skills.

The new Trail Blazers ran their opposition into the ground in the early weeks of last season. Walton was a quick-leaping giant who blocked shots, intimidated rival centers, grabbed rebounds, started the team's fast breaks and set plays with his passes and scored himself when the situation called for it. On defense, he always seemed to know where every rival player was on the floor. "That way I have an idea of where my opponent's thrust to the basket is most apt to start," he explains. "Sometimes if your first couple of steps are in the right direction, you can break up a play that might otherwise have been successful."

When old devil injury caught up with Walton again, he had to sit out several games. This time the injury was not severe. Walton came on strong, and the Trail Blazers finished second to the Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division. In the playoffs, however, Portland destroyed the Lakers in four straight games.

In the championship round, the Trail Blazers faced the Philadelphia '76 ers, which had a treasure chest of individual stars including Julius "Dr. J" Erving and George McGinnis. But individual heroics came up short when matched against Portland's team play built around Walton.

Simple living has been Walton's credo, and he sticks to it, despite his hero status in Portland. He remains a vegetarian and spends as much time as possible enjoying the natural beauty of the outdoors. He lives in an old house not far from downtown Portland with his girlfriend Susan, her 2-year-old son and some of his buddies. He now loves Oregon and has centered his life there. He keeps his political opinions within his private circle these days but remains an active supporter of the American Indian Movement.

All Trail Blazer players are asked to be involved in some community activity, and Walton does his part by staging clinics for the Warm Springs Indian Reservation. He's also an avid supporter of a local soccer team and spends most of his summers practicing with them.

Bruce Walton, who has remained close to his brother, says of him, "He's friends with everybody on his block. He goes to the park and plays soccer with the kids. He's just a helluva nice guy who also happens to play basketball."

PORCELAIN FROM CHINA

for less than half what you'd expect to pay!

When Marco Polo returned from China, he was laden with all sorts of treasure. But nothing amazed his fellow Europeans more than the snowy white, translucent pottery he brought with him.

This was the western world's first glimpse of Chinese porcelain, the fabulous material from which China's greatest artists and craftsmen made Ming vases and countless other priceless works of art.

The secret of true porcelain is in the clay. Nothing will do but kaolin clay, which is extremely fine in texture and absolutely white. Such clay is very rare.

The same clay used for Ming vases

Two of the world's most valuable deposits of such clay lie in China: one in Li-ling in the Hunan Province, the other in Ching-te-chen in the Kiangsi Province. It seems certain that many of the original Ming vases that now grace the world's museums were made in these areas. Now you can own superb cups, saucers and other tableware made from the same rare and historic clay.

Weston World proudly presents authentic, imported Chinese porcelain cups and saucers, made, hand-finished, and decorated in Li-ling and Ching-te-chen.

To appreciate their beauty, you must see them and use them — which is why we make this introductory offer:

AMAZING SAMPLE OFFER!

WHAT IS HUNTING ALL ABOUT?

According to an avid outdoorsman, the experience is diverse and involves much more than killing.

By Fred Nofziger

A phenomenal 20 million people in the United States can be considered hunters, and for good or ill, another hunting season is now underway. Yet, nonhunters often cannot understand how civilized adults receive pleasure from shooting and killing. What follows is the attempt of an enthusiastic outdoor writer to justify the sport and admonish some of his fellow hunters. Some readers are sure to agree with Mr. Nofziger wholeheartedly, while others may feel he could not be more mistaken.

There is a nip in the air, a touch of color in the hardwoods, and waterfowl are winging their way in from the north. It is the time of the hunter.

Today most hunters are not just trigger pullers. Instead, they are students of the environment and its relationship to birds and animals. Hunters must recognize habitat, for example, and understand what makes it suitable for a particular species.

This, of course, is not a technical education in forestry, plant ecology or game management, but it is a start toward realizing the importance of proper management of woods and waters.

Killing is not a sport, and, thus, hunting involves far more than the act of killing a wild animal. Hunting is a diverse experience that includes planning the hunt, purchasing supplies and equipment, traveling with companions to the hunting site, establishing a camp, comradeship in the camp, beginning the actual hunt and pursuing and possibly killing an animal.

Many hunters are satisfied and feel rewarded even if the last phase of the hunt is not accomplished. They also believe that their sport offers challenge, suspense and excitement, plus mental, physical and spiritual reward.

All true hunters learn early that sportsmanship and field etiquette are essential. They learn to respect the wild animals they pursue. They discover the pleasure of the things they see, hear and smell as they walk through field and forest or paddle through duck marsh. Many develop a reverence for nature and everywhere see the handiwork of God in the outdoors.

And, as phrased by the philosopher Ortega y Gasset, in the sport of hunting, modern man can again become a symbol of courage, endurance and skill.

While a few careless, selfish persons with guns have done a great deal to give hunting a bad name, the true hunters' good examples have done much to convince the public that hunting is not bad. As a group, hunters do not have lily-white hands, however, and there is a lot of room for improvement. So if hunters are to preserve the sport for the future, they must educate themselves as well as the public.

Lack of sportsmanship is the main problem with hunting today. A good sportsman enjoys himself even if he doesn't make a kill. He derives pleasure from just being in the wilds with companions. This sportsman can go home empty-handed and still consider the trip a success.

The fair-weather sportsman is one who feels deep shame for having failed to score. He is often the one responsible for legitimate complaints. And then there is the slob hunter. He shows little sportsmanship or consideration for the laws that govern and manage game.

The pressure to succeed, to make a kill, is the most frequent cause of bad sportsmanship. The pressure is produced by the hunter's lingering fear of being branded a failure, of being laughed at and being joked about if he doesn't come home with a large bounty of game.

Sport hunters are not responsible for the demise of the passenger pigeon or the destruction of the great herds of bison or the terrible reduction of many wild animal populations. These killers were professional market hunters. The principles of sportsmanship, courtesy and respect for the law and other hunters are the same regardless of game or weapon.

Nature's creatures die by the talon and fang, from disease and parasites and all kinds of accidents. Dying by the hunter's gun is quicker and more merciful than starving and probably less cruel than being torn apart by a hawk or a fox. The hunter learns, therefore, that to harvest the surplus of game in a given area is neither detrimental nor sinful.

In short, hunting is a heritage and a source of countless hours of wholesome pleasure in the outdoors.

Fred Nofziger, a free-lance writer specializing in outdoor articles, has hunted all his life.

IS YOUR CHILD IN GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION?

Joan Kramer & Associates

One in three can't pass a test measuring the minimum skills and strengths needed to master and enjoy ordinary games.

By Alan Haas

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports reported not long ago that youngsters who had the benefit of early sports activity were, as adults, twice as active as those who had limited exposure. They are four times more likely than others to take the kind of exercise that promotes continued health and vigor.

Also, the American Medical Association has stated that exercise increases the ease and efficiency of performing daily tasks; aids in weight control; improves posture and appearance; increases poise by improving grace and economy of movement; reduces tension, thus acting as a natural tranquilizer; and sharpens perceptual abilities.

The need for children to participate in regular sports activities has been amply demonstrated. Studies show that children spend on the average from 15 to 30 hours a weeks watching television, compared with only about two hours in planned physical activity. One American child in five fails to pass a simple test measuring the minimum strengths and skills necessary to master and enjoy ordinary games.

So if you want something better than that for your child, set a good example yourself by participating in family sports activities. It will mean better health in the future for both of you.

"As soon as a child learns to walk, he can swim, run, throw or catch a ball and do light exercises," says Dr. Thomas E. Shaffer, consultant physician, Adolescents' Health Services, Children's Hospital, Columbus, Ohio. By the time a child is 3, according to pediatricians, he is ready to jog, play horseshoes and volleyball and go climbing, hiking or canoeing with his parents.

As a parent giving your children a head start to fitness, you can add immeasureably to their enjoyment of life, keep in shape yourself and bring the family closer together, doctors and psychologists say.

"The emphasis in the early years should be on participation. Every child should feel good just for having taken part," stresses Dr. Thomas P. Johnson, a San Diego psychiatrist with a special interest in sports. "Children should be offered many experiences and the chance to specialize as they show an interest.

"If we pressure young children into narrowing their focus to highly specialized skills, we invite psychological difficulties," Dr. Johnson continues. So before them — which is why we make this introductory offer.

your youngsters start comparing themselves with their peers, before they encounter the perils of winning and losing, before they feel the need to test themselves and compete in Little League baseball or Pop Warner football, show them that physical activity can be fun. "Boys are not little men. They can't take adult pressures, mentally or physically, nor should they be expected to," says Dr. Allen Kline, a Houston pediatrician.

"In unorganized play," says Dr. Kline, "youngsters are not likely to force themselves beyond their abilities, and, if they are injured, medical attention is not complicated by pressure from coaches."

"A child can skip rope, play catch or just run up and down in the backyard — along with his parents," says Dr. William Gualtiere, exercise physiologist and director of a testing and programming facility in New York City.

"It doesn't matter what form the exercise takes," explains Dr. Gualtiere. "As long as both adult and child use a large percentage of their muscle mass, wind, stamina and endurance, muscle development is maintained, and flexibility, agility, coordination are enchanced.

"Even more important, both generations will be engaged in a vital, life-saving regimen, designed to prevent cardiovascular and circulation problems later on, as well as slowing down aging and lifting the spirits," Dr. Gualtiere points out.

H. Armstrong Roberts

"Children of preschool age should take part in family games and exercise part of every day," says this physiologist. "It should become part of their regimen, like eating and sleeping. Then, when they go on to competitive sports, there is a good chance they will focus more on improving their own performance than on defeating others. Sports will be more pleasurable, less combative."

"I have also found," Dr. Gualtiere continues, "that children who regularly participate in a family playtime are less likely to be off riding skateboards, walking fences or climbing trees, activities that can be dangerous to toddlers who haven't yet learned to be cautious. I have a boy, 3, who can already run a mile, and a little girl, 2½, who runs an eighth of a mile. The important thing is that they look forward to jogging with their father, to being praised for their accomplishments and to burning off energy, which children require."

"The psychological attitude of the child toward physical conditioning is very important," says professor Joseph B. Oxendine, dean of Temple University's College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. "We are trying to develop children's confidence about doing things with their bodies to enhance their self-image — a feeling of respect for the mind and body and confidence in their ability to function well."

Dr. Richard A. Gardner, associate clinical professor of child psychiatry at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, agrees: "There is nothing more ego-building to a youngster than to tell him, 'You really hit the ball far,' or to tell her, 'You rode your tricycle very well.' That is what children want to hear.

"Furthermore," the psychiatrist emphasizes, "physical activity is a potent tranquilizer. Children experience so many no-no's, they build up a lot of hostility and resentment. Sports are a socially acceptable means to work off these feelings.

"A key thing," Dr. Gardner adds, "is for parents to choose activities that are mutually enjoyable, so Mom and Dad don't build any resentments of their own. Youngsters don't have much tolerance; they may want to go on long after their parents have become bored. Care needs to be taken that neither parent nor child becomes frustrated by too much or too little activity."

Though family sports are generally beneficial, there are one or two things to watch. Children who have a chronic physical problem — cystic fibrosis or a congenital heart defect, for example — should not be encouraged to participate. If parents have any doubts, a visit to a pediatrician is mandatory. If parents themselves have not been physically active, they should submit to a stress test, usually a motor-driven treadmill. The physician will monitor blood pressure and pulse, test for any cardiac problems and then advise a suitable exercise program.

They're very pleased with their health insurance agent.

They're completely satisfied with their homeowners agent.

"And we know our car insurance man is the best around," Bob says. "We feel fortunate to have him so close by."

Of course, whatever the Beals think about one agent, they're bound to think about the others.

Because all of them are State Farm agent, Steve Johnson. As a family insurance specialist, Steve can provide knowledgeable advice and person-to-person service on all the policies they're ever likely to need.

"If we have any question about our coverages, or a claim, we don't have to wonder who to call," says Jeanne. "We just call Steve. It's a real advantage having one agent nearby who can help us with everything."

Having a State Farm family insurance man can be a real advantage for you.

He's the one agent who's backed by America's largest homeowners and auto insurer, and one of the largest life insurance companies, too.

And there's probably one like Steve Johnson in your neighborhood. Check your Yellow Pages.

'Enriched Flavor'™ Menthol!

Menthol taste satisfaction no longer dependent on high tar.

For years, smokers were forced to accept high tar if they wanted real menthol flavor.

Today there's MERIT Menthol. The cigarette that shattered all previous notions about what's possible—and what isn't—with tar and taste in menthol smoking.

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain natural flavor-rich ingredients that delivered taste way out of proportion to tar.

These flavor essentials were then packed into the tobacco used to make MERIT Menthol. The result was a low tar menthol cigarette packed with extra flavor.

Only one menthol has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.

BERT JONES: HIS FATHER PAVED THE WAY

"...Even today he wouldn't do anything that he didn't feel would meet with his dad's approval..."

There's supposed to be a generation gap between today's young people and their parents, but no such gap exists between Bert Jones, the peerless quarterback for the Baltimore Colts, and his father, W. A. "Dub" Jones. Bert feels his father set an example that enabled him to develop into one of the most popular and best-liked players in the National Football League. His friends say of Bert: "He always hero-worshipped his dad more so than other kids hero-worshipped John Wayne or other celebrities. Even today he wouldn't do anything that he didn't feel would meet with his dad's approval."

Dub Jones starred as a halfback for the Cleveland Browns, and son Bert served as the team's water boy. (Dub's six touchdowns against the Bears in 1951 is still an NFL record for most touchdowns in a game. The record has since been tied by Ernie Nevers and Gale Sayers.) When Dub joined the Browns' coaching staff, Bert spent five summers at the team's training camp. He carried ice, retrieved footballs, and did odd jobs around the clubhouse. He also picked up invaluable pointers in throwing the football from the Browns' quarterbacks.

Although Bert showed great pitching skill in high school, he never doubted that he would follow his dad into football. "He never pushed me," says Bert, "but once I had established what I wanted to do, he made sure that I did it to the best of my ability."

Bert was an All-America quarterback at Louisiana State University and set 20 school passing records. He expected to follow his dad to the Browns in 1973, but Baltimore won the rights to him. In his second pro season he set a record of 17 straight pass completions in one game, which made him and Dub the only father and son listed in the pro football record book for individual achievements.

1973 and '74 were rebuilding years for the Colts, but they came into their own in '75 and '76 when Bert led them to successive division titles. Bert threw 24 touchdown passes last season and led the NFL with 3,104 yards gained passing. The Associated Press named him the league's Most Valuable Player, but Bert says he won't be satisfied until he leads his team to a Super Bowl triumph.

At 6'3" and 215 pounds, Bert has the size and strength pro quarterbacks need to withstand hits from linemen. He also has exceptional speed, which makes him a threat as a runner. He is most known, however, for the power and accuracy of his riflelike throwing arm. "If someone told me Bert could throw a football across Chesapeake Bay, I'd have to believe him," says Colt wide receiver Roger Carr.

Unlike some other highly paid pro quarterbacks, Bert scorns the trappings of the prima donnas and is quick to credit his teammates for their part in his success. And despite an easygoing demeanor, he is clearly the team's leader and will speak out forcefully on issues that concern them. At the beginning of the '76 season, head coach Ted Marchibroda complained about front-office interference with his coaching. A bitter dispute followed, and Marchibroda resigned. Jones acted as spokesman for his teammates in praising Marchibroda's ability and character and demanded his reinstatement. As a result, the coach resumed his duties.

Dub Jones and son Bert.

Bert and his wife Danni live near his parents in Ruston, La., and Bert is associated with his dad's construction company there. Bert has his own plane, which he uses for business purposes as well as to maintain a busy schedule of off-season speaking engagements. "I love the people in my home town, and I love the outdoors, which is why I wouldn't want to make my permanent home in the big city," he says. His hobbies include scuba-diving, fishing and hunting. When it comes to bagging duck or quail, Bert is as accurate with a shotgun as he is firing footballs. — Barry Abbott

HOW DID SHELLEY DUVALL BECOME A STAR?

It wasn't glamor or beauty that Robert Altman noticed about her when she was a naive girl who had never been outside Texas.

Shelley with current love Paul Simon.

Ledru/Sygma

By Clarke Taylor

At 27, Shelley Duvall has appeared in a number of films and has been a host on Saturday Night Live. Her star is on the rise. Yet she is barely recognizable to most movie-goers, which she thinks is an advantage.

"Well, I do not want to be recognized as Shelley Duvall. I want people to be aware of each of the different characters I play."

Shelley was a "groupie" in Nashville, a spaced-out cartoon character on platform shoes who can't find time to visit her dying aunt; a sympathetic Mrs. Grover Cleveland, vulnerable in the midst of the Wild West, in Buffalo Bill and the Indians; a disappointed mail-order bride in McCabe and Mrs. Miller; and in Thieves Like Us, a pale, stringy-haired, country girl, who sips cola and has an affair with Keith Carradine.

A 5'7" stick figure of a girl, with bangs, a blank-page expression and an overbite, Shelley could easily play the plain sister of any girl next door. One critic has even suggested that she satisfies "the current American appetite for grotesquerie." Director Robert Altman sees her as being able "to swing all sides of the pendulum: charming, silly, sophisticated, pathetic — even beautiful."

On screen, Shelley has appeared pathetically suspended in motion, yet her characters are hopeful. She is the girl ill-equipped to deal with adversity who somehow manages in a pinch. Here lies the special presence she lends to films. Your feelings rush toward her because she is a recognizable blend of human nature.

Shelley says she likes giving her audience something with which to identify, the silly things in life as well as the more sobering. "We take ourselves very seriously, but there is always a little frailty. We all make mistakes, have little accidents."

Shelley has changed her face, her accent and her posture to accommodate her varied roles. She has donned wigs and dyed her brown hair red. And in some roles her task has been to make herself appear downright unappealing.

Off screen, Shelley is graceful and self-confident, a more mature version of the screen waif. She also is more cosmopolitan, and she seems to be enjoying her success and the privilege it affords. She even appears in gossip columns along with her current love Paul Simon.

When Robert Altman discovered her, however, she was an awkward young woman who never had been outside Texas and who was apparently unaware of the director's maneuverings to size her up.

They met by accident at a party in Houston, where Altman was shooting Brewster McCloud. When he offered Shelley a role in the film, she refused because she was a student. A call came urging her to take a screen test. "I got tired of arguing, and thought maybe I am an actress," recalls Shelley. "They told me to come, and I simply got on a plane [her first] and did it. I was swept away." When she landed, the 20-year-old was in Hollywood with a five-year, three-picture contract.

After the second film for Altman, Shelley settled down to marry a painter. She claims she put notions of a career aside, happy being a housewife, reading novels, caring for animals (still a favorite pastime) and pitching her husband's art. The marriage "just dissipated." They divorced, and Shelley returned to her career.

Shelley was born in Fort Worth, Texas, and raised in Houston. She characterizes herself as something of a loner. She says she passed through adolescense without ever having taken drugs or taken part in other trends of the 60's. In fact, she can't recall a traumatic period of her life.

She attended South Texas Junior College, where she developed an interest in nutrition and studied to be a research scientist.

One character Shelley would like to portray is a woman who has something to overcome and comes to know herself well in the process. Considering the way she has transformed her simple, Texas life, Shelley knows something of this theme firsthand.

"I've never thought about being free because I've never really felt trapped," she says. "The women's movement has never done much for me because I've always thought of myself as free. Sure, my parents were strict, and perhaps I resent a part of my childhood as a result, but in the end, we all make our own decisions. There comes a time when you realize that nobody is going to take care of Number One, like Number One."

Shelley is beginning to apply this philosophy to her career as well as to her personal life. "I'd like to make more money. I don't want all that much, but I like to surround myself with colors I love, with an atmosphere that makes me feel calm, and it takes money to do these things. Of course, I want to be happy, to have something to care about in life — a family, a love, a career, a sense of accomplishment," she continues. "And I think you can be happy just about any place. It's like it says in one of Paul's songs, 'Fifty Ways to Leave a Lover': 'Hop on the bus, Gus.'"

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

HOW MEN RATE WOMEN'S ATTRACTIVENESS

What is the most important part of a lady's face? Does her appeal to a man depend on how attractive he is?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Certain features in a woman's face largely determine how attractive she looks to men.

2. There is much more to a woman's attractiveness than a pretty face and a shapely figure.

3. How attractive a woman appears to a man depends on how attractive he is.

4. How attractive a woman is to a man depends to a large extent on whether they are similar or opposite personality types.

5. A woman who knows how to manipulate a man has the inside track with most men.

6. A man is most likely to remember the face of a woman that has some type of special quality.

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychological studies at Hanover College confirm findings of other investigations showing the mouth region (shape of the lips, etc.) to be the most influential component, followed by the eyes. The hair ranked next in terms of contribution to the facial attractiveness of a woman. The nose was judged next in importance. Overall attractiveness also was influenced by facial structure and complexion.

2. True. As sociologist Andrew M. Greeley concludes from his studies on interpersonal relationships, "Attractiveness is not merely a matter of the arrangement of the features or the dimensions of various sections of the body. . . .Authentic human beauty results from a combination of the physical and the psychic, with one influencing the other. Glamor photographers have observed that after a certain age (they say 25 for most women), attractiveness is based more and more on personality." This is another way of saying that whether a woman is considered beautiful depends largely on the degree to which she develops and provides expression for the most personable qualities of her character.

3. True. In studies at Georgia State University, students rated others for attractiveness on a seven-point scale ranging from "very unattractive" to "very attractive." Results indicated that with male judges their own attractiveness influenced their attractiveness rating of women — and of men, too. It was found that "the less attractive male judges assigned lower attractiveness ratings to people than did the more attractive male judges. . .and that the reference scales of male judges were indeed dependent on their own level of attractiveness." In other words, the better-looking a man is, the more attractive a given woman appears to him.

4. True. Studies at Kent State University showed that extroverts preferred someone similar to themselves in personality. With introverts, however, the opposite was found to be true, the results showing "that introverts prefer dissimilarity to similarity." So whether a woman will be considered attractive by someone who is like her in temperament is likely to depend on whether the gentleman is an introvert or an extrovert.

5. False. A University of Delaware study has shown that, though women who are successful as manipulators — who are ruled to a far greater extent by their heads than by their hearts — are likely to "win" in competitive situations in which they are vying with others for various material goals, they do not have an advantage where romantic attraction is concerned. On the contrary, men were found to be more attracted to women who were characterized as frank, open, natural and spontaneous and who didn't go in for "playing games" or pursuing Machiavellian tactics to gain their ends.

6. True. Pennsylvania State University investigators cite findings indicating that women's faces with distinctive features are best remembered — regardless of whether the person is attractive or plain. Most forgettable face: the one that looks like everybody else.

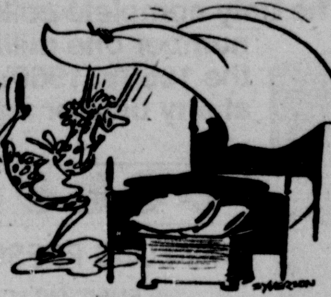
ARMOUR'S ARMORY



I'M NOT MAKING THIS UP

At making up beds,
I'm happy to state,
My wife is quite good
In fact she's first rate.
She smooths out the sheets,
Then she does it once more,
She picks up the blankets
That slid to the floor,
She straightens the quilt
Till it no longer billows,
With one final touch
She then fluffs up the pillows.
Wives come, I suppose,
In many a kind:
Mine can make up a bed
But can't make up her mind.

A cowboy with nothing to do ambled into the local blacksmith shop and picked up a horseshoe without realizing that it had just come from the forge. Instantly, he dropped the hot shoe, shoved his seared hand into his pocket and tried to appear nonchalant.

"Kinda hot, wasn't it?" said the blacksmith.

"Nope," replied the cowpoke. "Just don't take me long to look at a horseshoe."

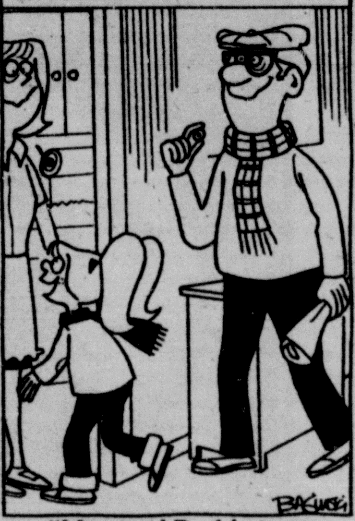
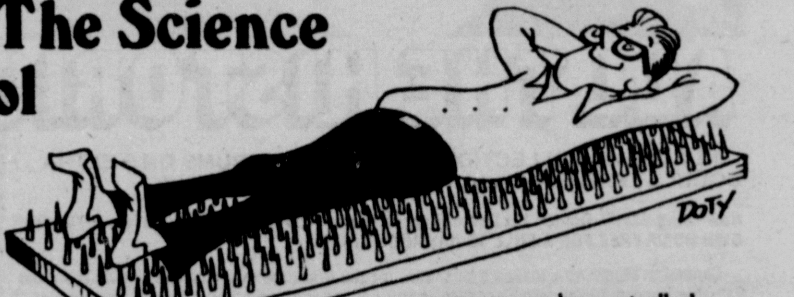
LITTLE EMILY



"Mommy! Daddy just bought a new washer for the kitchen."

THE DOCTOR AND YOU

Biofeedback: The Science Of Self-Control



Now medicine is borrowing from the gurus. For years, the West has heard about people in India who could walk on coals without being burned, sleep on a bed of nails and control their bodies in other unusual ways. Most people dismissed all this as bunk, but lately doctors have begun to take a second look. That magic may have some useful truth in it after all.

In 1970 a report from the Menninger Clinic in Kansas told of work with an Indian swami who seemed able to speed up and slow down his heart rate at will. He could even change the pattern his brain produced on a brain-wave machine. The swami thus showed he had control over his autonomic nervous system (which governs involuntary action), a part of the body that textbooks then claimed was free of mind control.

This technique is called biofeedback. Feedback is a term from mathematics and physical science. It is a method of controlling a system by feeding back into it information about what is going on. (The home thermostat is a feedback device. It reports the temperature in the house to the heating system, which in turn sends up more heat for low temperature and turns on the air-conditioning if the thermostat says the home is too warm.)

People can learn to use biofeedback information to control their own actions. In fact, much of our learning is done through biofeedback. We learn to push a button to ring a doorbell and to stop when someone answers. We learn to drink when we feel thirsty and to stop when we feel full. Now biofeedback is coming into use for treatment of disease.

Tension can be controlled by biofeedback. A sensor, like a thermostat, is fastened over a muscle. The sensor notes when the muscle is tight and reports that tenseness to the patient by a light or a buzzer. When the light goes on or the buzzer sounds, the muscle is tight. The objective is for the patient to find a state of repose so that his muscles relax and the biofeedback sensor does not report tightness in the muscle. With training, many people can learn to relax by this method. Backache, headache and other conditions related to muscle spasms can be controlled.

The same system can be used to lower blood pressure. This time the sensor reports skin temperature. When the skin temperature goes up, the blood pressure goes down because blood pressure is inversely related to the circulation to the skin. So, by fastening a thermometer to the skin and using a red light to report rise in skin temperature and a green light to report its fall, the biofeedback system can train a patient to lower his blood pressure by increasing the circulation to the skin.

There is no magic cue for controlling the body's responses. Everyone has to learn to do it his own way. The gadgets merely point the way, indicating when the goal of relaxation or rise in skin temperature has been met. It is up to each person to identify and reproduce that state of mind and body that gives the useful result. Biofeedback is not a miracle cure, but it is certainly a powerful tool.

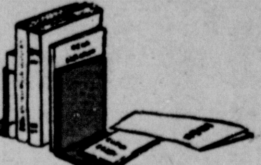
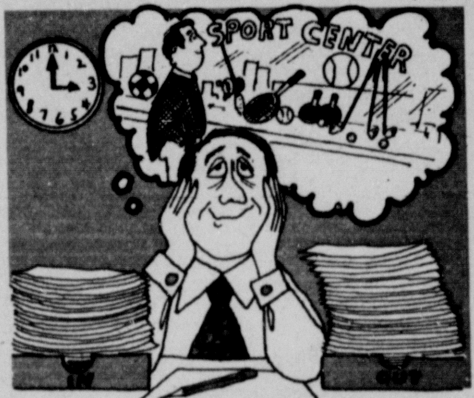
WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Booklets For You and Your Family

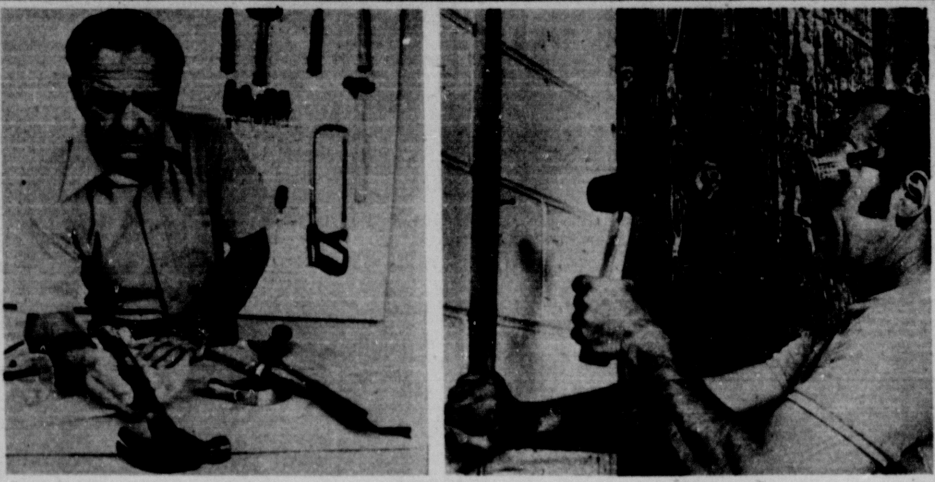


Winter: watching your breath mist in front of your face, sloshing in your waterlogged boots, hearing your car sputter and die in the morning. To help you weather the punishment winter can dish out, take a look at these inexpensive Government booklets. Request the booklet by title and number from: Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009 and allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery. The Common Cold: Relief But No Cure (642E. Free): Effectiveness of various cough, cold, allergy and asthma remedies; includes labeling information. Flu (129E. 35¢): Causes, prevention, symptoms and treatment. Winter Driving Tips (509E. Free): Enough said. Home Heating (058E. 45¢): Installation, operation, maintenance and costs of the most commonly used heating systems.



Energy Crisis

Do you start dragging around 3:00 P.M., when it seems that dinnertime will never come? A few simple changes in your schedule may provide the pick-me-up you need. "A lot of people feel worn-out late in the afternoon because they feel there is nothing to look forward to," says Dr. Herbert Hoffman, director of the Hillside Psychological Guidance Center in Queens Village, N.Y. "They think that they'll just go home, watch a little TV and then go to bed and be back at work in the morning." Dr. Hoffman says that most people put off "having fun" until the weekend, which "makes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday pretty hard to get through." Planning something enjoyable to do after work, such as a movie, window-shopping or a pleasant walk, will help you get out of your rut. Another way of avoiding an afternoon letdown is to pace yourself better during the working day (whether it's office work or housework), doing those tasks that require the most concentration or effort early in the day and saving the more routine tasks for later. Dieters have special energy problems; they may skip breakfast and make up for it by eating a heavy lunch, which makes them lethargic. It's better to relax by eating a leisurely, but light sit-down lunch and turning to snacks such as fruit for an afternoon pickup.

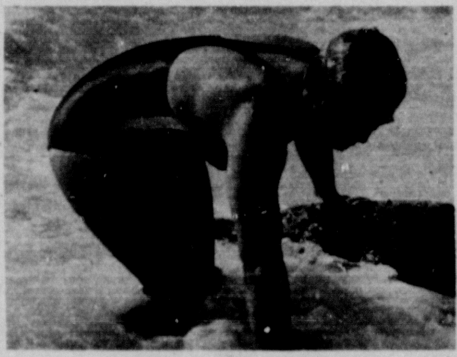


Tool Tips

Buying tools doesn't make you a handyman (or woman) — unless you know how to use them. If you're a new do-it-yourselfer, here are some tips on tool maintenance that will help you work more effectively and avoid injuries. All tools should be regularly checked for hazardous conditions created by wear. The striking face of the tool should be smooth and free of cracks, dents and mushrooming. If the tool shows these signs of damage, it's time to get a replacement. However, if only the handle has been damaged, it can be replaced. Tools are less likely to become damaged if stored properly, and hanging tools on the wall is preferable to box storage, where they will knock against one another. When using a hammer, strike only with the face and not the flat side, which hasn't been hardened to resist blows. Sand away any rough spots or splinters on the handle and coat it with shellac. Saws should be kept sharp and rust-free. A triangular saw file will let you touch up the teeth when they show signs of dullness and space out time between professional sharpenings. Keep the blade clean with steel wool and some kerosene or a commercial rust remover. And always protect your eyes with goggles.

Makeup Tips For Contact-Lens Wearers

If you're a new contact-lens wearer, you're probably eager to show off your eyes. But before you reach for the mascara, there are a few tips to help keep your lenses in top condition. Hard-lens wearers may prefer putting in lenses after makeup is set as the lens can pop out if the eyelid is pulled smooth to apply eye shadow or liner. Even the light pressure of the applicator can cause lid discomfort. The manufacturer that first introduced soft contacts says they should be put in before makeup because the oily substances in creams and lotions absorb into fingers and could smudge lenses. Pencil eyeliner can be used above the upper and below the lower lashes, but avoid using eyeliner on the inner margins of eyelids. Work in a clean, well-lighted area that is safe enough for a dropped lens. For example, if you make up over the bathroom sink, close or cover the drain. Hair and perfume sprays should be used before the lenses are put in — if used afterwards, close eyes and move away from the area until the spray settles. Something else to consider is the tendency of eyeglass wearers to wear heavier eye makeup. So, less might be better for your new look.



In The Swim

For almost 9 hours, Bellflower, Calif., high-school senior Mary Beth Colpo battled chilly, shark-frequented waters as she tried to set a speed record for the 21-mile swim from Santa Catalina Island to the Calif. mainland. Her time of 8 hours, 43 minutes and 16 seconds broke the women's record for the swim by more than 2 hours and bettered the fastest men's time by 6 minutes. Seventeen-year-old Mary Beth had set her mind to the swim several months earlier, when she began an 8-18 mile-a- day training program. Senior-class president with a 3.85 average, Mary Beth hopes to attend UCLA to become a physical therapist — and to keep swimming, which she describes as a "natural high."

Quick Takes

If your feet are cold, maybe you should put on a hat. At least that's the advice of specialists at Cornell Univ.'s Cooperative Extension division. They say that up to ¾ of the heat generated by the body is lost through the head area, so when the head is covered, heat saved can be redirected to other parts of the body, like cold feet or hands. Now that's using your head.... While we're on the subject of heads, a survey of musicians' scholastic achievement by a national rock magazine reports that jazz musicians are the educational elite, averaging 2 more years of schooling than singers and songwriters. The magazine also says that scholastic achievement is reflected in musical styles; instrumentation tends to be more complex among performers who either scored well on their SAT tests or completed college. They also tune their instruments faster....Boston may be a great place to visit, but you wouldn't want to drive there. The Automobile Legal Assoc. says that insurance rates have made Boston the most expensive city in the country in which to drive a full-sized car. Bostonians pay an average of 23.63 cents a mile to operate a full-sized 1977 car, compared with the national average of 17.08 cents a mile....The Federal Government is investigating a missing-food problem — what happened to the nutrition in school lunches. A General Accounting Office survey of meals served to public-school students across the country reports that the lunches fell up to 50% short of Federal nutrition standards. The lunches are flunking the taste test, too — students tossed out 46.6% of their vegetables and 25.4% of their fruit. ...What do kids like to chew? Bubble gum! Putting their money where their mouths are, gum-snappers spent almost $56 million on their habit last year.

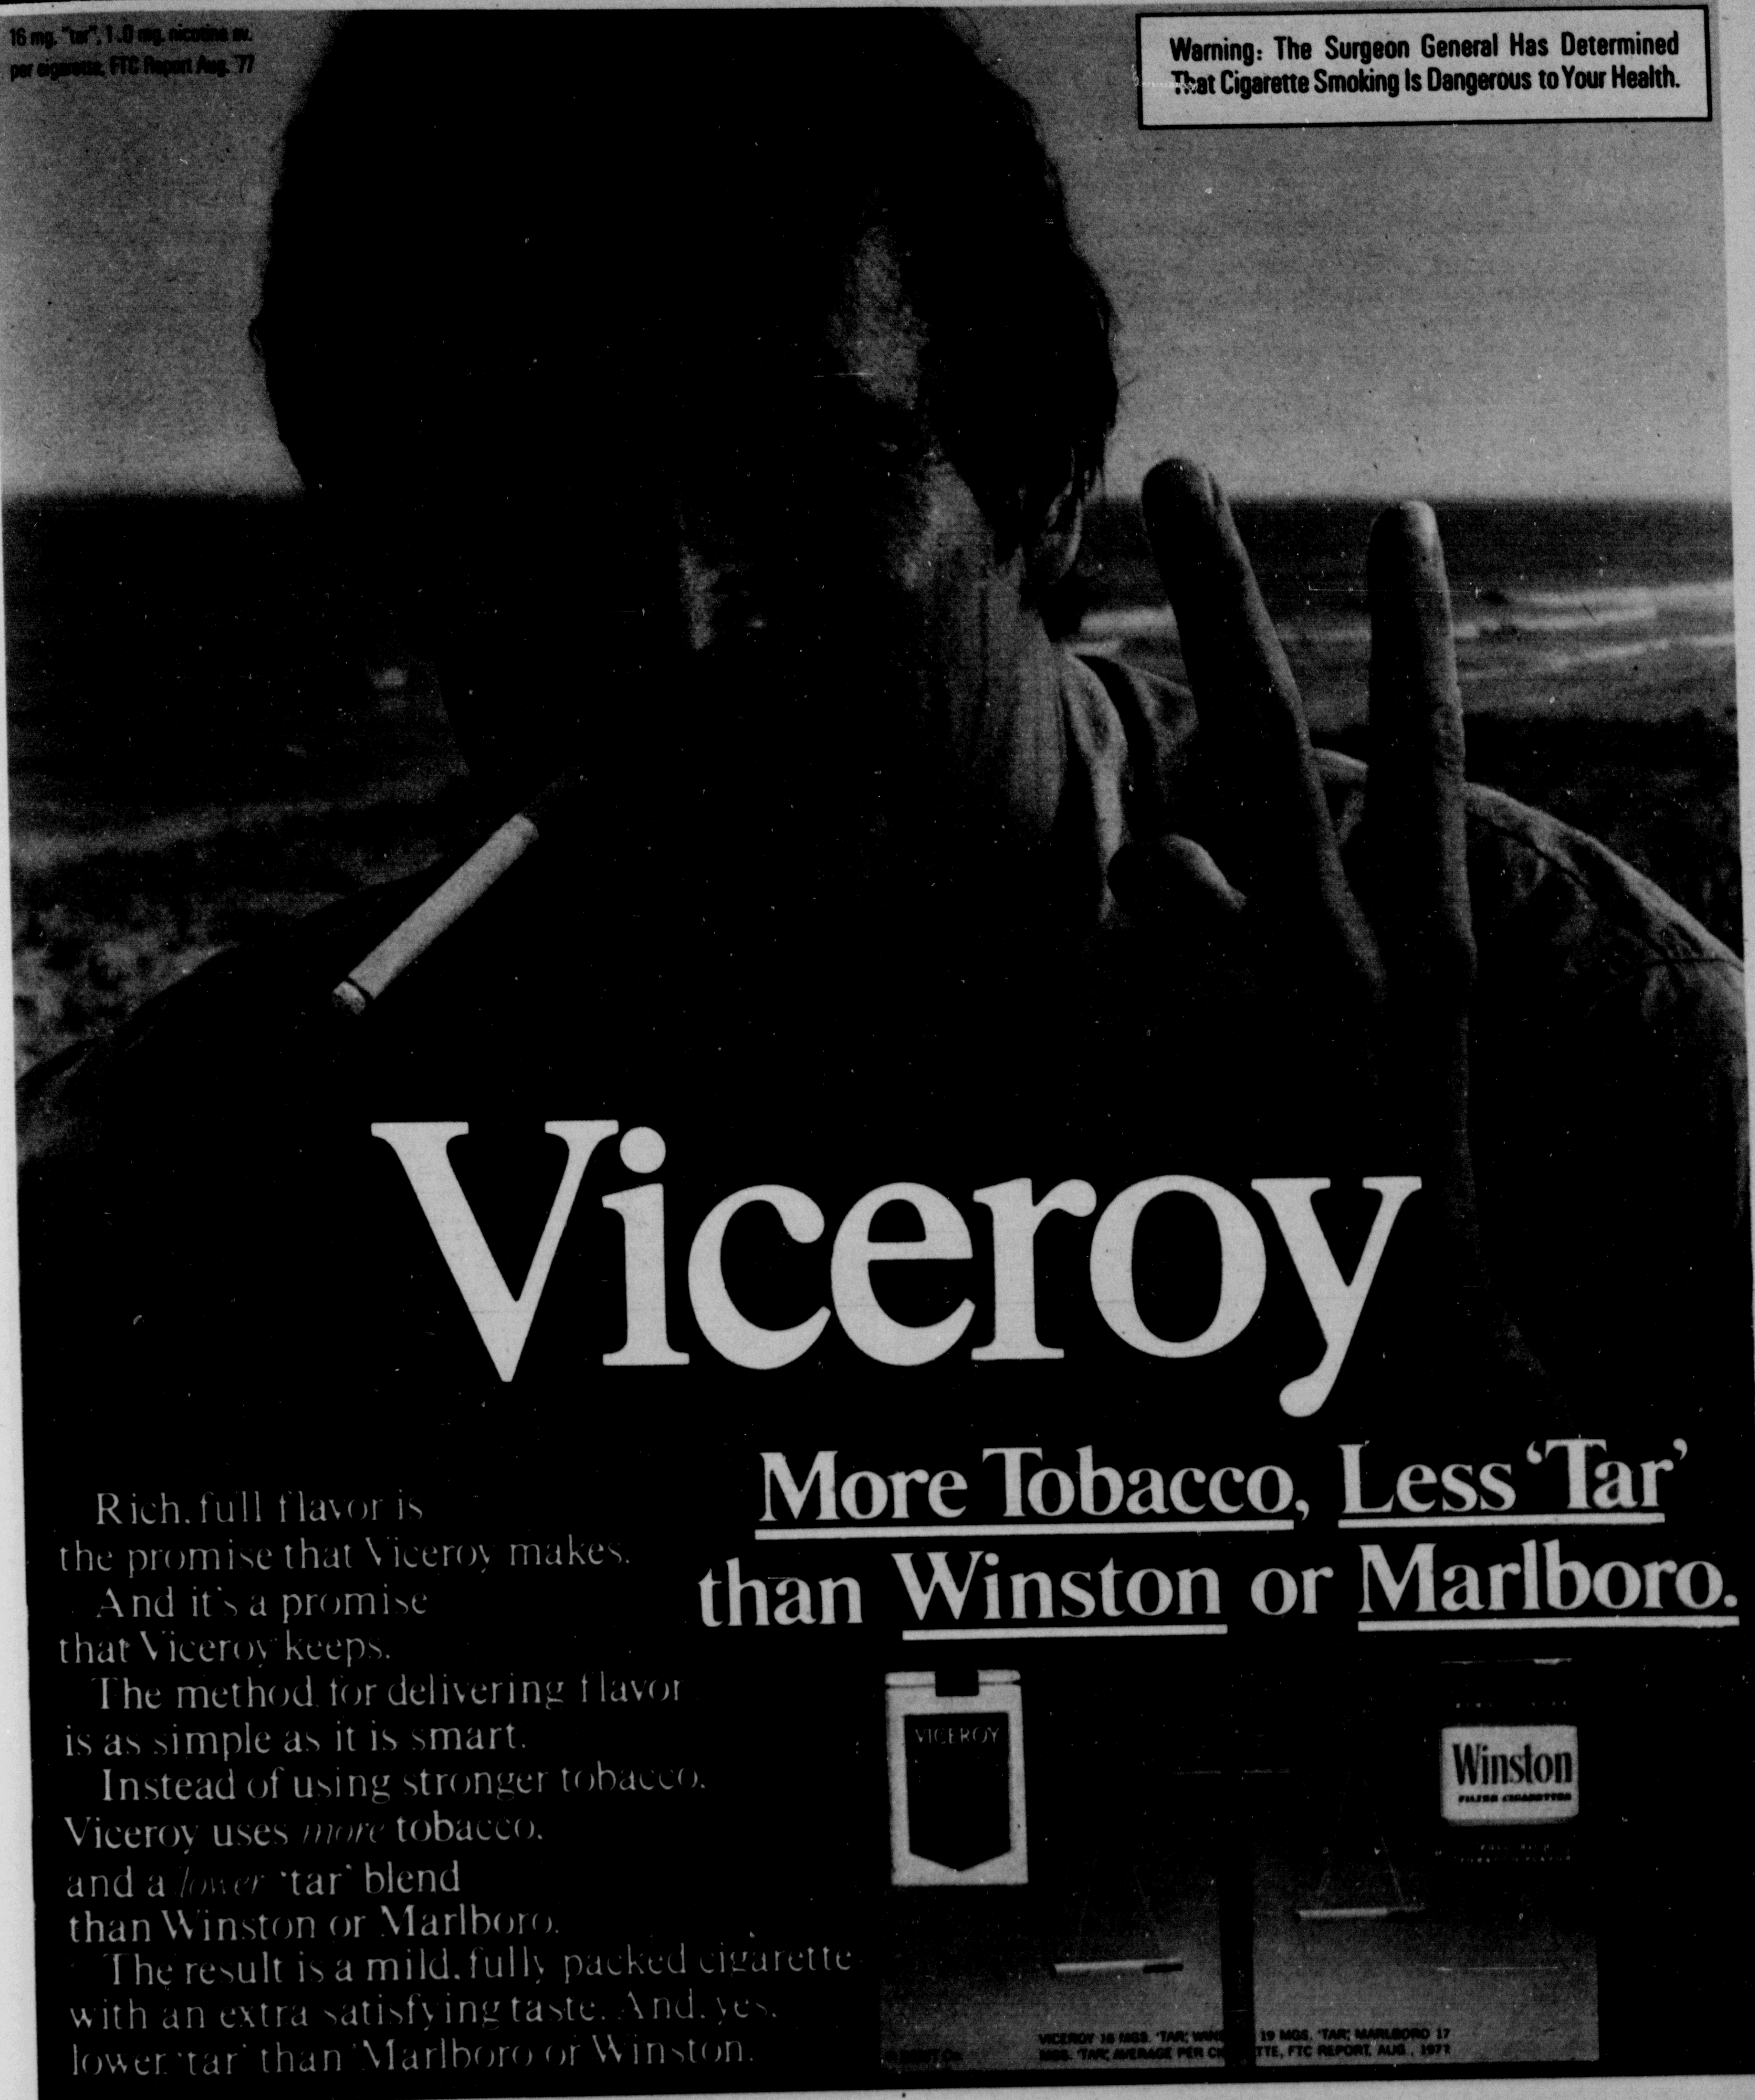
per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. '77

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.



Viceroy

More Tobacco, Less 'Tar' than Winston or Marlboro.

Rich, full flavor is the promise that Viceroy makes.

And it's a promise that Viceroy keeps.

The method for delivering flavor is as simple as it is smart.

Instead of using stronger tobacco, Viceroy uses more tobacco, and a lower 'tar' blend than Winston or Marlboro.

The result is a mild, fully packed cigarette with an extra satisfying taste. And, yes, lower 'tar' than Marlboro or Winston.

VICEROY 16 MGS. 'TAR,' WIN[illegible] 19 MGS. 'TAR,' MARLBORO 17 MGS. 'TAR,' AVERAGE PER CI[illegible]TTE, FTC REPORT, AUG., 1977

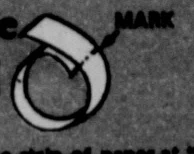
How to Find Your Ring Size

RING SIZES — LADIES 5—10
MENS 7—13



1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.
